Which my lord paid for, be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.

SCENE II.

A public Street.

Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

¹ Siran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours, now lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fye, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

² Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents; nay, urg'd extremely for't, and shew'd what necessity belong'd to't, and yet was deny'd.

Luc. How?

² Stran. I tell you, deny'd, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! Now, before the gods, I am asham'd on't. Deny'd that honourable man? there was very little honour shew'd in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have receiv'd some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have deny'd his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Serv. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour.—My honour'd lord,—

[To Lucius.

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well:—Commend me to thy honourable-virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Serv. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what hath he sent? I am so much endear'd to that lord; he's ever sending; How shall I thank him, think'st thou? And what has he sent now?

Serv. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know, his lordship is but merry with me; he cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Serv. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous⁴,
I should not urge it half so faithfully⁵.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Serv. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfurnish myself against such a good time, when I might have shewn myself honourable? how unluckily it happen'd, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour⁶!—Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to do't; the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness, but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and, I hope, his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind:—And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable Gentleman. Good

the meaning is, By purchasing what brought me but little honour, I have lost the more honourable opportunity of supplying the wants of my friend.

⁵ Alluding to the turning or acescence ⁶ Faithfully, for fervently.

Servilius, will you befriend me so far, as to use my own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius.—

[Exit Servilius.]

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk, indeed;
And he, that's once deny'd, will hardly speed.

[Exit.]

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

2 Stran. Ay, too well.

1 Stran. Why, this is the world's sport;
And just of the same piece is every flatterer's soul.
Who can call him his friend,
That dips in the same dish? for, in my knowing,
Timon has been this lord's father,
And kept his credit with his purse!
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks,
But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, (O, see the monstrousness of man,
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!)
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars¹.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

1 Stran. For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him²,
So much I love his heart; But I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense;
For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Sempronius's House.

Enter Sempronius, with a Servant of Timon's.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't? Hum!

'Boye all others?

He might have try'd lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: All these Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord, [tal; for]
They have all been touch'd³, and found base me—
They have all deny'd him!

Sem. How! have they deny'd him?

Have Ventidius and Lucullus deny'd him?

And does he send to me? Three? hum!—

It shews but little love or judgement in him.

Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,

Thrive, give him over⁴; Must I take the cure upon
He has much disgrac'd me in't; I am angry at him,
That might have known my place: I see no sense
for't,

But his occasions might have woo'd me first;

For, in my conscience, I was the first man

That e'er received gift from him:

And does he think so backwardly of me now,

15 That I'll requite it last? No:

So it may prove an argument of laughter

To the rest, and I'mongst lords be thought a fool.

I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,

He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;

20 I had such a courage⁵ to do him good. But now return,

And with their faint reply this answer join;

Who bates mine honour, shall not know my coin.

[Exit.]

25 Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did, when he made man politick; he cross'd himself by't: and I cannot think, but, in the end, the villainies of man will set him clear⁶. How fairly this lord 30 strives to appear foul! take virtuous copies⁷ to be wicked; like those, that, under hot ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire.

Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled,

35 Save only the gods: Now his friends are dead,

Doors that were ne'er acquainted with their wards

Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd

Now to guard sure their master.

And this is all a liberal course allows;

40 Who cannot keep his wealth, must keep his house⁸.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.

Timon's Hall.

45 Enter Varro, Titus, Hortensius, Lucius, and other Servants of Timon's Creditors, who wait for his coming out.

Var. Well met: good morrow, Titus, and Hortensius.

² That is, I would have treated my wealth as a present originally received from him, and on this occasion have return'd him the half of that whole for which I supposed myself to be indebted to his bounty.

³ i. e. tried, alluding to the touchstone.

⁴ That is, "His friends, like physicians, thrive by his bounty and fees, and either relinquish, and forsake him, or give his case up as desperate." To give over has no reference to the irremediable condition of a patient, but simply means to leave, to forsake, to quit.

⁵ i. e. I had such an ardour, such an eager desire.

⁶ Set him clear does not mean, acquit him before heaven; but it signifies, puzzle him, outdo him at his own weapons. And the meaning of the passage is, "If the devil made men politic, he has thwarted his own interest, because the superior cunning of man will at last puzzle him, or be above the reach of his temptations."

⁷ This is a reflection on the puritans of that time. These people were then set upon a project of new-modelling the ecclesiastical and civil government according to Scripture rules and examples; which makes him say, that under zeal for the word of God, they would set whole realms on fire. So Sempronius pretended to that warm affection and generous jealousy of friendship, that is affronted, if any other be applied to before it.

⁸ i. e. keep within doors for fear of duns.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. Lucius?

What, do we meet together?

Luc. Ay, and, I think,
One business does command us all; for mine
Is money.

Tit. So is theirs, and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Luc. And sir Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Welcome, good brother. What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine.

Luc. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Not yet. [seven.]

Phi. I wonder on't; he was wont to shine at

Luc. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him:

You must consider, that a prodigal's course
Is like the sun's¹; but not, like his, recoverable.
I fear,

'Tis deepest winter in lord Timon's purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet
Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that. [event,

Tit. I'll shew you how to observe a strange
Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,
For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Mark, how strange it shows,
Timon in this should pay more than he owes:
And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels,
And send for money for 'em. [witness:

Hor. I am weary of this charge², the gods can
I know, my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

Var. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns: What's yours?

Luc. Five thousand mine. [the sum,

Var. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by
Your master's confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equal'd³.

Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of lord Timon's men.

Luc. Flaminius! sir, a word: Pray, is my lord
Ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not. [much.

Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify so

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit Flaminius.

Enter Flavius in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?
He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

Var. By your leave, sir,—

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav. Ay, if money were as certain as your waiting,

'Twere sure enough.

Why then preferr'd you not your sums and bills,
When your false masters eat of my lord's meat?

Then they would smile and fawn upon his debts,
And take down the interest in their gluttonous

maws;

You do yourselves but wrong, to stir me up;

Let me pass quietly:

Believe't, my lord and I have made an end;

I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 't will not serve, 'tis not so base as you:
For you serve knaves. [Exit.

Var. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter?

Tit. No matter what; he's poor. [broader

And that's revenge enough. Who can speak
Than he that has no house to put his head in?

Such may rail 'gainst great buildings.

Enter Servilius.

Tit. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know
Some answer.

Serv. If I might beseech you, gentlemen,
To repair some other hour, I should

Derive much from it: for take it on my soul,

My lord leans wond'rously to discontent:

His comfortable temper has forsook him;

He is much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick;

And, if he be so far beyond his health,

Methinks, he should the sooner pay his debts,

And make a clear way to the gods.

Serv. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord!
my lord!

Enter Timon, in a rage.

Tim. What, are my doors oppos'd against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house

Be my retentive enemy, my jail?

The place, which I have feasted, does it now,
Like all mankind, shew me an iron heart?

Luc. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Here's mine.

Var. And mine, my lord.

Caph. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em⁴, cleave to the girdle.

Luc. Alas, my lord,—

² i. e. of this commission.

³ His may refer to mine; as if he had said: Your master's confidence was above my master's; else surely his, i. e. the sum demanded from my master (for that is the last antecedent) had been equal to the sum demanded from yours.

⁴ Timon quibbles.—They present their written bills; he catches at the word, and alludes to the bills, or battle-axes, which the ancient soldiery carried, and were still used by the watch in Shakspeare's time.

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.—

What yours?—and yours?

1 Var. My lord,—

2 Var. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you!

Hor. Faith, I perceive, our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may be well call'd desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em.

[Exeunt.]

Re-enter Timon, and Flavius.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves:

Creditors!—devils.

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so:—My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again, Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius, all; I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord, You only speak from your distracted soul; There is not so much left, to furnish out A moderate table.

Tim. Be it not in thy care: go, I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

The Senate-house.

Senators, and Alcibiades.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to 't; the fault's bloody;

'Tis necessary, he should die:

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise 'em.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the

1 Sen. Now, captain? [senate!]

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues; For pity is the virtue of the law, And none but tyrants use it cruelly.

It pleases time and fortune, to lie heavy Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood, Hath stept into the law, which is past depth To those that, without heed, do plunge into it. He is a man, setting his fate¹ aside, Of comely virtues:

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice; (An honour in him, which buys out his fault;) But with a noble fury, and fair spirit, Seeing his reputation touch'd to death, He did oppose his foe:

And with such sober and unnoted² passion He did behave³ his anger ere 'twas spent, As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox⁴, Striving to make an ugly deed look fair: Your words have took such pains, as if they labour'd To bring man-slaughter into form, and set quarrelling

Upon the head of valour; which, indeed, Is valour misbegot, and came into the world When sects and factions were newly born: He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer The worst that man can breathe: and make his wrongs [lessly;

His outsides; to wear them like his raiment, care- And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart, To bring it into danger. If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill, What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill?

20 Alcib. My lord,—

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear; To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me, If I speak like a captain.—

25 Why do fond men expose themselves to battle, And not endure all threats? sleep upon it, And let the foes quietly cut their throats, Without repugnancy? If there be

Such valour in the bearing, what make we 30 Abroad⁵? why then, women are more valiant, That stay at home, if bearing carry it; The ass, more captain than the lion; and the fellow, Loaden with irons, wiser than the judge, If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords, 35 As you are great; be pitifully good: Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood? To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust⁶; But, in defence, by mercy⁷, 'tis most just. To be in anger, is impiety;

40 But who is man, that is not angry? Weigh but the crime with this.

2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain? his service done At Lacedæmon, and Byzantium, 45 Were a sufficient briber for his life.

1 Sen. What's that? [service,

Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, he has done fair And slain in fight many of your enemies: How full of valour did he bear himself

50 In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds? 2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em; he Is sworn a rioter; he has a sin [soner: That often drowns him, and takes his valour pri- If there were no foes, that were enough

55 To overcome him: in that beastly fury He has been known to commit outrages, And cherish factions: 'Tis inferr'd to us, His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.

1 Sen. He dies.

¹ i. e. putting this action of his, which was pre-determined by fate, out of the question. ² Un-noted passion means, perhaps, an uncommon command of his passion, such a one as has not hitherto been observed. ³ i. e. manage his anger. ⁴ You undertake a paradox too hard. ⁵ i. e.

What have we to do in the field? ⁶ Gust, for aggravation, according to Warburton.—Mr.
Steevens thinks that gust here means rashness, and that the allusion may be to a sudden gust of wind. ⁷ The meaning is, I call mercy herself to witness, that defensive violence is just.

Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.
My lords, if not for any parts in him, [time,
(Though his right arm might purchase his own
And be in debt to none) yet, more to move you,
Take my deserts to his, and join 'em both:
And, for I know, your reverend ages love
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all
My honours to you, upon his good returns.
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receive 't in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

1 Sen. We are for law, he dies; urge it no more,
On height of our displeasure: Friend, or brother,
He forfeits his own blood, that spills another.

Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords, 15
I do beseech you, know me.

2 Sen. How?

Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.

3 Sen. What?

Alcib. I cannot think, but your age has forgot me, 20
It could not else be, I should prove so base¹,
To sue, and be deny'd such common grace:
My wounds ake at you.

1 Sen. Do you dare our anger?
'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish me?

Banish your dotage; banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly. [thee,

1 Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain 30
Attend our weightier judgement.

And, not to swell our spirit²,
He shall be executed presently. [Exeunt Senate.

Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough;
that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on you!
I am worse than mad: I have kept back their foes,
While they have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest; I myself,
Rich only in large hurts.—All those, for this? 40
Is this the balsam, that the usuring senate
Pours into captains' wounds? Ha! banishment?
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd:
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up 45
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts³.
'Tis honour, with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers as little should brook wrongs, as gods.

[Exit.

SCENE VI.

Timon's House.

Enter divers Senators, at several doors.

1 Sen. The good time of day to you, sir.

2 Sen. I also wish it to you. I think, this ho- 55 nourable lord did but try us this other day.

1 Sen. Upon that were my thoughts tiring⁴, when we encountered: I hope, it is not so low with him, as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends. 60

2 Sen. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

1 Sen. I should think so: He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjur'd me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2 Sen. In like manner was I in debt to my im-portunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1 Sen. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Sen. Every man here's so. What would he have borrow'd of you?

1 Sen. A thousand pieces.

2 Sen. A thousand pieces!

1 Sen. What of you?

3 Sen. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter Timon, and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both:—
And how fare you?

1 Sen. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

2 Sen. The swallow follows not summer more willingly, than we your lordship. 25

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men.—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay:
feast your ears with the musick awhile; if they will fare so harshly as on the trumpet's sound:
we shall to 't presently.

1 Sen. I hope, it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I return'd you an empty messenger.

Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Sen. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah, my good friend! what cheer?

[The banquet brought in.

2 Sen. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on 't, sir.

2 Sen. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remem-—Come, bring in all together. [brance.

2 Sen. All cover'd dishes!

1 Sen. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

3 Sen. Doubt not that, if money, and the season can yield it.

1 Sen. How do you? What's the news?

3 Sen. Alcibiades is banish'd: Hear you of it?

Both. Alcibiades banish'd!

3 Sen. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

1 Sen. How? how?

2 Sen. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

3 Sen. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

2 Sen. This is the old man still.

3 Sen. Will't hold? will't hold?

2 Sen. It does: but time will—and so—

² Not to swell our spirit, may mean, not to put ourselves into any tumour of rage, take our definitive resolution.

³ i. e. the affections of the people.

⁴ A hawk is said to tire, when she amuses herself with pecking a pheasant's wing, or any thing that puts her in mind of prey.—To tire upon a thing, is therefore to be idly employed upon it.

3 Sen. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: Sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves prais'd: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despis'd. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: If there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be as they are.—The rest of your fees¹, O gods,—the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends,—as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome. Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes uncovered, are full of warm water.

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and luke-warm water

Is your perfection². This is Timon's last;

Who stuck and spangled you with flatteries,

Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

[Throwing water in their faces.]

Your reeking villainy. Live loath'd, and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies³,
5 Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks⁴!
Of man and beast, the infinite malady⁵

Crust you quite o'er!—What, dost thou go?

Soft, take thy physic first,—thou too,—and thou:

[Throws the dishes at them.]

10 Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.—

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast,

Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.

Burn house; sink Athens; henceforth hated be

Of Timon, man, and all humanity! [Exit.]

Re-enter the Senators.

1 Sen. How now, my lords? [fury?]

2 Sen. Know you the quality of lord Timon's

3 Sen. Pish! did you see my cap?

4 Sen. I have lost my gown.

1 Sen. He's but a mad lord; and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat:

—Did you see my jewel?

2 Sen. Did you see my cap?

3 Sen. Here 'tis.

4 Sen. Here lies my gown.

1 Sen. Let's make no stay.

2 Sen. Lord Timon's mad.

3 Sen. I feel't upon my bones.

4 Sen. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones.

[Exeunt.]

A C T IV.

SCENE I.

Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter Timon.

LET me look back upon thee, O thou wall,
That girdlest in those wolves! Dive in the earth,

And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent;

Obedience fail in children! slaves, and fools,

Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,

And minister in their steads! to general filths

Convert o' the instant, green virginity!

Do't in your parents' eyes! bankrupts, hold fast:

Rather than render back, out with your knives,

And cut your trusters' throats! bound servants,
steal;

Large-handed robbers your grave masters are,

And pill by law! maid, to thy master's bed;

'Thy mistress is o' the brothel! son of sixteen,

Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping sire,

With it beat out his brains! piety, and fear,

Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,

Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood,

Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades,

45 Degrees, observances, customs, and laws,

Decline to your confounding contraries,

And yet confusion live! Plagues, incident to men,

Your potent and infectious fevers heap

On Athens, ripe for stroke! thou cold sciatica,

50 Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt

As lamely as their manners! lust and liberty

Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth;

That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,

And drown themselves in riot! itches, blains,

55 Sow all the Athenian bosoms; and their crop

Be general leprosy! breath infect breath;

That their society, as their friendship, may

Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee,

But nakedness, thou detestable town!

60 Take thou that too, with multiplying banns!

¹ Dr. Warburton thinks we should read foes.

² i. e. the highest of your excellence.
³ i. e. a minute-jack is what was called formerly a Jack of the clock-house; an image whose office was the same as one of those at St. Dunstan's church in Fleet-street.—See note ¹, p. 658.

⁴ i. e. every kind of disease incident to man and beast.

Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.
The gods confound (hear me you, good gods all)
The Athenians both within and out that wall!
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of mankind, high and low!
Amen. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Timon's House.

Enter Flavius, with two or three Servants.

1 Serv. Hear you, master steward, where is our master?

Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?

Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you?

Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.

1 Serv. Such a house broke!

So noble a master fallen! All gone! and not
One friend, to take his fortune by the arm,
And go along with him!

2 Serv. As we do turn our backs
From our companion, thrown into his grave;
So his familiars from his buried fortunes
Slink all away; leave their false vows with him,
Like empty purses pick'd: and his poor self,
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone.—More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.

3 Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery,
That see I by our faces; we are fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow: Leak'd is our bark;
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck,
Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake,
Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and say,

As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
'We have seen better days.' Let each take some;
[Giving them money.]

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more:
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

[Exeunt Servants.]

O, the fierce¹ wretchedness that glory brings us!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to misery and contempt?
Who'd be so mock'd with glory? or to live
But in a dream of friendship?

To have his pomp, and all what state compounds,
But only painted, like his varnish'd friends?
Poor honest lord, brought low by his own heart;
Undone by goodness! Strange, unusual blood²,
5 When man's worst sin is, he does too much good!
Who then dares to be half so kind again?
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.
My dearest lord,—blest to be most accurs'd,
Rich, only to be wretched;—thy great fortunes
10 Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas! kind lord!
He's flung in rage from this ungrateful seat
Of monstrous friends: nor has he with him to Supply his life, or that which can command it.
I'll follow, and enquire him out:
15 I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.

The Woods.

Enter Timon.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth

25 Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb³
Infect the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb,
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarce is dividant,—touch them with several fortunes:

30 The greater scorns the lesser: Not nature, [tune,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great for-
But by contempt of nature⁴.

Raise me this beggar, and denude that lord;
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,

35 The beggar native honour.

It is the pastor lards the brother's sides,
The want that makes him leave⁵. Who dares, who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright,
40 And say, 'This man's a flatterer?' if one be,
So are they all; for every grize⁶ of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: All is oblique;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures,
45 But direct villainy. Therefore, be abhorr'd
All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!

His semb'able, yea, himself, Timon disdains:
Destruction fang⁷ mankind!—Earth, yield me roots! [Digging the earth.]

50 Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate
With thy most operant poison! What is here?
Gold? yellow, glittering, precious, gold? No,
gods,

I am no idle votarist⁸: Roots, you clear heavens⁹!
55 Thus much of this, will make black, white; foul, fair; [valiant.]

² Strange, unusual blood may mean, strange unusual disposition. ³ That is, the moon's, this sublunary world. ⁴ Dr. Johnson explains this passage thus: "Brother, when his fortune is enlarged, will scorn brother; for this is the general depravity of human nature, which, besieged as it is by misery, admonished as it is of want and imperfection, when elevated by fortune, will despise beings of nature like its own."

⁵ That is, It is the pastour that greases or flatters the rich brother, and will grease him on till want make him leave. ⁶ Grize for step or degree. ⁷ i. e. seize, gripe. ⁸ i. e. no insincere or inconstant supplicant. Gold will not serve me instead of roots.

⁹ This may mean either ye cloudless skies, or ye deities exempt from guilt.

Ha, you gods! why this? Why this, you gods?

Why, this [sides;

Will lug your priests and servants from your

Pluck stout men's pillows from below their

This yellow slave [heads¹:

Will knit and break religions; bless the accurs'd;

Make the hoar leprosy ador'd; place thieves,

And give them title, knee, and approbation,

With senators on the bench; this is it,

That makes the wappen'd² widow wed again;

She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores

Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices

To the April-day again³. Come, damned earth,

Thou common whore of mankind, that put'st odds

Among the rout of nations, I will make thee

Do thy right nature⁴.—[March afar off.—Ha!

a drum?—Thou'rt quick⁵,

But yet I'll bury thee: Thou'lt go, strong thief,

When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:—

Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Keeping some gold.

Enter Alcibiades, with drum and fife, in warlike manner, and Phrynia and Tymandra.

Alcib. What art thou there? speak. [heart,

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy

For shewing me again the eyes of man!

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,

That art thyself a man?

Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,

That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well;

But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more, than that I know thee,

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum:

With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules:

Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;

Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine

Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,

For all her cherubin look.

Phry. Thy lips rot off!

Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns

To thine own lips again.

Alc. How came the noble Timon to this change?

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give;

But then renew I could not, like the moon;

There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon,

What friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to Maintain my opinion.

Alcib. What is it, Timon?

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none:

Thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for

Thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound

thee,

For thou art a man!

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Tyman. Is this the Athenian minion, whom the Voic'd so regardfully?

Tim. Art thou Tymandra?

Tyman. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still! they love thee not, that use thee;

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.

Make use of thy salt hours; season the slaves

For tubs, and baths; bring down rose-checked

youth,

To the tub-fast⁶, and the diet.

Tyman. Hang thee, monster!

Alc. Pardon him, sweet Tymandra; for his wits

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.—

I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,

The want whereof doth daily make revolt

In my penurious band: I have heard, and griev'd,

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth,

Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them,—

Tim. I pr'ythee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.

Alc. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him, whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well:

Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it.

Alc. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—

Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest; and

I'll see thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Alcib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That, by killing of villains, thou wast born

To conquer my country.

Put up thy gold; Go on,—here's gold,—go on;

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove

¹ i. e. men who have strength yet remaining to struggle with their distemper. This alludes to an old custom of drawing away the pillow from under the heads of men in their last agonies, to make their departure the easier. ² Waped or wappen'd, according to Warburton, signifies both sorrowful and terrified, either for the loss of a good husband, or by the treatment of a bad. But gold, he says, can overcome both her affection and her fears. ³ That is, to the wedding day, called by the poet, satirically, April day, or fool's day.—The April day, however, does not relate to the widow, but to the other diseased female, who is represented as the outcast of an hospital. She it is whom gold embalms and spices to the April day again; i. e. gold restores her to all the freshness and sweetness of youth. ⁴ Lie in the earth where nature laid thee. ⁵ Thou hast life and motion in thee. ⁶ This alludes to the method of cure for venereal complaints (explained in note ⁴, p. 90), the unction for which was sometimes continued for thirty-seven days, and during this time there was necessarily an extraordinary abstinence required. Hence the term of the tub-fast. The diet was likewise a customary term for the regimen prescribed in these cases. Will

Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison
In the sick air: Let not thy sword skip one:
Pity not honour'd age for his white beard,
He is an usurer: Strike me the counterfeit matron,
It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself's a bawd: Let not the virgin's cheek
Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milkpaps,

That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,
Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
Set them down horrible traitors: Spare not the babe, Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust¹ their mercy;

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut²,
And mince it sans remorse: Swear against objects³;
Put armour on thine ears, and on thine eyes;
Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding,
Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:
Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent,
Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,

Not all thy counsel.

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee!

Phr. and Tym. Give us some gold, good Timon:
Hast thou more? [trade, 30

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her
And to make whores, a bawd⁴. Hold up, you sluts,
Your aprons mountant: You are not oathable,—
Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear,
Into strong shudders, and to heavenly agues,
The immortal gods that hear you,—spare your oaths,

I'll trust to your conditions⁵: Be whores still;
And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,
Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;
Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
And be no turn-coats: Yet may your pains⁶, six months, [roofs

Be quite contrary: make false hair, and thatch
Your poor thin roofs with burthens of the dead,—
Some that were hang'd, no matter:

Wear them, betray with them, and whore on still:
Paint 'till a horse may mire upon your face;

A pox of wrinkles!

Phr. and Tym. Well, more gold;—What then?
Believe't, that we'll do any thing for gold.

Tim. Consumptions sow
In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp shins,
And marr men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,

That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quilllets⁷ shrilly: hoar the flamen⁸,
That scolds against the quality of flesh,
And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to foresee⁹,
Smells from the general weal: make curl'd-pate
ruffians bald;

And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you: Plague all;
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection.—There's more gold:—
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave¹⁰ you all!

Phr. and Tym. More counsel, with more money, bounteous Timon.

Timon. More whore, more mischief first; I have given you earnest.

Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens.
Farewell, Timon;

If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more.

Alcib. I never did thee harm.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alcib. Call'st thou that harm?

Tim. Men daily find it.

Get thee away, and take thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. We but offend him.—Strike.

[Drum beats. Exeunt Alcibiades, Pirynia, and Tymandra.

Tim. [Digging.] That nature, being sick of man's unkindness,

Should yet be hungry!—Common mother, thou
Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast¹¹,
Teems, and feeds all; whose self-same mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puffed,
Engenders the black toad, and adder blue,

The gilded newt, and eyeless venom'd worm¹²,
With all the abhorred births below crisp¹³ heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;
Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root!

Ensear thy fertile and conception womb,

² An allusion to the tale of Oedipus.

³ Perhaps objects is here used pro- vincially for abjects. ⁴ That is, enough to make a whore leave whoring, and a bawd leave making whores.

⁵ i. e. I will trust to your inclinations.

⁶ Dr. Warburton comments on this passage thus: "This is obscure, partly from the ambiguity of the word pains, and partly from the generality of the expression. The meaning is this: He had said before, Follow constantly your trade of debauchery; that is, (says he) for six months in the year. Let the other six be employed in quite contrary pains and labour, namely, in the severe discipline necessary for the repair of those disorders that your debaucheries occasion, in order to fit you anew to the trade; and thus let the whole year be spent in these different occupations. On this account he goes on, and says, Make false hair, &c.—Mr. Steevens however conceives the meaning to be only this: "Yet for half the year at least, may you suffer such punishment as is inflicted on harlots in houses of correction." ⁷ Quilllets are subtilties. ⁸ i. e. give the flamen the hoary leprosy. ⁹ To foresee his particular, is to provide for his private advantage, for which he leaves the right scent of public good. In hunting, when hares have cross'd one another, it is common for some of the hounds to smell from the general weal, and foresee their own particular. Shakspeare, who seems to have been a skilful sportsman, and has alluded often to falconry, perhaps alludes here to hunting.

¹⁰ To grave is to entomb. ¹¹ Whose infinite breast means whose boundless surface. ¹² The serpent, which we, from the smallness of his eyes, call the blind worm. ¹³ i. e. curled, bent, hollow.

Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!
Go great with tygers, dragons, wolves, and bears;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented!—O, a root,—Dear thanks!
Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas;
Whercof ingrateful man, with liquorice draughts,
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips!

Enter Apemantus.

More man? Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: Men report,
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou dost not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate: Consumption catch thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nature but affected;
A poor unmanly melancholy, sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft;
Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods,
By putting on the cunning of a carper¹.

Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent: Thou wast told thus;
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters, that bid welcome
To knaves, and all approachers: 'Tis most just,
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again,
Rascals should hav' it. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself:

A madman so long, now a fool; What, think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moist trees,
That have out-liv'd the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip when thou point'st out? will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? Call the creatures,
Whose naked natures live in all the spight
Of wreakful heaven; whose bare unhoused trunks,
To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer meer nature,—bid them flatter thee;
O! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee: Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say, thou art a caitiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in 't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again,
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Out-lives incertain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: Best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content².

Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath³, that is more miserable,
Thou art a slave, whom fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasp'd; but bred a dog⁴.
Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath⁵ proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drugs of it
Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd thyself
In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect⁶, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary; [men
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of
At duty, more than I could frame employment,
(That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows) I to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burthen:
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time
Hath made thee hard in 't. Why should'st thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee: What hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse,—thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject; who, in spight, put stuff
To some she beggar, and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!—
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave, and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was no prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:

Were all the wealth I have, shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.—
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

[Offering him something.

Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend my own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,

¹ The cunning of a carper means the insidious arts of a critic. ² That is, Best states contentless have a wretched being, a being worse than that of the worst states that are content. ³ By his breath is probably meant his sentence. ⁴ Alluding to the word Cynic, of which sect Apemantus was. ⁵ From infancy.—Swath is the dress of a new-born child. ⁶ Respect, according to Mr. Steevens, means the qu'en dira-t-on? the regard of Athens, that strongest restraint on licentiousness: the icy precepts, i. e. that cool hot blood.

Tell them there I have gold ; look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best, and truest :

For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where ly'st o' nights, Timon ?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus ?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat ; or, rather, where I eat it.

Tim. 'Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind !

Apem. Where would'st thou send it ?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends : When thou wast in thy guilt, and thy perfume, they mock'd thee for too much curiosity¹ ; in thy rags, thou knowest none, but art despis'd for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eat it.

Tim. On what I hate, I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar ?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hadst hated medlars sooner, thou shouldst have lov'd thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was belov'd after his means ?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talk'st of, didst thou ever know belov'd ?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee ; thou had'st some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers ?

Tim. Women nearest ; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power ?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts ?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain too ! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee ; if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee : if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accus'd by the ass : if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee ; and still thou liv'dst but as a breakfast to the wolf : if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner : wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury : wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be kill'd by the horse : wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seiz'd by the leopard ; wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life : all thy safety were remotion² ; and thy defence, absence. What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast ? And what a beast art thou already, and seest not thy loss in transformation ?

Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here : The commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city ?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet, and a painter : The plague of company light upon thee ! I will fear to catch it, and give way : When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog, than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap³ of all the fools alive.

Tim. 'Would thou wert cleanenoughto spit upon. A plague on thee !

Apem. Thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All villains, that do stand by thee, are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy, but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee.—

Apem. I'll beat thee,—but I should infect my hands.

Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off !

Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog !

Choler does kill me, that thou art alive ;

I swoon to see thee.

Apem. 'Would thou wouldst burst !

Tim. Away,

Thou tedious rogue ! I am sorry, I shall lose A stone by thee.

Apem. Beast !

Tim. Slave !

Apem. Toad !

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue !

[Apemantus retreats backward, as going.

I am sick of this false world ; and will love nought But even the meer necessities upon it.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave ;

Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat

Thy grave-stone daily : make thine epitaph,

That death in me at others' lives may laugh.

O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce

[Looking on the gold.

'Twixt natural son and sire ! thou bright defiler

Of Hymen's purest bed ! thou valiant Mars !

Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow

That lies on Dian's lap ! thou visible god,

That solder'st close impossibilities,

And mak'st them kiss ! that speak'st with every tongue,

To every purpose ! O thou touch⁴ of hearts !

Think, thy slave man rebels ; and by that virtue

Set them into confounding odds, that beasts

May have the world in empire !

Apem. 'Would 'twere so ;—

But not 'till I am dead !—I'll say, thou hast gold : Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to ?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Thy back, I pr'ythee.

Apem. Live, and love thy misery !

Tim. Long live so, and so die !—I am quit.

Enter Thieves.

1 Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder: the meer want of gold, and the falling from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

2 Thief. It is nois'd, he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Thief. Let us make the assay upon him; if he care not for 't, he will supply us easily; If he covetous-y reserve it, how shall 's get it?

All. Where?

2 Thief. 'Tis his description.

3 Thief. He; I know him.

Tim. Both too; and women's sons.

All. We are not thieves, but men that much do want. [meat.]

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of 25
Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;
Within this mile break forth an hundred springs:
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips;
The bounteous huswife, nature, on each bush
Lays her full mess before you. Want? why want? 30

1 Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, wa-
As beasts, and birds, and fishes. [ter,

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con', 35

That you are thieves profest; that you work not
In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft
In limited² professions. Rascal thieves,
Here's gold: Go suck the subtle blood of the grape,
Till the high fever seeth your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;
His antidotes are poison, and he slays
More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;
Do villainy, do, since you profess to do't,

10 Like workmen: I'll example you with thievery.

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun;
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves

15 The moon into salt tears³; the earth's a thief,

That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement: each thing's a thief,

The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power
Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves; away;

20 Rob one another. There's more gold: Cut throats;

All that you meet are thieves: To Athens, go,
Break open shops; nothing can you steal,

But thieves do lose it: Steal not less, for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever!

25 Amen. [Exit.

3 Thief. He has almost charm'd me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

1 Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery. 30

2 Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1 Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens:
There is no time so miserable, but a man may be true. [Exit.

A C T V.

S C E N E I.

The Woods, and Timon's Cave.

Enter Flavius.

Flav. O YOU gods!
Is yon despis'd and ruinous man my lord?

Full of decay and failing? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour has

Desperate want made!

45 What viler thing upon the earth, than friends,
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!

How rarely⁴ does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was wish'd⁵ to love his enemies:

Grant, I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischief me, than those that do!⁶

50 He has caught me in his eye: I will present

My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord,

¹ To con thanks is a very common expression among our old dramatic writers. ² Limited, for legal.

³ Mr. Tollett comments on this passage thus: "The moon is the governess of the floods, 'but cannot be resolved by the surges of the sea.' This seems incontestible, and therefore an alteration of the text appears to be necessary. I propose to read:—whose liquid surge resolves the main into salt tears;—i. e. resolves the mainland, or the continent, into sea. In Bacon, and also in Shakspeare's King Lear, act III. sc. 1. main occurs in this signification. Earth melting to sea is not an uncommon idea in our poets. "Melt earth to sea, sea flow to air." I might add, that in Chaucer, mone, which is very near to the traces of the old reading, seems to mean the globe of the earth, or a map of it, from the French, monde, the world; but I think main is the true reading here, and might easily be mistaken for moon by a hasty transcriber, or a careless printer, who might have in their thoughts the moon, which is mentioned in a preceding line." ⁴ Rarely, for fitly; not for seldom. ⁵ We should read will'd. ⁶ The sense is, "Let me rather woo or caress those that would mischief, that profess to mean me mischief, than those that really do me mischief under false professions of kindness."

Still serve him with my life.—My dearest master!

Timon comes forward from his cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir? [men;

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all Then, if thou grant'st thou art a man, I have Forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:

I ne'er had honest man about me, I; all
I kept were¹ knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,
Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep?—Come nearer;—
then I love thee,
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust, and laughter. Pity's sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief, and, whilst this poor wealth lasts,

To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable?
It almost turns my dangerous nature wild².
—Let me behold thy face.—Surely, this man
Was born of woman.—

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
Perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man,—mistake me not,—But one;
No more, I pray,—and he is a steward.—
How fain would I have hated all mankind,
And thou redeem'st thyself: But all, save thee,
I fell with curses.

Methinks, thou art more honest now, than wise;
For, by oppressing and betraying me,
Thou might'st have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters,
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure)
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous, [gifts,
If not a usuring kindness; and as rich men deal
Expecting in return twenty for one? [breast

Flav. No, my most worthy master, in whose Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late:
You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast:

Suspect still comes where an estate is least.
That which I shew, heaven knows, is merely love,
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living: and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange it
For this one wish, That you had power and wealth

To requite me, by making rich yourself. [man,
Tim. Look thee, 'tis so!—Thou singly honest
Here, take:—the gods out of my misery
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich, and happy:
But thus condition'd: Thou shalt build from³ men;
Hate all, curse all: shew charity to none;
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow 'em, Debts wither 'em to nothing: Be men like blasted woods,

And may diseases lick up their false bloods!

And so, farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O, let me stay, and comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hat'st curses,
Stay not; but fly, whilst thou art blest and free:
Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.

[Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true, that he is so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Tymandra had gold of him: he likewise en-rich'd poor straggling soldiers with great quantity: 'Tis said, he gave his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends?

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest.
Therefore, 'tis not amiss, we tender our loves to him, in this suppos'd distress of his: it will shew honestly in us; and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation:
only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time; it opens the eyes of expectation:
performance is ever the duller for his act; and,
but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use⁴. To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will, or testament, which argues a great sickness in his judgement that makes it.

Re-enter Timon from his cave, unseen.

Tim. Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as thyself.

Poet. I am thinking, what I shall say I have provided for him: It must be a personating⁵ of himself: a satire against the softness of prosperity;

¹ Knave is here used in the compound sense of a servant and a rascal. ² To turn wild is to distract.—An appearance so unexpected, says Timon, almost turns my sagaciousness to distraction.

³ i.e. away from human habitations. ⁴ The sense is, "The doing of that which we have said we would do, the accomplishment and performance of our promise, is, except among the lower classes of mankind, quite out of use." ⁵ Personating for representing simply; for the subject of this projected satire was Timon's case, not his person.

with a discovery of the infinite flatteries, that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:

Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True; [night¹,
When the day serves, before black-corner'd
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come. [gold,

Tim. I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's
That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple,
Than where swine feed!

'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark, and plow'st the foam;

Settlest admired reverence in a slave:

To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye

Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone obey!

Fit I meet them.

Poet. Hail! worthy Timon.

Pain. Our late noble master.

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir,
Having often of your open bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,
Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
What! to you!

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being! I am rapt, and cannot cover
The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the better:
You, that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen, and known.

Pain. He, and myself,
Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men. [vice.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our ser-

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Can you eat roots, and drink cold water? no.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service. [I have gold;

Tim. You are honest men: You have heard that I am sure, you have: speak truth: you are honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord: but therefore Came not my friend, nor I. [terfeit²

Tim. Good honest men:—Thou draw'st a coun-
Best in all Athens: thou art, indeed, the best;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. Even so, sir, as I say;—And, for thy fiction,
[To the Poet.

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth,
That thou art even natural in thine art.—

But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,

I must needs say, you have a little fault:

5 Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I,
You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour

To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

10 Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you, indeed?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord. [knave,

Tim. There's ne'er a one of you but trusts a
That mightily deceives you.

15 Both. Do we, my lord? [semble,

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dis-
Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,

Keep in your bosom: yet remain assur'd,

That he's a made-up villain³.

20 Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I. [gold,

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you
Rid me these villains from your companies:

Hang them, or stab them, drown them in adraught⁴,
25 Confound them by some course, and come to me,
I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord, let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this.—But two in company⁵,—

30 Each man apart,—all single, and alone,—

Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.—

If, where thou art, two villains shall not be,

[To the Painter.

Come not near him.—If thou wouldst not reside

[To the Poet.

But where one villain is, then him abandon.—

Hence! pack! there's gold, ye came for gold, ye slaves:

You have work for me, there is payment: Hence!

40 You are an alchymist, make gold of that:—

Out, rascal dogs!

[Exit, beating and driving them out.

SCENE III.

Enter Flavius, and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;

For he is set so only to himself,

50 That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring us to his cave:

It is our part, and promise to the Athenians,

To speak with Timon.

55 2 Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same: 'Twas time, and griefs,

That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer hand,

Offering the fortunes of his former days,

¹ i. e. night which is as obscure as a dark corner. ² A portrait was called a counterfeit in our author's time. ³ i. e. a hypocrite. ⁴ That is, in the jakes. ⁵ This passage is obscure. Dr.

Johnson thinks the meaning is this: But two in company, that is, Stand apart, let only two be together; for even when each stands single there are two, he himself and a villain.—But, in the North, signifies without.

The former man may make him: Bring us to him,
And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.—

Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!
Look out, and speak to friends: The Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:
Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! Speak, and be hang'd!
For each true word, a blister, and each false
Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

1 Sen. Worthy Timon,— [mon.

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Ti-

2 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Ti-
mon. [the plague,

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back
Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O, forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators, with one consent of love,
Intreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess,
Toward thee, forgetfulness too general, gross:
And now the public body,—which doth seldom
Play the recanter,—feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of its own fall¹, restraining aid to Timon;
And sends forth us, to make their sorrowed render²,

Together with a recompence more fruitful
Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth,
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprise me to the very brink of tears:
Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,
And I'll bewep these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return with
And of our Athens (thine, and ours) to take [us,
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd³ with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority:—so soon shall we drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword
Against the walls of Athens.

1 Sen. Therefore, Timon,—

Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore I will, sir;
Thus,—

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, [Athens,
That—Timon cares not.—But if he sack fair

And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
Then let him know, and tell him, Timon speaks it,
5 In pity of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot chuse but tell him, that—I care not,
And let him take 't at worst; for their knives care not,

While you have throats to answer: for myself,
10 There's not a whittle⁴ in the unruly camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

15 Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow; My long sickness
Of health, and living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still;
20 Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country; and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
25 As common bruit doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving countrymen,—

1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them. [umphers

30 2 Sen. And enter in our ears, like great tri-
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them, that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
35 Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragil vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them:—

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

40 2 Sen. I like this well, he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it: Tell my friends,
45 Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree⁵,
From high to low throughout, that whoso please
To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself:—I pray you, do my greeting.

50 Flav. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood,
Which once a day with his embossed froth⁶
The turbulent surge shall cover; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle.—
Lips, let sour words go by, and language end:
What is amiss, plague and infection mend!

¹ The Athenians had sense, that is, felt the danger of their own fall, by the arms of Alcibiades.

² Render is confession. ³ Allowed is licensed, privileged, uncontrolled. ⁴ A whittle is still in the midland counties the common name for a pocket clasp knife, such as children use. ⁵ i. e. from highest to lowest. ⁶ We have before observed, that when a deer was run hard, and foamed at the mouth, he was said to be emboss'd.

Graves only be men's works; and death, their gain!
Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign.

[Exit Timon.]

1 Sen. His discontents are unremoveably
Coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear¹ peril.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The Walls of Athens.

Enter two other Senators, with a Messenger.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discovered; are his
As full as thy report? [files]

Mes. I have spoke the least:
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach. [Timon.]

2 Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not

Mes. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend;—
Who, though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like friends:—this man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which imported
His fellowship i' the cause against your city,
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter the other Senators.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.

3 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.
The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring
Doth choak the air with dust: In, and prepare;
Ours is the fall, I fear, our foes the snare.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Changes to the Woods.

Enter a Soldier, seeking Timon.

Sol. By all description, this should be the place.
Who's here? speak, ho!—No answer?—What is this?

Timon is dead, who hath out-stretch'd his span:
Some beast read this; there does not live a man.
Dead, sure; and this his grave. What's on this tomb?

I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax;
Our captain hath in every figure skill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days:
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.

Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades, with his powers.

5 Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious
Our terrible approach. [town]

[Sound a parley. The Senators appear upon the walls.]

10 Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice; 'till now, myself, and such
As slept within the shadow of your power,
Have wander'd with our traverst arms², and breath'd

Our sufferance vainly: Now the time is flush³,
When crouching marrow⁴, in the bearer strong,
Cries of itself, 'No more:' now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
And pury insolence shall break his wind,
With fear, and horrid flight.

15 1 Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a meer conceit,
Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause to fear,
We sent to thee; to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingritudes with loves
25 Above their⁵ quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love,
By humble message, and by promis'd means;
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
30 The common stroke of war.

1 Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You have receiv'd your griefs: nor are they such,
That these great towers, trophies, and schools
35 should fall

For private faults in them.
2 Sen. Nor are they living,
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess 40 Hath broke their hearts⁶. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death,
(If thy revenges hunger for that food,
Which nature loaths) take thou the destin'd tenth;
45 And by the hazard of the spotted die,
Let die the spotted.

1 Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square⁷, to take,
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
50 Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall

³ A bird is flush when his feathers are grown, and he can leave the nest.—Flush means mature.

⁵ Their refers to rages. ⁶ The meaning is, "Shame in excess (i.e. extremity of shame) that they wanted cunning (i.e. that they were not wise enough not to banish you) hath broke their hearts."

⁷ i.e. not regular, not equitable.

With those that have offended: like a shepherd,
Approach the fold, and cull the infected forth,
But kill not altogether.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Than hew to 't with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope;
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say, thou 'lt enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbour in our town, 'till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports¹:
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more: and,—to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be remedy'd by your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

Enter a Soldier.

Sol. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea;
And, on his grave-stone, this insculpture; which 5 With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interpreteth for my poor ignorance.

[Alcibiades reads the epitaph.]

Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name: A plague consume you wicked
10 caitiffs left!

Here lie I Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:

Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass, and stay not here thy gait.

15 These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhor'dst in us our human griefs, Scorn'dst our brain's flow², and those our droplets which

20 From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave.—On:—Faults forgiven.—Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword:

25 Make war breed peace; make peace stint war;
make each

Prescribe to other, as each other's leach³.—

Let our drums strike.

² Our brain's flow is our tears.

³ i. e. physician.

SCENE, Rome; and the Country near it.

A C T I.

SCENE I.

Before the Capitol, in Rome.

Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft, as in the Senate. Then enter Saturninus and his followers, at one door; and Bassianus and his followers, at the other; with drum and colours.

Sat. NOBLE patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;

And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords:
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome:
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of my right,—

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.
Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft, with the crown.

10 Marc. Princes, that strive by factions, and by friends,

Ambitiously for rule and empery!
Know, that the people of Rome, for whom we stand,

15 A special party, have, by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome;

¹ Mr. Theobald says, This is one of those plays which he always thought, with the better judges, ought not to be acknowledged in the list of Shakspeare's genuine pieces. Dr. Johnson observes, That all the editors and critics agree with Mr. Theobald in supposing this play spurious, and that he sees "no reason for differing from them: for the colour of the style is wholly different from that of the other plays, and there is an attempt at regular versification, and artificial closes, not always inelegant, yet seldom pleasing. The barbarity of the spectacles, and the general massacre, which are here exhibited, can scarcely be conceived tolerable to any audience; yet we are told by Jonson, that they were not only borne, but praised." Mr. Farmer and Mr. Steevens are also of the same opinion with Dr. Johnson.

A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls :
He by the senate is accited home,
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths ;
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms.
Ten years are spent, since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride: Five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field ;——
And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us intreat,—By honour of his name,
Whom, worthily, you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,——
That you withdraw you, and abate your strength ;
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts !

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee, and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus, and his sons,
And her, to whom our thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends ;
And to my fortunes, and the people's favour,
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt Soldiers.]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,
I thank you all, and here dismiss you all ;
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause :
Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.—
Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes ! and me, a poor competitor.

[They go up into the senate-house.]

SCENE II.

Enter a Captain.

Capt. Romans, make way ; The good Andro-
Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion, [nicus,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd,
From where he circumscribed with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Sound drums and trumpets, and then enter Mutius and Marcus ; after them, two men bearing a coffin covered with black ; then Quintus and Lucius. After them, Titus Andronicus ; and then Tamora, the queen of the Goths, Alarbus, Chi-ron, and Demetrius, with Aaron the Moor, prisoners ; Soldiers, and other Attendants. They set down the coffin, and Titus speaks.

Tit. Hail ! Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds.

Lo, as the bark, that hath discharg'd her fraught,
Returns with precious lading to the bay,
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
5 To re-salute his country with his tears ;
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.—
Thou great defender of this Capitol !
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend !—
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons,
10 Half of the number that king Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead !
These, that survive, let Rome reward with love ;
These, that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial among their ancestors : [sword.
15 Here Goths have given me leave to sheath my Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unbury'd yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx ?—
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[They open the tomb.]

There greet in silence, as the dead were wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars !
O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
25 How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more ?
Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,
That we may hew his limbs, and, on a pile,
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
30 Before this earthly prison of their bones ;
I hat so their shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth².

Tit. I give him you ; the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen. [queror,

35 Tam. Stay, Roman brethren,—Gracious con-
Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son :
And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me.

40 Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs, and return,
Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke ?
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause !
45 O ! if to fight for king and common weal
Were piety in thine, it is in these ;
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood ;
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods ?
Draw near them then in being merciful :

50 Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge ;
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient³ yourself, madam, and pardon me.
These are their brethren, whom you Goths behold
Alive, and dead ; and for their brethren slain,
55 Religiously they ask a sacrifice :

To this, your son is mark'd : and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him ! and make a fire straight ;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
60 Let's hew his limbs, 'till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt Mutius, Marcus, Quintus, and Lucius, with Alarbus.]

of unburied people appeared to their friends and relations, to solicit the rites of funeral.

This

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive

To tremble under Titus' threatening look.

Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal,

The self-same gods, that arm'd the queen of Troy

With opportunity of sharp revenge

Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,

May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths;

(When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen)

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Enter Mutius, Marcus, Quintus, and Lucius.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have performed

Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,

And entrails feed the sacrificing fire;

Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.

Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren,

And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus

Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Then sound trumpets, and lay the coffins in the tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;

Rome's readiest champions, repose you here,

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!

Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,

Here grow no damned grudges; here no storm,

No noise; but silence and eternal sleep:

Enter Lavinia.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Lav. In peace and honour live lord Titus long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame!

Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears

I render, for my brethren's obsequies;

And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy

Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome:

O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,

Whose fortune Rome's best citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd

The cordial of mine age, to glad my heart!—

Lavinia, live; out-live thy father's days,

And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Marc. Long live lord Titus, my beloved brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother

Marcus.

[wars,

Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful

You that survive, and you that sleep in fame.

Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,

That in your country's service drew your swords:

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,

That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,

And triumphs over chance, in honour's bed.—

Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,

Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,

Send thee by me, their tribune, and their trust,

This palliament of white and spotless hue;

And name thee in election for the empire,

With these our late deceased emperor's sons:

Be candidatus then, and put it on,

And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits,

Than his, that shakes for age and feebleness:

What! should I don¹ this robe, and trouble you?

Be chose with proclamations to- ay;

5 To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,

And set abroad new business for you all?

Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,

And led my country's strength successfully;

And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,

10 Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,

In right and service of their noble country:

Give me a staff of honour for mine age,

But not a sceptre to controll the world:

Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

15 Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery. [tell?—

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou

Tit. Patience, prince Saturninus.—

Sat. Romans, do me right;

20 Patricians, draw your swords, and sheath them not

'Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor:—

Andronicus, 'would thou were shipp'd to hell,

Rather than rob me of the people's hearts.

Luc. Proud Saturninus! interrupter of the good

25 That noble-minded Titus means to thee!—

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee

The people's hearts, and wean them from them—

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee, [selves.

But honour thee, and will do 'till I die;

30 My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,

I will most thankful be: and thanks, to men

Of noble minds, is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes here,

I ask your voices, and your suffrages;

35 Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Marc. To gratify the good Andronicus,

And gratulate his safe return to Rome,

The people will accept whom he admits. [make,

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this suit I

40 That you create your emperor's eldest son,

Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,

Reflect on Rome, as Titan's rays on earth,

And ripen justice in this common-weal:

Then if you will elect by my advice,

45 Crown him, and say,—Long live our emperor!

Marc. With voices and applause of every sort,

Patricians, and plebeians, we create

Lord Saturninus, Rome's great emperor;

And say,—Long live our emperor Saturnine!

50 [A long flourish till they come down.]

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done

To us in our election this day,

I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,

And will with deeds requite thy gentleness;

55 And, for an onset, Titus, to advance

Thy name and honourable family,

Lavinia will I make my emperess,

Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,

And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse:

60 Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and, in this match,

I hold me highly honour'd of your grace:

3 H

And

And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,—
King and commander of the common-weal,
The wide world's emperor,—do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
Presents well worthy Rome's imperial lord:
Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts,
Rome shall record; and when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;
[To Tamora.]
To him, that for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly, and your followers.

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew.—
Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:
Though chance of war hath wrought this change
of cheer,

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome:
Princely shall be thy usage every way.

Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: Madam, he comforts you,
Can make you greater than the queen of Goths.—
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?

Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go:

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum.

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing Lavinia.]

Tit. How, sir? Are you in earnest then, my lord?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolv'd withal,
To do myself this reason and this right.

[The emperor courts Tamora in dumb shew.]

Marc. Suum cuique is our Roman justice:
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the emperor's guard?

Treason, my lord; Lavinia is surpriz'd.

Sat. Surpriz'd! by whom?

Bas. By him that justly may

Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

[Exit Bassianus with Lavinia.]

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,
And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What! villain boy,

Barr'st me my way in Rome? [Titus kills Mutius.]

Mut. Help, Lucius, help!

Luc. My lord, you are unjust, and more than so;
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine;

My sons would never so dishonour me:

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife,

5 That is another's lawful promis'd love.

Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:

I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once;

Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,

10 Confederates all thus to dishonour me.

Was there none else in Rome to make a stale of,

But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus,

Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,

That said'st, I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

15 Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these?

Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece¹

To him that flourish'd for her with his sword:

20 A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy;

One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,

To ruffle² in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart. [Goths,—]

25 Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of

That like the stately Phœbe 'mong her nymphs,

Dost over-shine the gallant'st dames of Rome,—

If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,

Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,

30 And will create thee emperess of Rome.

Speak, queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?

And here I swear by all the Romans gods,—

Sith priest and holy water are so near,

35 And tapers burn so bright, and every thing

In readiness for Hymeneus stands,—

I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,

Or climb my palace, 'till from forth this place

I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

40 Tam. And here, in sight of heaven to Rome
I swear,

If Saturnine advance the queen of Goths,

She will a handmaid be to his desires,

A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

45 Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon: Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,

Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine,

Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered:

50 There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

[Exeunt.]

Manet Titus Andronicus.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride;—

Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,

55 Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Enter Marcus Andronicus, Lucius, Quintus, and Marcus.

Marc. O, Titus, see, O see, what thou hast done!

60 In a bad quarrel, slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,—

¹ Spoken of Lavinia.—Piece was then, as it is now, used personally as a word of contempt.

² A Ruffler was a kind of cheating bully; and is so called in a statute made for the punishment of vagabonds in the 27th year of K. Henry VIII. Hence, probably, this sense of the verb, to ruffle.

Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
That hath dishonour'd all our family ;
Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons !

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes ;
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away ! he rests not in this tomb !
This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified ;
Here none but soldiers, and Rome's servitors,
Repose in fame ; none basely slain in brawls :—
Bury him where you can, he comes not here.

Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you :
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him :
He must be buried with his brethren.

[Titus' sons speak.

Sons. And shall, or him we will accompany.

Tit. And shall ? What villain was it spoke that word ?

[Titus' son speaks.

Quint. He that would vouch't in any place but here.

Tit. What, would you bury him in my despight ?

Marc. No, noble Titus ; but intreat of thee
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,
And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded.

My foes I do repute you every one ;
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Luc. He is not with himself ; let us withdraw.

Quint. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[The brother and the sons kneel.

Marc. Brother, for in that namedo thnature plead.

Quint. Father, and in that namedo thnature speak.

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—

Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,

That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous.

The Greeks, upon advice, did bury Ajax,

That slew himself ; and wise Laertes' son

Did graciously plead for his funerals :

Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy,

Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise :

The dismall'st day is this, that e'er I saw,

To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome !—

Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[They put him in the tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

'Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb !—

[They all kneel, and say ;

No man shed tears for noble Mutius ;

He lives in fame, that dy'd in virtue's cause.

Marc. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—

How comes it, that the subtle queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome ?

Tit. I know not, Marcus ; but I know, it is ;

If by device or no, the heavens can tell :

Is she not then beholden to the man

That brought her for this high good turn so far ?

Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter the Emperor, Tamora, Chiron and Demetrius, with Aaron the Moor, at one door : At the other door, Bassianus, and Lavinia, with others.

5 Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize :
God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride !

Bas. And you of yours, my lord : I say no more,
Nor wish no less ; and so I take my leave.

10 Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law, or we have power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My true betrothed love, and now my wife ?

But let the laws of Rome determine all ;

15 Mean while I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir ; You are very short with us ;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer I must, and shall do with my life.

20 Only thus much I give your grace to know,—

By all the duties which I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, lord Titus here,

Is in opinion, and in honour, wrong'd ;

That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

25 With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath

To be controul'd in that he frankly gave :

Receive him then to favour, Saturnine ;

That hath express'd himself, in all his deeds,

30 A father, and a friend, to thee, and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds ;

'Tis thou, and those, that have dishonour'd me :

Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,

How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine !

35 Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak, indifferently for all ;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

40 Sat. What, madam ! be dishonour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge ?

Tam. Not so, my lord ; The gods of Rome
forefend,

I should be author to dishonour you !

But, on mine honour, dare I undertake

45 For good lord Titus' innocence in all,

Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his griefs :

Then, at my suit, look graciously on him ;

Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—

50 My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last :

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents,

You are but newly planted in your throne ;

Lest then the people, and patricians too,

55 Upon a just survey, take Titus' part ;

And so supplant us for ingratitude,

(Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin)

Yield at intreats, and then let me alone :

I'll find a day to massacre them all,

60 And raze their faction, and their family,

The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,

To whom I sued for my dear son's life :

And make them know what 'tis to let a queen

65 Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in vain.—

Come,

Come, come, sweet emperor, come, Andronicus,—
Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevailed.

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord.

These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;—
And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.—

For you, prince Bassianus, I have pass'd

My word and promise to the emperor,

That you will be more mild and tractable.—

And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia;—

By my advice, all humbled on your knees,

You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven, and to his highness,

That what we did, was mildly as we might,

Tend'ring our sister's honour, and our own.

Marc. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.—

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:

5 The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace;
I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's here,

And at my lovely Tamora's intreats,

10 I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,

I found a friend; and sure as death I swore,

I would not part a bachelor from the priest.

15 Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends:—

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty,

To hunt the panther and the hart with me,

20 With horn and hound, we'll give your grace bonjour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too.

[Exeunt.]

A C T II.

S C E N E I.

Before the Palace.

Enter Aaron alone.

Aar. NOW climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloft,

Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning flash;

Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.

As when the golden sun salutes the morn,

And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,

Gallops the zodiack in his glistening coach,

And over-looks the highest-peering hills;

So Tamora.—

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait,

And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.

Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,

To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,

And mount her pitch; whom thou in triumph long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains;

And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes,

Than is Prometheus ty'd to Caucasus.

Away with slavish weeds, and idle thoughts!

I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,

To wait upon this new-made emperess.

To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,

This goddess, this Semiramis;—this queen,

This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,

And see his shipwreck, and his common-weal's.

Holla! what storm is this?

Enter Chiron, and Demetrius, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge,

And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd;
And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all;

35 And so in this, to bear me down with braves.

'Tis not the difference of a year, or two,

Makes me less gracious, or thee more fortunate:

I am as able, and as fit, as thou,

To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;

40 And that my sword upon thee shall approve,

And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. Clubs, clubs!—These lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother unadvis'd,

45 Gave you a dancing rapier by your side,

Are you so desperate grown to threat your friends?

Go to; have your lath glu'd within your sheath,

'Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Mean while, sir, with the little skill I have,

50 Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave?

[They draw.]

Aar. Why, how now, lords?

So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,

55 And maintain such a quarrel openly?

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge;

I would not for a million of gold,

The cause were known to them it most concerns;

Nor would your noble mother, for much more,

60 Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.

For shame, put up.

Chi. Not I; 'till I have sheath'd

My rapier in his bosom, and, withal,

Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat,
That

That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Dem. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,— Foul-spoken coward! that thunder'st with thy tongue,

And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Aar. Away, I say.—

Now, by the gods, that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.—

Why, lords,—and think you not how dangerous
It is to jut upon a prince's right?

What, is Lavinia then become so loose,

Or Bassianus so degenerate,

That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
Without controulment, justice, or revenge?

Young lords, beware!—an should the empress know [please.

This discord's ground, the music would not

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world;
I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope. [Rome

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brook competitors in love?

I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths would I propose,
To atchieve her I do love.

Aar. To atchieve her!—How?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?

She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;

She is a woman, therefore may be won:

She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.

What, man! more water glideth by the mill

Than wots the miller of; and easy it is

Of a cut loaf to steal a shive¹, we know:

Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,

Better than he have yet worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may. [Aside.

Dem. Then why should he despair, that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?

What, hast thou not full often struck a doe,

And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why then, it seems, some certain snatch
Would serve your turns. [or so

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too;

Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.

Why, hark ye, hark ye,—And are you such fools,

To square² for this? Would it offend you then

That both should speed?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one. [you jar.

Aar. For shame, be friends; and join for that

'Tis policy and stratagem must do

That you affect; and so must you resolve;

That what you cannot, as you would, atchieve,

You must perforce accomplish as you may.

Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.

5 My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;

There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:

The forest walks are wide and spacious;

And many unfrequented plots there are,

Fitted by kind³ for rape and villainy:

10 Single you thither then this dainty doe,

And strike her home by force, if not by words;

This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.

Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit,

To villainy and vengeance consecrate,

15 We will acquaint with all that we intend;

And she shall file our engines with advice⁴,

That will not suffer you to square yourselves,

But to your wishes' height advance you both.

The emperor's court is like the house of fame,

20 The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears:

The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf and dull;

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns: [eye,

There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's

25 And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lads, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, 'till I find the stream

To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,

Per Styga, per Manes vehor.— [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Changes to a Forest.

Enter Titus Andronicus, and his three Sons, with hounds and horns, and Marcus.

35 Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,

The fields are fragrant, and the woods are green:

Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,

And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,

And rouse the prince; and ring a hunter's peal,

40 That all the court may echo with the noise.

Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,

To tend the emperor's person carefully:

I have been troubled in my sleep this night,

But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

45 Here a cry of hounds, and wind horns in a peal; then enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia,

Chiron, Demetrius, and their Attendants.

Tit. Many good morrows to your majesty:—

Madam, to you as many and as good!—

50 I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. and you have rung it lustily, my lords,

Somewhat too early for new married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say, no;

55 I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and chariots let us have,

And to our sport:—Madam, now ye shall see

Our Roman hunting. [To Tamora.

Marc. I have dogs, my lord,

Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,

² To square, is to quarrel,

³ i. e. by nature.

⁴ i. e. remove all impediments from our designs by advice. The allusion is to the operation of the file.

And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the gaine

Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground. [Exeunt.

S C E N E III.

A desert part of the Forest.

Enter Aaron alone.

Aar. He, that had wit, would think, that I had none,

To bury so much gold under a tree,

And never after to inherit it,

Let him, that thinks of me so abjectly,

Know, that this gold must coin a stratagem;

Which, cunningly effected, will beget

A very excellent piece of villainy:

And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest¹,

That have their alms out of the empress' chest.

Enter Tamora.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,

When every thing doth make a gleeful boast?

The birds chaunt melody on every bush;

The snake lies rolled in the chearful sun;

The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,

And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground:

Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,

And—whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,

Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,

As if a double hunt were heard at once,—

Let us sit down, and mark their yelling noise:

And—after conflict, such as was suppos'd

The wand'ring prince and Dido once enjoy'd,

When with a happy storm they were surpriz'd,

And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,—

We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,

Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;

Whilst hounds, and horns, and sweet melodious

Be unto us, as is a nurse's song [birds.

Of lullaby, to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine:

What signifies my deadly-standing eye,

My silence, and my cloudy melancholy?

My fleece of woolly hair, that now uncurls,

Even as an adder, when she doth unroll

To do some fatal execution?

No, madam, these are no venereal signs:

Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,

Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.

Hark, Tamora,—the empress of my soul,

Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,

This is the day of doom for Bassianus:

His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day;

Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,

And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.

Seest thou this letter?—take it up, I pray thee,

And give the king this fatal plotted scroll:—

Now question me no more, we are espied;

Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great empress, Bassianus comes:
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be. [Exit.

Enter Bassianus, and Lavinia.

Bas. Whom have we here? Rome's royal emperess,

Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop?

Or is it Dian, habited like her;

Who hath abandoned her holy groves,

To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!

Had I the power that, some say, Dian had,

Thy temples should be planted presently

With horns, as was Acteon's; and the hounds

Should drive² upon thy new-transformed limbs,

Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle emperess,

'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning;

And to be doubted, that your Moor and you

Are singled forth to try experiments:

Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day!

'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your³ swarth Cim-merian

Doth make your honour of his body's hue,

Spotted, detested, and abominable.

Why are you sequester'd from all your train?

Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,

And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,

Accompanied with a barbarous Moor,

If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,

Great reason that my noble lord be rated

For sauciness.—I pray you let us hence,

And let her joy her raven-colour'd love;

This valley fits the purpose passing well. [this.

Bas. The king, my brother, shall have note of Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long:

Good king! to be so mightily abus'd!

Tam. Why, have I patience to endure all this?

Enter Chiron, and Demetrius.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother,

Why does your highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?

These two have 'tic'd me hither to this place.

A barren and detested vale, you see, it is:

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,

O'ercome with moss, and baleful misletoe.

Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,

Unless the nightly owl, or fatal raven.

And when they shew'd me this abhorred pit,

They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,

Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,

Would make such fearful and confused cries,

As any mortal body, hearing it,

³ Swarth is black.—The Moor is called Cimmerian, from the affinity of blackness to darkness.

Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me, they would bind me here
Unto the body of a dismal yew;
And leave me to this miserable death.
And then they call'd me, foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ear did hear to such effect.
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed:
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not from henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs Bassianus.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to shew my strength. [Stabbing him likewise.

Lav. Ay come, Semiramis,—nay, barbarous Tamora!

For no name fits thy nature but thy own!

Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know, my boys, [wrong.

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's

Dem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to her;
First, thresh the corn, then after burn the straw:

This minion stood upon her chastity,

Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,

And with that painted hope¹ she braves your mightiness:

And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. And if she do, I would I were an eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when you have the honey you desire,
Let not this wasp out-live, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam; we will make that sure.—

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy

That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face,—

Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her.

Lav. Sweet lords, intreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: Let it be your glory,
To see her tears; but be your heart to them,

As unrelenting flint to drops of rain. [dam?

Lav. When did the tyger's young ones teach the

O, do not teach her wrath; she taught it thee:

The milk, thou suck'dst from her, did turn to marble;

Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.—

Yet every mother breeds not sons alike;

Do thou intreat her shew a woman's pity. [To Chiron.

Chi. What! would'st thou have me prove myself a bastard?

Lav. 'Tis true the raven doth not hatch a lark:

Yet have I heard, (O, could I find it now!)

The lion, mov'd with pity, did endure

To have his princely paws par'd all away.

Some say, that ravens foster for'orn children,

The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:

O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,

Nothing so kind, but something pitiful!

Tam. I know not what it means; away with her.

Lav. O, let me teach thee: for my father's sake,

That gave thee life, when well he might have slain thee,

Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,

5 Even for his sake am I now pitiless:—

Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain,

To save your brother from the sacrifice;

But fierce Andronicus would not relent:

Therefore away with her, use her as you will;

10 The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen,

And with thine own hands kill me in this place:

For 'tis not life, that I have begg'd so long;

Poor I was slain, when Bassianus dy'd.

15 Tam. What begg'st thou then? fond woman,
let me go. [more,

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg: and one thing

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell;

O, keep me from their worse than killing lust,

20 And tumble me into some loathsome pit;

Where never man's eye may behold my body:

Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. Should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:

No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.

25 Dem. Away; for thou hast staid us here too long.

Lav. No grace? no womanhood? Ah beastly creature!

The blot and enemy to our general name!

Confusion fall—

30 Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth,—Bring thou her husband; [Dragging off Lavinia.

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Exeunt.

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see, that you make her sure:

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,

'Till all th' Andronici be made away.

Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,

And let my spleenful sons this trull deflow'r.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.

Enter Aaron, with Quintus and Marcus.

Aar. Come on, my lords; the better foot before:

45 Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit,

Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quint. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.

Marc. And mine, I promise you; were't not for shame,

50 Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

[Marcus falls into the pit.

Quint. What, art thou fallen? What subtle hole
is this,

Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briars;

55 Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood,

As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?

A very fatal place it seems to me:—

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Marc. O brother, with the dimmallest object

60 That ever eye, with sight, made heart lament.

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find them here;

¹ Painted hope means specious hope, or ground of confidence more plausible than solid.

That he thereby may have a likely guess,
How these were they, that made away his brother.

[Exit Aaron.]

Marc. Why dost not comfort me and help me out

From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?

Quint. I am surprized with an uncouth fear:
A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints;
Mine herat suspects more than mine eye can see.

Marc. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quint. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart

Will not permit my eyes once to behold
The thing, whereat it trembles by surmise;
O, tell me how it is; for ne'er 'till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.

Marc. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quint. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

Marc. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring that lightens¹ all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,
And shews the ragged entrails of this pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus,
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand,—
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

[out:]

Quint. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Marc. And I no strength to climb without thy help.

[again,

Quint. Thy hand once more; I will not lose
'Till thou art here aloft, or I below:
'Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee.

[Falls in.]

Enter the Emperor, and Aaron.

Sat. Along with me:—I'll see what hole is
here,

And what he is, that now is leap'd into it.—
Say, who art thou, that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Marc. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

[jest:]

Sat. My brother dead? I know, thou dost but
He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'Tis not an hour since I left him there.

[alive,

Marc. We know not where you left him all
But, out, alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, with Attendants; Andronicus and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

[grief.

Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

[wound;

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,
The complot of this timeless tragedy:
And wonder greatly, that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

[She giveth Saturninus a letter.

Saturninus reads the letter.

“An if we miss to meet him handsomely,—
“Sweet huntsman—Bassianus'tis, we mean,—
“Do thou so much as dig the grave for him;
“Thou know'st our meaning: Look for thy “reward

“Among the nettles at the elder-tree,
“Which over-shades themouthof that same pit,
“Where we decreed to bury Bassianus,
“Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.”
O Tamora! was ever heard the like?

This is the pit, and this the elder-tree:
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.

[Shewing it.

Sat. Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life:—

[To Titus.

Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison;
There let them bide, until we have devis'd
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wond'rous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of mine accursed sons,—
Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them—

Sat. If it be prov'd! You see, it is apparent.—
Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord; yet let me be their bail:
For by my father's reverend tomb, I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will,
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see, thou follow me.

[ers.

Some bring the murder'd body, some the murder-
Let them not speak a word, the guilt is plain;
For, by my scul, were there worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king;

Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE V.

Enter Demetrius and Chiron, with Lavinia, ravish'd; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,

Who'twas that cut thy tongue, and ravish'd thee.

Chi,

¹ There is supposed to be a gem called a carbuncle, which emits not reflected but native light.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so ;
 And, if thy stumps will let thee, play the scribe.
 Dem. See how with signs and tokens she can scowl. [hands. 5
 Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy

 And so let's leave her to her silent walks. [self.
 Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang my- 10
 Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord. [Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron.
 Enter Marcus to Lavinia.
 Mar. Who's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast ?
 Cousin, a word ; Where is your husband ?
 If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would wake me !
 If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
 That I may slumber in eternal sleep !—
 Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
 Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare
 Of her two branches ; those sweet ornaments,
 Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep
 And might not gain so great a happiness, [in ; 25
 As half thy love ? Why dost not speak to me ?—
 Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
 Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
 Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
 Coming and going with thy honey breath.
 But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee ;
 And, lest thou should'st detect him, cut thy tongue.

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame !
 And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,—
 As from a conduit with their issuing spouts,—
 Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face,
 Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.
 Shall I speak for thee ; shall I say, 'tis so ?
 O, that I knew thy heart ; and knew the beast,
 That I might rail at him to ease my mind !
 Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,
 Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
 Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
 And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind :
 But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee ;
 A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,
 And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
 That better could have sew'd than Philomel.
 O, had the monster seen those lily hands
 Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute,
 And make the silken strings delight to kiss them ;
 He would not then have touch'd them for his life ;
 Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony,
 Which that sweet tongue hath made ;
 He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep,
 As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.
 Come, let us go, and make thy father blind ;
 For such a sight will blind a father's eye ;
 One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads ;
 What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes ?
 Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee ;
 O, could our mourning ease thy misery !
 30

[Exeunt.

A C T III.

SCENE I.

A Street in Rome.

Enter the Judges and Senators, with Marcus and Quintus bound, passing on the stage to the place of execution, and Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. HEAR me, grave fathers ! noble tribunes, stay !

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
 In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept ;
 For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed ;
 For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd ;
 And for these bitter tears, which you now see
 Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks ;
 Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
 Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought !
 For two-and-twenty sons I never wept,
 Because they died in honour's lofty bed.

[Andronicus lieth down, and the Judges pass by him.

For these, these tribunes, in the dust I write
 My heart's deep languor, and my soul's sad tears.
 Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite ;
 My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

O earth ! I will befriend thee more with rain,
 [Exeunt.

That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
 45 Than youthful April shall with all his showers :
 In summer's drought, I'll drop upon thee still ;
 In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow,
 And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
 So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

50 Enter Lucius, with his sword drawn.

O reverend tribunes ! gentle aged men !
 Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death ;
 And let me say, that never wept before,
 My tears are now prevailing orators.

55 Luc. O, noble father, you lament in vain ;
 The tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
 And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead :
 Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

60 Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man : if they did hear,
 They would not mark me ; or, if they did mark,
 All bootless unto them, they would not pity me.
 Therefore

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones;
 Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
 Yet in some sort they're better than the tribunes,
 For that they will not intercept my tale:
 When I do weep, they humbly at my feet,
 Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;
 And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
 Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
 A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones:

A stone is silent, and offendeth not;
 And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death.
 But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death:
 For which attempt, the judges have pronounc'd
 My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.
 Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive,
 That Rome is but a wilderness of tygers?

Tygers must prey; and Rome affords no prey,
 But me and mine: How happy art thou then,
 From these devourers to be banished?
 But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep;
 Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break;
 I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it then.

Marc. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ah me! this object kills me!

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her:
 Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand
 Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
 What fool hath added water to the sea?
 Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
 My grief was at the height, before thou cam'st,
 And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds.—
 Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
 For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;
 And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life;
 In bootless prayer have they been held up,
 And they have serv'd me to effectless use:
 Now, all the service I require of them
 Is, that the one will help to cut the other.—
 'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands;
 For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?

Marc. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts,
 That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
 Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage;
 Where like a sweet melodious bird it sang
 Sweet vary'd notes, enchanting every ear!

Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?

Marc. O, thus I found her, straying in the park,
 Seeking to hide herself; as doth the deer,
 That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my deer; and he, that wounded her,
 Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead:
 For now I stand as one upon a rock,
 Environ'd with a wilderness of sea;
 Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
 Expecting ever when some envious surge
 Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone;

Here stands my other son, a banish'd man;
 And here my brother, weeping at my woes:
 But that, which gives my soul the greatest spurn,
 Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.—

5 Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
 It would have madd'd me? What shall I do,
 Now I behold thy lovely body so?

Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears;
 Nor tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee;

10 Thy husband, he is dead; and, for his death,
 Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this:—
 Look, Marcus! ah, son Lucius, look on her!

When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
 Stood on her cheeks; as doth the honey dew

15 Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Marc. Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband:

Perchance, because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,
 Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.—

20 No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
 Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.—
 Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;

Or make some signs how I may do thee ease.
 Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,

And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain;
 Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks

How they are stain'd; like meadows yet not dry
 With miry slime left on them by a flood?

30 And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,
 'Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
 And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?
 Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows

35 Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
 What shall we do? Let us, that have our tongues,
 Plot some device of further misery,

To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at your grief,

See, how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Marc. Patience, dear niece:—good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot,
 45 Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine, [own.

For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:

50 Had she a tongue to speak, now she would say
 That to her brother which I said to thee;
 His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,

Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
 O, what a sympathy of woe is this!

55 As far from help as limbo is from bliss.

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
 Sends thee this word,—That if thou love thy sons,

Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
 60 Or any one of you, chop off your hand,

And send it to the king: he for the same,
 Will send thee hither both thy sons alive;

And that shall be the ransom for their fault.
Tit. O, gracious emperor! O, gentle Aaron!

65 Did ever raven sing so like a lark,

That

That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor my hand;
Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?

Luc. Stay, father; for that noble hand of thine,
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn:
My youth can better spare my blood than you;
And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe, [Rome, 10
Writing destruction on the enemies' castle?

O, none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end. [along, 15

Aar. Nay, come, agree, whose hand shall go
For fear they die before their pardon come.

Marc. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go. [these

Tit. Sirs, strive no more; such wither'd herbs as 20
Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Marc. And, for our father's sake, and mother's
Now let me shew a brother's love to thee. [care, 25

Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Marc. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both; 30
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:—
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say ere half an hour pass. [Aside. 35

[He cuts off Titus's hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus again.

Tit. Now, stay your strife; what shall be, is dispatch'd.—

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers; bid him bury it;
More hath it merited, that let it have.

As for my sons, say, I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus: and for thy hand,
Look by-and-by to have thy sons with thee:—
Their heads, I mean.—O, how this villainy [Aside.
Doth fat me with the very thought of it!

Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face. [Exit.

Tit. O hear!—I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:

If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call,—What, wilt thou kneel with me?

[To Lavinia.

Do then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers;

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds,
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Marc. O! brother, speak with possibilities,

And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom;
Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament,

5 Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes:
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoln face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?

I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do blow!

She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:

Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;

15 Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd:

For why? my bowels cannot hide her woes,

But like a drunkard must I vomit them.

Then give me leave; for losers will have leave

To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter Messenger, bringing in two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repay'd

For that good hand, thou sent'st the emperor.

Here are the heads of thy two noble sons;

25 And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back;

Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd:

That woe is me to think upon thy woes,

More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit.

Marc. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,

And be my heart an ever-burning hell!

These miseries are more than may be borne!

To weep with them that weep, doth ease some deal;

But sorrow flouted at is double death. [wound,

35 Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a

And yet detested life not shrink thereat!

That ever death should let life bear his name,

Where life hath no more interest but to breathe!

[Lavinia kisses him.

40 Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfortless,

As frozen water to a starved snake. [end?

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an

Marc. Now, farewell, flattery: Die, Andronicus;

Thou dost not slumber; see, thy two sons' heads;

45 Thy warlike hand; thy mangled daughter here;

Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight

Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,

Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah! now no more will I controul thy griefs:

50 Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand

Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight

The closing up of your most wretched eyes!

Now is a time to storm, why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! [hour.

55 Marc. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this

Tit. Why I have not another tear to shed:

Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,

And would usurp upon my watry eyes,

And make them blind with tributary tears;

60 Then which way shall I find revenge's cave?

For these two heads do seem to speak to me;

And threat me, I shall never come to bliss,

'Till all these mischiefs be return'd again,

† Castle in this place signifies a close helmet.

Even

Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do.—
You heavy people, circle me about;
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made.—Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear:
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things;
Bear thou my hand, sweetwench, between thy teeth.
As for thee, boy, go get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there;
And, if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt.]Manet Lucius.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome!
Farewell, proud Rome! 'till Lucius comes again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O, 'would thou wert as thou 'tore hast been!
But now nor Lucius, nor Lavinia lives,
But in oblivion, and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;
And make proud Saturninus and his emperess
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

[Exit Lucius.]

S C E N E II.

An Apartment in Titus's house.A banquet. Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and young Lucius, a boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look, you eat no more Than will preserve just so much strength in us,
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus, unknot that sorrow-wreathen knot;
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our ten-fold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.—
Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

[To Lavinia.]

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
May run into that sink, and, soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.

Marc. Fye, brother, fye! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee doat already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.

What violent hands can she lay on her life?

Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands;—

To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands;
Lest we remember still, that we have none.—

5 Fye, fye, how frantically I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands!—

Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:—
Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says;—

10 I can interpret all her martyr'd signs;—
She says, she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew'd with her sorrows, mesh'd upon her cheeks:—

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect,

15 As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,

But I, of these, will wrest an alphabet,
And, by still practice¹, learn to know the meaning.

20 Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments;

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Marc. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

25 Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of
And tears will quickly melt thy life away. [tears.]

[Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.]
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Marc. At that that I have kill'd, my lord; a fly.

30 Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my heart;
Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:

A deed of death, done on the innocent,
Becomes not Titus' brother; Get thee gone;

I see, thou art not for my company.

35 Marc. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and mother?
How would he hang his slender gilded wings,

And buz lamenting doings in the air?
Poor harmless fly!

40 That with his pretty buzzing melody, [him.]
Came here to make us merry; and thou hast kill'd

Marc. Pardon me, sir; it was a black ill-favour'd fly,

Like to the emperess' Moor; therefore I kill'd him,

45 Tit. O, O, O,
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,

For thou hast done a charitable deed,
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;

Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor,
50 Come hither purposely to poison me.—

There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.
Ah, sirrah!—yet I think we are not brought so low,

But that, between us, we can kill a fly,
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

55 Marc. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought
on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances.

Tit. Come, take away.—Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee

60 Sad stories, chanced in the times of old.—
Come, boy, and go with me; thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begins to dazzle.

[Exeunt.]¹ By constant or continual practice.

A C T IV.

SCENE I.

Titus's House.

Enter young Lucius, and Lavinia running after him; and the boy flies from her, with his books under his arm. Enter Titus and Marcus.

Boy. HELP, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia

Follows me every where, I know not why:—

Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes!

Alas! sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Marc. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt. [harm.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs? [mean:—

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius:—Somewhat doth she

See, Lucius, see, how much she makes of thee:

Some whither would she have thee go with her.

Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee,

Sweet poetry, and Tully's oratory.

Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,

Unless some fit of phrenzy do possess her:

For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,

Extremity of griefs would make men mad;

And I have read, that Hecuba of Troy

Ran mad through sorrow; That made me to fear;

Although, my lord, I know, my noble aunt

Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,

And would not, but in fury, fright my youth:

Which made me down to throw my books, and fly;

Causeless, perhaps: But pardon me, sweet aunt:

And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,

I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will. [this?

Tit. How now, Lavinia?—Marcus, what means

Some book there is that she desires to see:—

Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy.—

But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;

Come, and take choice of all my library,

And so beguile thy sorrow, 'till the heavens

Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.—

Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think, she means, that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact;—Ay, more there was:—

Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?

Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis;

My mother gave it me.

Marc. For love of her that's gone,

Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! soft! how busily she turns the leaves!

Help her: What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?

This is the tragic tale of Philomel,
And treats of Tereus' treason, and his rape;

5 And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Marc. See, brother, see; note, how she quotes¹ the leaves. [girl,

Tit. Lavinia, wer't thou thus surpriz'd, sweet Ravish'd, and wrong'd, as Philomela was,

10 Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?

See, see!—

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,

(O, had we never, never, hunted there!)

Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,

15 By nature made for murders, and for rapes.

Marc. O, why should nature build so foul a den,
Unless the gods delight in tragedies!

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl,—for here are none but friends,—

20 What Roman lord it was durst do the deed:

Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,

That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?

Marc. Sit down, sweet niece;—brother, sit down by me.

25 Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,

Inspire me, that I may this treason find!—

My lord, look here;—look here, Lavinia:

[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with his feet and mouth.

30 This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,

This after me, when I have writ my name

Without the help of any hand at all.

Curs'd be that heart, that forc'd us to this shift!—

35 Write thou, good niece; and here display at last,

What God will have discover'd for revenge:

Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,

That we may know the traitors, and the truth!

[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.

40 Tit. O, do you read, my lord, what she hath writ?

Stuprum—Chiron—Demetrius.

Marc. What, what!—the lustful sons of Tamora

Performers of this hateful bloody deed?

45 Tit. —Magne Dominator Poli,

Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?

Marc. O, calm thee, gentle lord! although, I know,

There is enough written upon this earth,

50 To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,

And arm the minds of infants to exclaims.

My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;

And swear with me,—as with the woeful feere²,

55 And father, of that chaste dishonour'd dame,

Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape,—

That we will prosecute, by good advice,

¹ To quote is to observe. ² Feere signifies a companion, and here metaphorically a husband.

Mortal revenge upon these traiterous Goths;
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tim. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how.
But if you hurt these bear-whelps, then beware:
The dam will wake; and, if she wind you once,
She's with the lion deeply still in league,
And lulls him while she playeth on her back,
And, when he sleeps, will she do what she list.
You're a young huntsman; Marcus; let it alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry northern wind
Will blow these sands, like Sybil's leaves, abroad,
And where's your lesson then?—Boy, what say

Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man, [you?]
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe
For these bad bond-men to the yoke of Rome.

Marc. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full
For this ungrateful country done the like. [oft

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into my armoury;
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy
Shall carry from me to the emperess' sons
Presents, that I intend to send them both:

Come, come; thou'lt do my message, wilt thou not? [sire.

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosom, grand-

Tit. No, no, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come:—Marcus, look to my house;
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court;

Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.
[Exeunt.

Marc. O heavens, can you hear a good man
And not relent, or not compassionate him? [groan,
Marcus, attend him in his ecstacy;
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,
Than foe-men's marks upon his batter'd shield:
But yet so just, that he will not revenge:—
Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus! [Exit.

SCENE II.

Changes to the Palace.

*Enter Aaron, Chiron, and Demetrius, at one door;
and at another door, young Lucius and another,
with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.*

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver to us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus;—
And pray the Roman gods, confound you both.

[Aside. Dem. Gramercy¹, lovely Lucius; What's the news? [news,

Boy. That you are both decypher'd, that's the
For villains mark'd with rape. [Aside.] May it please you,

My grandsire, well-advis'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,

To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say;
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well:
And so I leave you both, [Aside] like bloody villains. [Exit.

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about?

10 Let's see;

*Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus,
Non eget Mauri jaculis nec arcu.*

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it well:
I read it in the grammar long ago. [have it.

15 Aar. Ay, just;—a verse in Horace;—right, you

Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no fond jest: the old man hath found their guilt;

20 And sends the weapons wrapp'd about with lines,

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick. [Aside.

But were our witty emperess well a-foot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit.

25 But let her rest in her unrest a-while.—

And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers, and, more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height?

It did me good, before the palace gate

30 To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a lord
Basely insinuate, and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, lord Demetrius?

Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

35 Dem. I would, we had a thousand Roman dames
At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacketh but your mother to say Amen.

40 Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go; and pray to all the gods
For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. Pray to the devils; the gods have given us o'er. [Aside. Flourish.

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish
thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft; who comes here?

Enter Nurse, with a Black-a-moor Child.

50 Nurse. Good-morrow, lords:

O tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor?

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all.
Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nurse. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!

55 Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep?
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nurse. O, that which I would hide from heaven's eye, [grace;—

60 Our emperess' shame, and stately Rome's dis-
She is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom?

Nurse. I mean, she is brought to bed.

Aar. Well, God

Give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Nurse. A devil.

[issue.

Aar. Why, then she is the devil's dam; a joyful

Nurse. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful
Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad [issue:
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.

The emperess sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. Out, out, you whore! is black so base a hue?—

Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou
Canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done¹ thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.
Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice!
Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend!

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not die.

Nurse. Aaron, it must; the mother wills it so.

Aar. What, must it, nurse? then let no man but I,
Do execution on my flesh and blood. [point:

Dem. I'll broach² the tadpole on my rapier's
Nurse. give it me; my sword shall soon dispatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.

Stay, murd'rous villains! will you kill your bro-

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky, [ther?

That shone so brightly when this boy was got,

He dies upon my scymitar's sharp point,

That touches this my first-born son and heir!

I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,

With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war,

Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!

Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alehouse painted signs!

Coal-black is better than another hue,

In that it scorns to bear another hue:

For all the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hourly in the flood.—

Tell the emperess from me, I am of age

To keep mine own; excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this, myself;

The vigour, and the picture of my youth:

This, before all the world, do I prefer;

This, maugre all the world, will I keep safe,

Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this, our mother is for ever sham'd.

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nurse. The emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy. [bears:

Aar. Why there's the privilege your beauty

Fye, treacherous hue! that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of the heart!

Here is a young lad fram'd of another leer³:

Look, how the black slave smiles upon the father;

As who should say, Old lad, I am thine own.

He is your brother, lords; sensibly fed

Of that self-blood that first gave life to you;

And, from that womb, where you imprison'd were,

He is enfranchised and come to light:

Nay, he's your brother by the surer side,

Although my seal is stamped in his face.

Nurse. Aaron, what shall I say unto the emperess?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,

And we will all subscribe to thy advice;

Save you the child, so we may all be safe.

Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you:

15 Keep there: now talk at pleasure of your safety.

[They sit on the ground.

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?

Aar. Why, so, brave lords; When we all join in league,

I am a lamb: but if you brave the Moor,

The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,

The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.—

But, say again, how many saw the child?

Nurse. Cornelia the midwife, and myself,

25 And no one else, but the deliver'd emperess.

Aar. The emperess, the midwife, and yourself:—

Two may keep counsel, when the third's away:

Go to the emperess; tell her this I said:—

[He kills her.

30 Weke, weke!—so cries a pig, prepar'd to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore

didst thou this?

Aar. O lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy:

Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours?

35 A long-tongu'd babbling gossip! no, lords, no.

And now be it known to you my full intent.

Not far, one Muliteus lives, my countryman;

His wife but yesternight was brought to-bed;

His child is like to her, fair as you are:

40 Go pack⁴ with him, and give the mother gold,

And tell them both the circumstance of all;

And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,

And be received for the emperor's heir,

And substituted in the place of mine,

45 To calm this tempest whirling in the court;

And let the emperor dandle him for his own.

Hark ye, my lords; yese, I have given her physick,

[Pointing to the Nurse.

And you must needs bestow her funeral;

50 The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms:

This done, see that you take no longer days,

But send the midwife presently to me.

The midwife, and the nurse, well made away,

Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

55 Chi. Aaron, I see, thou wilt not trust the air

With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,

Herself, and hers, are highly bound to thee.

[Exeunt.

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies;

There to dispose this treasure in my arms,

And secretly to greet the emperess' friends.—

¹ To do is here used obscenely. ² A broach is a spit.—I'll spit the tadpole. ³ Leer is complexion or hue. ⁴ To pack is to contrive insidiously.

Come on, you thick-lip'd slave, I bear you hence;
For it is you that put us to our shifts:
I'll make you feed on berries, and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave; and bring you up
To be a warrior, and command a camp. [Exit.

S C E N E III.

A Street near the Palace.

Enter Titus, old Marcus, young Lucius, and other Gentlemen with bows; and Titus bears the arrows with letters on the ends of them.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come;—Kinsmen, this is the way:—

Sir boy, now let me see your archery;
Look, ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight:
Terras Astrea reliquit:—be you remember'd,
Marcus. [tools.

She's gone, she's fled.—Sirs, take you to your
You, cousins, shall go sound the ocean,
And cast your nets; haply, you may find her in the sea;

Yet there's as little justice as at land:—
No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;
'Tis you must dig with mattock, and with spade,
And pierce the inmost centre of the earth;
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition:
Tell him, it is for justice, and for aid;
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.—
Ah, Rome!—Well, well; I made thee miserable,
What time I threw the people's suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me.—
Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man of war unsearch'd;
This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her hence,
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Marc. O, Publius, is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns,

By day and night to attend him carefully;
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
'Till time beget some careful remedy.

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Goths; and with revengeful war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine. [ters;

Tit. Publius, how now? how now, my mas-

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you
If you will have revenge from hell, you shall:
Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd, [else,
He thinks with Jove in heaven, or somewhere
So that perforce you needs must stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong, to feed me with delays.
I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.—

Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we;
No big-bon'd men, fram'd of the Cyclops' size;

But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back;
Yet wrung with wrongs, more than our backs can bear:—

And sith there is no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven; and move the gods,
To send down justice for to wreak our wrongs:
Come, to this gear. You are a good archer,
Marcus. [He gives them the arrows.

Ad Martem, that's for myself;— [nem:—

Here, boy, to Pallas:—Here to Mercury:—
To Saturn, and to Cælus; not to Saturnine,—
You were as good to shoot against the wind.—

We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O,
well said, Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap, give it to Pallas.

Marc. My lord, I am a mile beyond the moon;
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?
See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Marc. This was the sport, my lord: when Pub-lius shot,

The bull being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock;
That down fell both the ram's horns in the court;

And who should find them but the emperess' villain? [choose

She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not
But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give your lordship joy!

Enter a Clown, with a basket and two pigeons.
News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?
Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clown. Ho! the gibbet-maker? he says, that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hang'd 'till the next week.

Tit. Tut, what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clown. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clown. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clown. From heaven? alas, sir, I never came there: God forbid, I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days! Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs', to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be, to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clown. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

! The Clown means to say, to the tribune of the people.

Tit.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither; make no more ado,
But give your pigeons to the emperor:
By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.
Hold, hold;—mean while, here's money for thy

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clown. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach, you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward.
I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clown. I warrant you, sir: let me alone. [it.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration;
For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant:—
And when thou hast given it to the emperor,
Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clown. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go:—Publius, follow me. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

The Palace.

*Enter Emperor, and Emperess, and her two sons;
the Emperor brings the arrows in his hand,
that Titus shot.*

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these? Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus over-borne,
Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent
Of legal justice, us'd in such contempt?

My lords, you know, as do the mightful gods,
However the disturbers of our peace
Buz in the people's ears, there nought hath past
But even with law, against the wilful sons
Of old Andronicus. And what an if

His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?

And now he writes to heaven for his redress:

See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;

This to Apollo; this to the god of war:

Sweet scrolls, to fly about the streets of Rome!

What's this, but libelling against the senate,

And blazoning our injustice every where?

A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?

As who would say, in Rome no justice were.

But, if I live, his feigned ecstasies

Shall be no shelter to these outrages:

But he and his shall know, that justice lives

In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep,

He'll so awake, as she in fury shall

Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, most lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons,

Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd his
heart;

And rather comfort his distressed plight,

Than prosecute the meanest, or the best,
For these contempts. Why, thus it shall become

[Aside.

High-witted Tamora to gloze with all:

But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,

Thy life-blood out: if Aaron now be wise,

Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.—

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow? wouldst thou speak with us? [perial.

Clown. Yes, forsooth, an your mistership be em-

Tam. Emperess I am, but yonder sits the emperor.

Clown. 'Tis he.—God, and saint Stephen, give you good den:

I have brought you a letter, and a couple of pigeons here. [The Emperor reads the letter.

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.

Clown. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hang'd.

Clown. Hang'd! By'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. [Exit.

Sat. Despightful and intolerable wrongs!

Shall I endure this monstrous villainy?

I know from whence this same device proceeds:

May this be borne?—as if his traitorous sons,

That dy'd by law for murder of our brother,

Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully!—

Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;

Nor age, nor honour, shall shape privilege:—

For this proud mock, I'll be thy slaughter-man;

Sly frantick wretch, that holp'st to make me great,

In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter Æmilius.

Sat. What news with thee, Æmilius?

Æmil. Arm, arm, my lords; Rome never had more cause!

The Goths have gather'd head; and with a power

Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,

They hither march amain, under conduct

Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;

Who threats, in course of his revenge, to do

As much as ever Coriolanus did:

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths?

These tidings nip me; and I hang the head,

As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms.

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach:

'Tis he, the common people love so much;

Myself have often over-heard them say,

(When I have walked like a private man)

That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully, [ror.

And they have wish'd that Lucius were their empe-strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius;
And will revolt from me, to succour him. [name.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy

Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it?

The eagle suffers little birds to sing,

And is not careful what they mean thereby;

That is, his revenges.

Knowing, that with the shadow of his wings
He can at pleasure stint their melody:
Even so may'st thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit: for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks¹ to sheep;
When as the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will:
For I can smooth, and fill his aged ear
With golden promises; that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.—

Go thou before, be our ambassador: [To Æmilius.
Say, that the emperor requests a parley
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting.
Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably:
5 And if he stand on hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.
Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. [Ex.
Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus;
And temper him with all the art I have,
10 To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.
Sat. Then go successfully, and plead to him.
[Exeunt.

A C T V.

S C E N E I.

The Camp, at a small distance from Rome.

Enter Lucius and Goths, with drum and soldiers.

Luc. APPROVED warriors, and my faithful
friends,

I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signify, what hate they bear their emperor,
And how desirous of our sight they are.

Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
Imperious, and impatient of your wrongs;
And, wherein Rome hath done you any scathe,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,

Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort;
Whose high exploits, and honourable deeds,
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,
Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,—
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day,
Led by their master to the flower'd fields,—
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Omn. And, as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.
But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading Aaron, with his child in his arms.

Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I
To gaze upon a ruinous monastery; [stray'd
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall:

I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
The crying babe controul'd with this discourse:

"Peace, tawny slave; half me, and half thy dam!

"Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,

"Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,

"Villain, thou might'st have been an emperor:

"But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,

"They never do beget a coal-black calf.
"Peace, villain, peace!"—even thus he rates the babe,—

"For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
"Who, when he knowst thou art the emperess' babe,
"Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake."
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,
30 Surpriz'd him suddenly; and brought him hither,
To use as you think needful of the man. [vil.

Luc. O worthy Goth! this is the incarnate devil
That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand:

This is the pearl that pleas'd your emperess' eye;
35 And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.—

Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither would'st thou convey
This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speak? What! deaf? No! not a word?

40 A halter, soldiers; hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy, he is of royal blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.—
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;

45 A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder².

Aar. Lucius, save the child;
And bear it from me to the emperess.

If thou do this, I'll show thee wond'rous things,
50 That highly may advantage thee to hear:

If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more; But vengeance rot you all!

Luc. Say on; and, if it please me which thou speak'st,

55 Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.

Aar. An if it please thee? why, assure thee,
Lucius,

'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,

60 Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Complots of mischief, treason; villainies

¹ Honey-stalks are clover-flowers, which contain a sweet juice.—It is common for cattle to overcharge themselves with clover, and die. ² Get me a ladder, has been in most of the editions given to Aaron, and properly, as meaning hang me.

Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd :

And this shall all be buried by my death,
Unless thou swear to me, my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind ; I say, thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Whom should I swear by ? thou believ'st
no god ;

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath ?

Aar. What if I do not ? as indeed, I do not :

Yet,—for I know thou art religious,

And hast a thing within thee, called conscience ;

With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies,

Which I have seen thee careful to observe,—

Therefore I urge thy oath ;—For that, I know,

An idiot holds his bauble for a god,

And keeps the oath, which by that god he swears ;

To that I'll urge him :—Therefore thou shalt vow

By that same god, what god soe'er it be,

That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,—

To save my boy, nourish, and bring him up ;

Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my god, I swear to thee, I will.

Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on the emperess.

Luc. O most insatiate, luxurious woman !

Aar. Tut, Lucius ! this was but a deed of charity,
To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.

'Twas her two sons, that murder'd Bassianus :

They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,

And cut her hands off ; and trimm'd her as thou saw'st. [ming ?

Luc. O, detestable villain ! call'st thou that trim-

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd ; and 'twas

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O, barbarous beastly villains, like thyself !

Aar. Indeed, I was the tutor to instruct them ;

That coddling¹ spirit had they from their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set ;

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,

As true a dog as ever fought at head.—

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.

I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole,

Where the dead corps of Bassianus lay :

I wrote the letter that thy father found,

And hid the gold within the letter mentioned,

Confederate with the queen, and her two sons :

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,

Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it ?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand ;

And, when I had it, drew myself apart,

And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall,

When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads ;

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,

That both mine eyes were rainy like to his ;

And when I told the emperess of this sport,

She swooned almost at my pleasing tale,

And, for my tidings, gave me twenty kisses.

Goth. What ! canst thou say all this, and never blush ?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds ?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day, (and yet, I think,

5 Few come within the compass of my curse)

Wherein I did not some notorious ill :

As kill a man, or else devise his death ;

Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it ;

Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself ;

10 Set deadly enmity between two friends ;

Make poor men's cattle break their necks ;

Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,

And bid the owners quench them with their tears.

Of have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,

15 And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,

Even when the sorrow almost was forgot ;

And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,

Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,

Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.

20 Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things,

As willingly as one would kill a fly ;

And nothing grieves me heartily indeed,

But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil² ; for he must not die

25 So sweet a death, as hanging presently.

Aar. If there be devils, 'would I were a devil,

To live and burn in everlasting fire ;

So I might have your company in hell,

But to torment you with my bitter tongue !

30 Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter Æmilius.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome
Desires to be admitted to your presence.

35 Luc. Let him come near.

Welcome, Æmilius, what's the news from Rome ?

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,

The Roman emperor greets you all by me :

40 And, for he understands you are in arms,

He craves a parley at your father's house ;

Willing you to demand your hostages,

And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

Goth. What says our general ?

45 Luc. Æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges

Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,

And we will come. March away. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Titus' Palace in Rome.

Enter Tamora, Chiron, and Demetrius, disguis'd.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment.

I will encounter with Andronicus ;

55 And say, I am Revenge, sent from below,

To join with him, and right his heinous wrongs.

Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps,

To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge ;

Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,

60 And work confusion on his enemies.

[They knock, and Titus opens his study door.

¹ i. e. that love of bed-sports.—Cod is a word still used in Yorkshire for a pillow. ² Mr. Steevens here observes, that it appears, from these words, that the audience were entertained with part of the apparatus of an execution, and that Aaron was mounted on a ladder, as ready to be turned off.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick to make me ope the door;
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect?
You are deceiv'd: for what I mean to do,
See here, in bloody lines, I have set down;
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No, not a word: How can I grace my talk,
Wanting a hand to give it that accord?
Thou hast the odds of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou would'st talk with me.

Tit. I am not mad: I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, these crimson lines;
Witness these trenches, made by grief and care;
Witness the tiring day, and heavy night;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well
For our proud emperess, mighty Tamora:
Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou, sad man, I am not Tamora;
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:
I am Revenge; sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,
By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.
Come down, and welcome me to this world's slight;
Confer with me of murder, and of death:
There's not a hollow cave, nor lurking-place,
No vast obscurity, or misty vale,
Where bloody murder, or detested rape,
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offenders quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me,
To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape, and Murder, stands;
Now give some 'surance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels;
And then I'll come, and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globes.
Provide two proper palfreys, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And, when thy car is loaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon wheel
Trot, like a servile footman, all day long;
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east,
Until his very downfall in the sea:
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are they thy ministers? what are they call'd?

Tam. Rapine, and Murder; therefore called so,
'Cause they take vengeance on such kind of men.

Tit. Good lord, how like the emp'ress' sons they are!

And you, the emp'ress! But we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee:

And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,

I will embrace thee in it by-and-by.

[Exit Titus from above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy:
Whate'er I forge, to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches.
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius, his son;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter Titus.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:
Welcome, dread fury, to my woeful house;—
Rapine, and Murder, you are welcome too:—
How like the emp'ress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor:—
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?—
For, well I wot, the emp'ress never wags,
But in her company there is a Moor;
And, would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil:
But welcome, as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?

Dem. Shew me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi. Shew me a villain, that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him. [wrong]

Tam. Shew me a thousand, that have done thee
And I will be revenged on them all. [Rome]

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of
And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer.—

Go thou with him, and, when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,

Good Rapine, stab him; he is a ravisher.—

Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court
There is a queen, attended by a Moor;

Well may'st thou know her by thy own proportion;
For up and down she doth resemble thee;

I pray thee, do on them some violent death,
They have been violent to me and mine. [do]

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we
But would it please thee, good Andronicus,

To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths;

And bid him come and banquet at thy house:
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,

I will bring in the emp'ress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes;

And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.

What says Andronicus to this device?
Tit. Marcus, my brother!—'tis sad Titus calls

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt enquire him out among the Goths:

Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;

Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him, the emperor and the emperess too

Feast at my house; and he shall feast with them.
This

This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life,

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again.

[Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me. [me;

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [to her sons.] What say you, boys? will you abide with him,

Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor,
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,
And tarry with him 'till I come again. [mad;

Tit. I know them all, though they suppose me
And will o'er-reach them in their own devices,
A pair of cursed hell-hounds, and their dam!

[Aside.

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure, leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now goes
To lay a complot to betray thy foes. [Exit Tamora.

Tit. I know, thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell [ploy'd?

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be em-

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do.—
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter Publius, and Servants.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The emperess' sons,
I take them, Chiron, and Demetrius. [ceiv'd;

Tit. Fye, Publius, fye! thou art too much de-
The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name:
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them:
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it: therefore bind them sure;
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Exit Titus.

Chi. Villains, forbear; we are the em'press' sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded,—

Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word:
Is he sure bound? look, that you bind them fast.

Re-enter Titus Andronicus with a knife, and Lavinia with a bason.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound:—

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me;
But let them hear what fearful words I utter.—

O villains, Chiron and Demetrius! [mud;

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with
This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.

You kill'd her husband; and, for that vile fault,

Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death;

My hand cut off, and made a merry jest; [dear

Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that, more

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,

Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.

What would you say, if I should let you speak?

Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace.

Hark, wretches, how I mean to martyr you.

This one hand yet is left to cut your throats;
Whilst that Lavinia 'twixt her stumps doth hold
The bason, that receives your guilty blood.

You know, your mother means to feast with me,
And call's herself Revenge, and thinks me mad,—

Hark, villains; I will grind your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it I'll make a paste;

And of the paste a coffin¹ will I rear,

And make two pasties of your shameful heads;

And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,

Like to the earth, swallow her own increase.

This is the feast that I have bid her to,

And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;

For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,

And worse than Prognè I will be reveng'd:

And now prepare your throats.—Lavinia, come,

Receive the blood; and, when that they are dead,

Let me go grind their bones to powder small,

And with this hateful liquor temper it;

And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.

Come, come, be every one officious

To make this banquet; which I wish might prove

More stern and bloody than the Centaur's feast.

[He cuts their throats.

So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook.

And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.

[Excunt.

SCENE III.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths, with Aaron prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since it is my father's mind,
That I repair to Rome, I am content. [will.

Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil; [Moor,

Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,

'Till he be brought unto the emperor's face,

For testimony of these foul proceedings:

And see the ambush of our friends be strong;

I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,

And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!—

[Excunt Goths, with Aaron.

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.—[Flourish.

The trumpets shew the emperor is at hand.

Sound trumpets. Enter Saturninus and Tamora, with Tribunes and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one?

Luc. What boots it thee to call thyself a sun?

Marc. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle²;

These quarrels must be quietly debated.

The feast is ready, which the careful Titus

Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,

For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome:

Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will,

[Hautboys.

he breaks his mind.

² i. e. begin the parley.—We yet say

A table brought in. Enter Titus, like a cook, placing the meat on the table, and Lavinia, with a veil over her face.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen;

Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius; And welcome, all: although the cheer be poor, 'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well, To entertain your highness, and your emperess.

Tam. We are beholden to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this;

Was it well done of rash Virginius,

To slay his daughter with his own right hand,

Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord? [shame,

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;

A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,

For me most wretched to perform the like:

Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;

And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die!

[He kills her.

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural, and unkind?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made I am as woeful as Virginius was:

And have a thousand times more cause than he To do this outrage;—and it is now done.

Sat. What, was she ravished? tell, who did the deed?

Tit. Will't please you eat? will't please your

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron, and Demetrius:

They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue,

And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pye;

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,

Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.

'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.

[He stabs Tamara.

Sat. Die, frantick wretch, for this accursed deed.

[He stabs Titus.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?

There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed.

[Lucius stabs Saturninus.

Marc. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl

Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,

O, let me teach you how to knit again

This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,

These broken limbs again into one body.

Goth. Let Rome herself be bane unto herself:

And she, whom mighty kingdoms curtsy to,

Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,

Do shameful execution on herself.

Marc. But if my frosty signs and chaps of age, Grave witnesses of true experience,

Cannot induce you to attend my words,—

5 Speak, Rome's dear friend; as erst our ancestor,

[To Lucius,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse,

To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear,

The story of that baleful burning night,

10 When subtle Greeks surpriz'd king Priam's Troy;

Tell us, what Sinop hath bewitch'd our ears,

Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.—

My heart is not compact of flint, nor steel;

15 Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,

But floods of tears will drown my oratory,

And break my very utterance; even in the time

When it should move you to attend me most,

Lending your kind commiseration:

20 Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;

Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you,

That cursed Chiron and Demetrius

Were they that murdered our emperor's brother;

25 And they it was, that ravished our sister:

For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded;

Our father's tears despis'd; and basely cozen'd

Of that true hand, that fought Rome's quarrel out,

And sent her enemies unto the grave.

30 Lastly, myself unkindly banished,

The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out.

To beg relief among Rome's enemies;

Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,

And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend:

35 And I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you,

That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood:

And from her bosom took the enemy's point,

Sheathing the steel in my advent'rous body.

Alas! you know, I am no vaunter, I;

40 My scars can witness, dumb although they are,

That my report is just, and full of truth.

But, soft, methinks, I do digress too much,

Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me;

For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

45 Marc. Now is my turn to speak; Behold this child,

Of this was Tamora delivered;

The issue of an irreligious Moor,

Chief architect and plotter of these woes:

50 The villain is alive in Titus' house,

And as he is, to witness this is true.

Now judge, what cause had Titus to revenge

These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,

Or more than any living man could bear.

55 Now you have heard the truth, what say you, Romans?

Have we done ought amiss? Shew us wherein,

And, from the place where you behold us now,

The poor remainder of Andronici

60 Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,

And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,

And make a mutual closure of our house.

Speak, Romans, speak: and if you say we shall,

Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Am.

Æm. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,
And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our emperor; for, well I know,
The common voice do cry, it shall be so.

Marc. Lucius, all hail; Rome's royal emperor!
Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house;
And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.

Lucius, all hail, Rome's gracious governor!
Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; May I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!
But, gentle people, give me aim a while,—
For nature puts me to a heavy task;—
Stand all aloof;—but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk:—
O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,

[Kisses Titus.
These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face,
The last true duties of thy noble son!

Marc. Ay, tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:
O, were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us

To melt in showers: Thy grandsire lov'd thee well:
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet, and agreeing with thine infancy;
In that respect then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tenderspring,
Because kind nature doth require it so:

Friends should associate friends in grief and woe:
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him. [heart

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my

'Would I were dead, so you did live again!—
O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choak me, if I ope my mouth.

Enter Romans, with Aaron.

Rom. You sad Andronici, have done with woes;
Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish
him;

10 There let him stand, and rave and cry for food:
If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?

15 I am no baby, I, that, with base prayers,
I should repent the evils I have done;
Ten thousand, worse than ever yet I did,
Would I perform, if I might have my will:
20 If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor
hence,

25 And give him burial in his father's grave:
My father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.

30 As for that heinous tyger, Tamora,
No funeral rites, nor man in mournful weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts, and birds of prey:
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity.

35 See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
From whom our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then, afterwards, to order well the state;
That like events may ne'er it ruin.

[Exeunt omnes.

PROLOGUE.

IN Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece
The princes orgillous², their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: Sixty and nine, that wore
Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay
Put forth towards Phrygia: and their vow is made
To ransack Troy; within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps: And that's the quarrel.
To Tenedos they come;
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
Their warlike fraughtage: Now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city (Dardan, and Thymbria, Ilios, Chetas, Trojan,

And Antenoridas) with massy staples,
And corresponsive and fulfilling³ bolts,
Sperrs⁴ up the sons of Troy.—
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
5 On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard:—And hither am I come
A prologue arm'd,—but not in confidence
Of author's pen, or actor's voice; but suited
In like conditions as our argument,—
10 To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o'er the vaunt⁵ and firstlings of those broils,
'Ginning in the middle; starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
15 Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

Troy. Priam's Palace.

Enter Pandarus and Troilus.

Troi. CALL here my varlet⁶, I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,

That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan, that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this geer ne'er be mended?

Troi. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,

¹ Mr. Pope (after Dryden) informs us, that the story of Troilus and Cressida was originally the work of one Lollius, a Lombard: but Dryden goes yet further; he declares it to have been written in Latin verse, and that Chaucer translated it.—Lollius was a historiographer of Urbino in Italy.—Shakspeare received the greatest part of his materials for the structure of this play from the Troy Boke of Lydgate, printed in 1513.—Lydgate was not much more than a translator of Guido of Columpna, who was of Messina in Sicily, and wrote his History of Troy in Latin, after Dictys Cretensis, and Dares Phrygius, in 1287. On these, as Mr. Warton observes, he engrafted many new romantic inventions, which the taste of his age dictated, and which the connection between Grecian and Gothic fiction easily admitted; at the same time comprehending in his plan the Theban and Argonautic stories from Ovid, Statius, and Valerius Flaccus. ² i. e. proud, disdainful. ³ To fulfill in this place means to fill till there be no room for more. ⁴ To sperre, or spar, from the old Teutonic word speren, signifies to shut up, defend by bars, &c. ⁵ i. e. the avant, what went before. ⁶ This word anciently signified a servant or footman to a knight or warrior.

Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder¹ than ignorance;
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skill-less as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this:
for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further.
He, that will have a cake out of the wheat, must tarry the grinding.

Troi. Have I not tarry'd?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the boulting.

Troi. Have I not tarry'd?

Pan. Ay, the boulting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Troi. Still have I tarry'd.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening: but here's yet in the word—hereafter the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking;
nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Troi. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,
Doth lesser blench² at sufferance than I do.

At Priam's royal table do I sit;

And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,— So, traitor!—when she comes!—When is she thence?

Pan. Well, she look'd yester-night fairer than ever I saw her look; or any woman else.

Troi. I was about to tell thee,—When my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain;
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have (as when the sun doth light a storm)
Bury'd this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, (well, go to) there were no more comparison between the women,—But, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her,—But I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dis-praise your sister Cassandra's wit: but—

Troi. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus!—
When I do tell thee, There my hopes lie drown'd,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love: Thou answer'st, She is fair;
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait; her voice
Handlest in thy discourse:—O that her hand!
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach; to whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense³
Hard as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st me,

As true thou tell'st me, when I say,—I love her;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me
The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Troi. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. 'Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Troi. Good Pandarus! How now, Pandarus?

Pan. I have had my labour for my travel; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you:
gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Troi. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what,
with me?

Pan. Because she is kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Troi. Say I, she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool, to stay behind her father; let her to the Grecks; and so I'll tell her, the next time I see her: for my part, I'll meddle nor make no more in the matter.

Troi. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Troi. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me; I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

[Exit Pandarus.

[Sound alarum.

Troi. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.

But Pandarus—O gods, how do you plague me!
I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar;
And he's as techy to be woo'd to woo,
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?
Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:
Between our Ilium, and where she resides,
Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood;
Ourself, the merchant; and this sailing Pandar,
Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

[Alarum.] Enter Aeneas.

Aeneas. How now, prince Troilus? wherefore not afield?

Troi. Because not there; This woman's answer
For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Aeneas, from the field to-day?

Aeneas. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Troi. By whom, Aeneas?

Aeneas. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Troi. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;
Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn.

Aeneas. Hark! what good sport is out of town to-day!

¹ Fonder for more childish. ² To blench is to shrink, start, or fly off. ³ The meaning is; In comparison with Cressid's hand, the spirit of sense, the utmost degree, the most exquisite power of sensibility, which implies a soft hand, since the sense of touching resides chiefly in the fingers, is hard as the callous and insensible palm of the ploughman. ⁴ Mr. Steevens thinks this phrase means, She may make the best of a bad bargain.

Troi. Better at home, if would I might, were may.—
But, to the sport abroad;—Are you bound thither?

Ane. In all swift haste.

Troi. Come, go we then together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Street.

Enter Cressida, and Alexander her servant.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Serv. Queen Hecuba, and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Serv. Up to the eastern tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the battle. Hector, whose patience
Is, as a virtue, fix'd, to-day was mov'd;
He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer;
And, like as there were husbandry in war,
Before the sun rose, he was harness'd light,
And to the field goes he; where every flower
Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw
In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger? [Greeks]

Serv. The noise goes this: There is among the
A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;
They call him, Ajax.

Cres. Good; And what of him?

Serv. They say he is a very man per se,
And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Serv. This man, lady, hath robb'd many beasts of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours, that his valour is crushed into folly¹, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue, that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attaint, but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair²: he hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty
Briareus, many hands and no use; or purblind
Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Serv. They say, he yesterday cop'd Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

Cres. Who comes here?

Serv. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Serv. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: What do you talk of?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium³?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of, when I came?

Was Hector arm'd, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium?

Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so; Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too;
he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that:
and there's Troilus will not come far behind him;
let them take heed of Troilus; I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O, Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector?

Do you know a man, if you see him? [him.]

Cres. Ay; if I ever saw him before, and knew

Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure,
he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus! I would, he were,—

Cres. So he is.

Pan.—'Condition, I had gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself.—'Would
'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; Time must friend or end: Well, Troilus, well,—I would, my heart were in her body!—No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. The other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale, when the other's come to't.
Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

[ter.]

Cres. 'T would not become him, his own's bet-Pan. You have no judgement, niece: Helen herself swore the other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour, (for so 'tis, I must confess)—Not brown neither.

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. 'Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then Troilus should have too much; if she prais'd him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion.

¹ To be crushed into folly, is to be confused and mingled with folly, so as that they make one mass together. ² This is a phrase equivalent to another now in use,—against the grain. ³ Ilium was the palace of Troy.

plexion. I had as lieve, Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek, indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into the compass'd window¹,—and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young: and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter²?

Pan. But, to prove to you that Helen loves him;—she came, and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,——

Cres. Juno have mercy!—How came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled: I think, his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O, yes; an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to then:—But, to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,——

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin;—Indeed, he has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But, there was such laughing;—Queen Hecuba laugh'd, that her eyes ran o'er, Cres. With mill-stones.

Pan. And Cassandra laugh'd.

Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes;—Did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laugh'd.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laugh'd too.

Pan. They laugh'd not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, Here's but one and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that.

One and fifty hairs, quoth he, and one white. That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons, Jupiter! quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris, my husband? The forked one, quoth he; pluck it out, and give it him. But, there was such laughing! and Helen so blush'd, and Paris so chaf'd, and all the rest so laugh'd, that it pass'd.

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn, 'tis true; he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April. [Sound a retreat.]

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May.

Pan. Hark, they are coming from the field; Shall we stand up here, and see them, as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece Cres-

Cres. At your pleasure. [sida.]

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely: I'll tell you them all by their names, as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.

Aeneas passes over the stage.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Aeneas; Is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you; But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

Antenor passes over.

Pan. That's Antenor; he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one o' the soundest judgement in Troy, whosoever; and a proper man of person:—When comes Troilus?—I'll shew you Troilus anon; if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more³.

Hector passes over.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that! There's a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector;—There's a brave man, niece!—O brave Hector!—Look, how he looks! there's a countenance: Is't not a brave man?

Cres. O, brave man!

Pan. Is't a not? It does a man's heart good—Look you, what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there! There's no jesting: laying on; take't off who will, as they say: there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

Paris passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not: an the devil come to him, it's all one: By god's lid, it does one's heart good!—Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder, niece! Is't not a gallant man too, is't not?—Why, this is brave now.—Who said, he came home hurt today? he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now. Ha! 'would I could see Troilus now!—you shall see Troilus anon.

¹ The compass'd window is the same as the bow-window. ² The word lifter means a thief.—We still call a person who plunders shops, a shop-lifter. ³ The allusion here is to the word noddy, which, as now, did in our author's time, and long before, signify a silly fellow; and may, by its etymology, signify likewise full of nods.—Cressid means, that a noddy shall have more nods.

Cres. Who's that!

Helenus passes over.

Pan. That's Helenus,—I marvel, where Troilus is:—That's Helenus;—I think he went not forth to-day;—That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no;—yes, he'll fight indifferent well:—I marvel, where Troilus is!—Hark; do you not hear the people cry, Troilus?—Helenus is a priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Troilus passes over.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus: 'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece!—Hem!—Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him:—O brave Troilus!—look well upon him, niece; look you, how his sword is bloody'd, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's! And how he looks, and how he goes!—O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way; had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man!—Paris? Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Enter Soldiers, &c.

Cres. Here come more.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die i' the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks, Achilles; a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a dray-man, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well?—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a mine'd man: and then to be bak'd with no date¹ in the pye,—for then the man's date is out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it is past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter Troilus' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where.

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come [Exit Boy]: I doubt he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by-and-by.

Cres. To bring, uncle,—

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token—you are a bawd.—

[Exit Pandarus.

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice, He offers in another's enterprize:

But more in Troilus thousand fold I see

Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;

Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing;

Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing:

That she² belov'd knows nought, that knows not this,—

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:

That she² was never yet, that ever knew

Love got so sweet, as when desire did sue:

Therefore this maxim out of love I teach,—

Atchievement is, command; ungain'd, beseech:

Then though my heart's content³ firm love doth bear,

Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.

The Grecian Camp.

Trumpets. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Menelaus, with others.

Agam. Princes,

What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?

The ample proposition that hope makes

In all designs begun on earth below, [asters

Fails in the promis'd largeness; checks and dis-

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;

As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,

Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain

Tortive and errant from his course of growth.

Nor, princes, is it matter new to us,

That we come short of our suppose so far,

That, after seven years' siege, yet Troy walls stand;

Sith every action that hath gone before,

Whereof we have record, trial did draw

Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,

And that unbodied figure of the thought

That gave't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works;

And think them shames, which are, indeed, nought else

But the protractive trials of great Jove,

To find persistive constancy in men?

The fineness of which metal is not found

¹ To account for the introduction of this quibble, it should be remembered that dates were an ingredient in ancient pastry of almost every kind. ² i. e. that woman. ³ Content for capacity.

In fortune's love: for then, the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin:
But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away;
And what hath mass, or matter, by itself
Lies, rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance
Lies the true proof of men: The sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of nobler bulk?

But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and, anon, behold [cut,
The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains
Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus' horse: Where's then the saucy boat,
Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd greatness? either to harbour fled,
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Doth valour's shew, and valour's worth, divide
In storms of fortune: For, in her ray and brightness,
The herd hath more annoyance by the brize¹,
Than by the tyger: but when splitting winds
Make flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flies flee under shade, Why, then, the thing
of courage²,

As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tun'd in self-same key,
Returns to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,— [Greece,
Thou great commander, nerve and bone of
Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up,—hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation

The which,—most mighty for thy place and sway,— [To Agamemnon.

And thou most reverend for thy stretcht-out life,—
[To Nestor.

I give to both your speeches,—which were such,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass; and such again,
As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver³,
Should with a bond of air (strong as the axle-tree
On which heaven rides) knit all the Greekish ears
To his experienc'd tongue,—Yet let it please both,
Thou great,—and wise,—to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect

That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips; than we are confident,
When rank Thersites opes his mastiff jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon her basis, had been down,
And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a mas-
But for these instances. [tet,

The specialty of rule⁴ hath been neglected;
5 And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.
When that the general is not like the hive,
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
10 The unworthiest shews as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this center⁵,

Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
15 Office, and custom, in all line of order:
And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
Amidst the other; whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
20 And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sans check, to good and bad: But, when the planets,

In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
What plagues, and what portents? what mutiny?
25 What raging of the sea? shaking of earth? [roars,
Commotion in the winds? frights, changes, hor-
Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity and married calm of states
Quite from their fixture? O, when degree is shak'd, 30 Which is the ladder to all high designs,

The enterprize is sick! How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities⁶,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
35 Prerogative of age, crowns, scepters, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place?

Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets
In meer oppugnancy: The bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
And make a sop of all this solid globe:
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead:
Force should be right; or, rather right and wrong

45 (Between whose endless jar justice resides)
Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, an universal wolf,

50 So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforce an universal prey,
And, last, eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choaking.

55 And this neglection of degree it is,
That by a pace goes backward⁷, with a purpose
It hath to climb: The general's disdain'd

¹ The brize is the gad or horse-fly. ² It is said of the tiger, that in storms and high winds he rages and roars most furiously. ³ Hatch'd in silver, may mean, whose white hair and beard make him look like a figure engraved on silver. ⁴ i. e. the particular rights of supreme authority. ⁵ i. e. the earth; which, according to the Ptolemaic system, then in vogue, is the center of the solar system. ⁶ i. e. corporations, companies, confraternities. ⁷ That goes backward step by step.

By him one step below: he, by the next;
That next, by him beneath: so every step,
Exempl'd by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation¹:

And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd
The fever whereof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses,
What is the remedy?

Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
The sinew and the forehead of our host,—
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs: With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazy bed, the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests;

And with ridiculous and awkward action
(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls)
He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy topless² deputation he puts on;

And, like a strutting player,—whose conceit
Lies in his ham-string, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound

'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage,—
Such to-be-pitied and o'er-rested³ seeming

He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
'Tis like a chime a mending; with terms unsquar'd,

Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon drop'd,
Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff,

The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;

Cries—'Excellent!—'tis Agamemnon just.—
'Now play me Nestor;—hem, and stroke thy

'beard,
'As he, being 'drest to some oration.'

That's done;—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels; as like as Vulcan and his wife:

Yet good Achilles still cries, 'Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right! Now play him me, Patroclus,

'Arming to answer in a night alarm.'
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age

Must be the scene of mirth; to cough, and spit,
And with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget,

Shake in and out the rivet:—and at this sport,
Sir Valour dies; cries, 'O!—enough, Patroclus;

'Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
'In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fashion,

All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact⁴,

Atchievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,

Success, or loss, what is, or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain (Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns

With an imperial voice) many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd; and bears his head

In such a rein⁵, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him;
Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,
Bold as an oracle: and sets Thersites

(A slave, whose gall coins slanders like a mint)
To match us in comparisons with dirt;

To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank⁶ soever rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice;
Count wisdom as no member of the war;

Foretell pre-science, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts,—

That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness calls them on; and know, by measure

Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity;

They call this—bed-work, mappery, closet war:
So that the ram, that batters down the wall,

For the great swing and rudeness of his poize,
They place before his hand that made the engine;

Or those, that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons. [Trumpet sounds.

Agam. What trumpet? look, Menelaus.
Men. From Troy.

Enter Aeneas.
Agam. What would you'fore our tent? [you?

Ane. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray
Agam. Even this.

Ane. May one, that is a herald, and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice

Call Agamemnon head and general.
Ane. Fair leave, and large security. How may

A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How?
Ane. I ask, that I might waken reverence,

And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as morning when she coldly eyes

The youthful Phœbus:
Which is that god in office, guiding men?

Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?
Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy

Are ceremonious courtiers.
Ane. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd,

As bending angels; that's their fame in peace:
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls, [accord,

Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's

Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Aeneas,
Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips!

The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
If that the prais'd himself bring the praise forth:

But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure, transcends.

¹ An emulation not vigorous and active, but malignant and sluggish. ² Topless means supreme, sovereign. ³ Read o'er-wrested, i. e. over-charged. ⁴ All our good of grace exact, means our excellence irreprehensible. ⁵ That is, holds up his head as haughtily.—We still say of a girl, she bristles. ⁶ A rank weed is a high weed.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Aeneas?

Aene. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Aene. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately, that comes from Troy. [him:]

Aene. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper
I bring a trumpet to awake his ear;
To set his sense on the attentive bent,
And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind;
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour;
That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.

Aene. Trumpet, blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents;
And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairly, shall be spoke aloud.

[Trumpets sound.]

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy
A prince call'd Hector, Priam is his father;
Who in this dull and long-continu'd truce
Is rusty grown; he bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords!
If there be one, among the fair'st of Greece,
That holds his honour higher than his ease;
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril;
That knows his valour, and knows not his fear;
That loves his mistress more than in confession¹,
(With truant vows to her own lips he loves)
And dare avow her beauty, and her worth,
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.
Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it.
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms;
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love:
If any come, Hector shall honour him;
If none, he'll say in Troy, when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sun-burnt, and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, lord Aeneas;
If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home: But we are soldiers;
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love!
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now;
But, if there be not in our Grecian host
One noble man that hath one spark of fire,
To answer for his love, Tell him from me,—
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver,
And in my vantbrace² put this wither'd brawn;
And, meeting him, will tell him, That my lady
Was fairer than his grandame, and as chaste

As may be in the world: His youth in flood,
I'll pawn this truth with my three drops of blood.

Aene. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair lord Aeneas, let me touch your hand;
To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir.
Achilles shall have word of this intent;
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent;
Yourself shall feast with us before you go,
And find the welcome of a noble foe. [Exeunt,

Manent Ulysses and Nestor.

Ulyss. Nestor,—

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain,
Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is 't?

Ulyss. This 'tis:

Blunt wedges rive hard knots: The seeded pride
That hath to its maturity blown up
In rank Achilles, must or now be cropt,
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,
To over-bulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how?

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector
However it is spread in general name, [sends,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles. [stance,

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as sub-
Whose grossness little characters sum up³:
And, in the publication, make no strain⁴,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows,
'Tis dry enough,—will with great speed of judgement,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet: Whom may you else oppose,

That can from Hector bring those honours off,
If not Achilles? Though 't be a sportful combat,
Yet in this trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute
With their fin'st palate: And trust to me, Ulysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd

In this wild action: for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes, although small pricks⁵
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He, that meets Hector, issues from our choice:
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election; and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues; Who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence a conquering
To steel a strong opinion to themselves? [part,
Which entertain'd, limbs are in his instruments,

¹ Confession for profession. ² An armour for the arm,—avantbras. ³ Substance is estate; the value of which is ascertained by the use of small characters, i. e. numerals. ⁴ i. e. make no difficulty, no doubt, when this duel comes to be proclaimed, but that Achilles, dull as he is, will discover the drift of it. ⁵ Small points compared with the volumes.

In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech;
Therefore 'tis meet, Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, shew our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they 'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed,
By shewing the worst first. Do not consent,
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame, in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes; What are they? [tor,

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hec-
Were he not proud, we all should share with him:
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Africk sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he 'scape Hector fair: If he were foil'd,
Why, then we did our main opinion crush

In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery;
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw
The sort¹ to fight with Hector: Among ourselves,
Give him allowance as the better man,
5 For that will physick the great Myrmidon,
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: If he fail,
10 Yet go we under our opinion still,
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes,—
Ajax, employ'd, plucks down Achilles' plumes.
Nest. Ulysses,
15 Now I begin to relish thy advice;
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other; Pride alone
Must tarre² the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.

SCENE I.

The Grecian Camp.

Enter Ajax, and Thersites.

Ajax. THERSITES,—

Ther. Agamemnon—how if he had boils?
full all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites,—

Ther. And those boils did run?—say so,— did not the general run then? were not that a botchy core?

Ajax. Dog,—

Ther. Then there would come some matter from him; I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel then. [Strikes him.

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mungrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou unsalted leaven³, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book.
Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o'
thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Toads-stool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think, I have no sense, thou strik'st me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation,—

Ther. Thou art proclaim'd a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not; my fingers itch.

35 Ther. I would, thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsome scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strik'st as slow as another.

40 Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—

Ther. Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpine's beauty, ay, that thou bark'st at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou should'st strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf⁴!

Ther. He would pun⁵ thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a basket.

50 Ajax. You whoreson cur! [Beating him.

Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch⁶!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord!
thou hast no more brain than I have in my elbows;
55 an assinego⁷ may tutor thee: Thou scurvy valiant ass! thou art here put to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel and tell what thou art by 60 inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

¹ i. e. the lot. ² Tarre is an old English word, signifying to provoke or urge on. ³ Unsalted leaven, means sour without salt; metaphorically, malignity without wit. ⁴ A crusty uneven loaf is in some counties called by this name. ⁵ Pun is, in the midland counties, the vulgar and colloquial word for pound. ⁶ In one way of trying a witch, they used to place her on a chair or stool, with her legs tied across, that all the weight of her body might rest upon her seat; and by that means, after some time, the circulation of the blood would be much stopped, and her sitting would be as painful as the wooden horse. ⁷ Assinego seems to have been a cant term for a foolish fellow.—Assinego is Portuguese for a little ass.

Ther. You scurvy lord!

Ajax. You cur! [Beating him.]

Ther. Mars his ideot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter Achilles, and Patroclus.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax? wherefore do you thus?

How now, Thersites? what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; What's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do; What's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him: for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobb'd his brain, more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax,—who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head,—I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say, this Ajax—

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

[Ajax offers to strike him, Achilles interposes.]

Ther. Has not so much wit—

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there; that he; look you there.

Ajax. O thou damn'd cur! I shall—

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation; and he rails upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary: Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. Even so?—a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains; 'a were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestor,—whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes,—yoke you like draft oxen, and make you plough up the war.

Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, goodsooth; To, Achilles! to, Ajax! to!

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace.

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me¹, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hang'd, like clodpoles, ere I come any more to your tents; I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools.

[Exit.]

Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host:

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun, Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy, To-morrow morning call some knight to arms, That hath a stomach; and such a one, that dare Maintain—I know not what; 'tis trash: Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not, it is put to lottery; otherwise, He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you:—I'll go learn more of it.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

TROY.

Priam's Palace.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent, Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks; Deliver Helen; and all damage else—

As honour, loss of time, travel, expence,

Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd In hot digestion of this cormorant war,—

Shall be struck off:—Hector, what say you to't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,

As far as toucheth my particular, yet,

Dread Priam,

There is no lady of more softer bowels,

More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,

More ready to cry out—Who knows what follows?

Than Hector is: The wound of peace is surety,

Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd

The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches

To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:

Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes²,

Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours:

If we have lost so many tenths of ours,

To guard a thing not ours; not worth to us,

Had it our name, the value of one ten;

What merit's in that reason, which denies

The yielding of her up?

Troi. Fie, fie, my brother!

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,

¹ He calls Patroclus, in contempt, Achilles' dog.

² Disme, Fr. is the tithe, the tenth.

So great as our dread father, in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The past-proportion¹ of his infinite?

And buckle-in a waist most fathomless,
With spans and inches so diminutive

As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame! [sons,

Hec. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at rea-
You are so empty of them. Should not our father Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,

Because your speech hath none, that tells him so?

Troi. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest, [reasons:

You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your

You know, an enemy intends you harm;

You know, a sword employ'd is perilous,

And reason flies the object of all harm:

Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds

A Grecian and his sword, if he do set

The very wings of reason to his heels;

And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,

Or like a star dis-orb'd?—Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates, and sleep: Manhood and honour

Should have hare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect

Make livers pale, and lustyhood deject. [cost

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth
The holding.

Troi. What is aught, but as 'tis valu'd?

Hect. But value dwells not in particular will;

It holds his estimate and dignity

As well wherein 'tis precious of itself,

As in the prizer: 'tis mad idolatry,

To make the service greater than the god;

And the will dotes, that is inclinable

To what infectiously itself affects,

Without some image of the affected merit.

Troi. I take to-day a wife, and my election

Is led on in the conduct of my will;

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,

Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores

Of will and judgement; How may I avoid,

Although my will distaste what it elected,

The wife I chose? There can be no evasion

To blench from this, and to stand firm by honour:

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,

When we have soil'd them; nor the remainder viands

We do not throw in unrespective sieve²,

Because we now are full. It was thought meet,

Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:

Your breath of full consent belly'd his sails;

The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce,

And did him service: he touch'd the ports desir'd;

And, for an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive, [freshness

He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes pale the morning.

Why keep we her? The Grecians keep our aunt:

Is she worth keeping? Why, she is a pearl,

Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.

If you'll avouch, 'twas wisdom Paris went,

(As you must needs, for you all cry'd—Go, go!)

If you'll confess, he brought home noble prize,

(As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,

5 And cry'd—Inestimable!) why do you now

The issue of your proper wisdoms rate;

And do a deed that fortune never did,

Beggar the estimation which you priz'd

Richer than sea and land? O theft most base;

10 That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!

But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,

That in their country did them that disgrace,

We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

15 Pri. What noise? what shriek is this?

Troi. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter Cassandra, raving.

20 Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand

And I will fill them with prophetic tears. [eyes,

Hect. Peace, sister, peace. [elders,

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,

25 Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes

A moiety of that mass of moan to come.

Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!

Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand;

Our fire-brand brother, Paris, burns us all.

30 Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen, and a woe:

Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains

Of divination in our sister work

35 Some touches of remorse? or is your blood

So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,

Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,

Can qualify the same?

Troi. Why, brother Hector,

40 We may not think the justness of each act

Such and no other than event doth form it;

Nor once deject the courage of our minds,

Because Cassandra's mad; her brain-sick ruptures

Cannot distaste³ the goodness of a quarrel,

45 Which hath our several honours all engag'd

To make it gracious. For my private part,

I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons:

And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us

Such things as would offend the weakest spleen

50 To fight for and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince of levity

As well my undertakings, as your counsels:

But I attest the gods, your full consent

Gave wings to my propension, and cut off

55 All fears attending on so dire a project.

For what, alas, can these my single arms?

What propugnation is in one man's valour,

To stand the push and enmity of those

This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,

60 Were I alone to pass the difficulties,

And had as ample power as I have will,

Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,

¹ The meaning is, that greatness to which no measure bears any proportion. ² That is, into a common voider.

³ i. e. corrupt; change to a worse state.

Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant, is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up,
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this,
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms? 15
There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended; nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
Where Helen is the subject: then, I say,
Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said well;
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glaz'd, but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy:

The reasons you alledge, do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong; For pleasure, and revenge,
Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves,
All dues be render'd to their owners; Now
What nearer debt in all humanity,
Than wife is to the husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection;
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,—
As it is known she is,—these moral laws
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: Thus to persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth: yet, ne'ertheless,
My sprightly brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;

For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
Upon our joint and several dignities. [sign:]

Troil. Why, there you touch'd the life of our de-
Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens?
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,

And fame, in time to come, canonize us:
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
5 For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.—
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
10 Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits:
I was advertis'd, their great general slept,
Whilst 'emulation in the army crept;
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Grecian Camp.

Achilles' Tent.

Enter Thersites.

How now, Thersites? what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus?
He beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! 'would it were otherwise, that I could beat him, whilst he rail'd at me: 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue 25 of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles, —a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken 'till these two undermine it, the walls will stand 'till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the king of 30 gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy Caduceus; if ye take not that little little less-than-little wit from them that they have!
which short-arm'd ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deli-35 ver a fly from a spider, without drawing the massy iron⁴, and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the boneache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placket. I have said my 40 prayers; and devil envy, say Amen. What, ho!
my lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites? Good Thersites, come in and rail.

45 Ther. If I could have remember'd a gilt counterfeit, thou would'st not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter, Thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, bethine in great revenue! heaven bless 50 thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction 'till thy death! then if she that lays thee out, says—thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't, she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen.
55 Where's Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; The heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.

60 Achil. Who's there!

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

² i. e. the execution of spite and resentment.

³ That is,

envy, factious contention.

⁴ That is, without drawing their swords to cut the web.

Achil.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not serv'd thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles;—Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites; Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus; Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou may'st tell, that know'st.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question¹. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool; I have not done. [sits.]

Achil. He is a privileg'd man.—Proceed, Ther.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool, to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool, to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of the prover.—It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, and Ajax.

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with no body:—Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.]

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is—a cuckold, and a whore; A good quarrel, to draw emulous factions, and bleed to death upon. Now the dry serpigo on the subject! and war, and lechery, confound all! [Exit.]

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him, that we are here. He shent² our messengers; and we lay by our appertainments, visiting of him:

Let him be told so; lest, perchance, he think we dare not move the question of our place, Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall so say to him. [Exit.]

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent; He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of a proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: But why, why? let him shew us a cause.—A word, my lord.

[To Agamemnon.]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who? Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No; you see, he is his argument, that has his argument; Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish, than their faction: But it was a strong composure, a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity, that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie.—Here comes Patroclus.

Re-enter Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy;

His legs are for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say—he is much sorry, If any thing more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatness, and this noble state³, To call on him; he hopes, it is no other, But, for your health and your digestion sake, An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus;—

We are too well acquainted with these answers: But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot out-fly our apprehensions.

Much attribute he hath; and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him: yet all his virtues,—

Not virtuously on his own part beheld,—

Do, in our eyes, begin to lose their gloss;

Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him, We come to speak to him: And you shall not sin, If you do say—we think him over-proud, And under-honest; in self-assumption greater, Than in the note of judgement; and worthier than himself,

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on; Disguise the holy strength of their command, And under-write⁴ in an observing kind His humorous predominance; yea, watch His pettish luns, his ebbs, his flows, as if The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tide. Go, tell him this; and add, That, if he over-hold his price so much, We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine Not portable, lie under this report—

Bring action hither, this cannot go to war: A stirring dwarf we do allowance⁵ give Before a sleeping giant:—Tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently. [Exit.]

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied, We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, enter you. [Exit Ulysses.]

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think, he thinks himself

A better man than I?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say, he is? [valiant,

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as As wise, and no less noble; much more gentle, ¹ i. e. I will deduce the question from the first case to the last. ² i. e. rebuked, rated. ³ i. e. the stately train of attending nobles whom you bring with you. ⁴ To subscribe, in Shakspeare, is to obey. ⁵ Allowance is approbation.

And altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud?

How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind's the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues

The fairer. He that's proud, eats up himself:

Pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his Own chronicle: and whate'er praises itself

But in the deed, devours the deed i' the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. [Aside.] And yet he loves himself; Is it not strange?

Re-enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none;

But carries on the stream of his dispose,

Without observance or respect of any,

In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request, Untent his person, and share the air with us?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,

He makes important: Possess he is with greatness;

And speaks not to himself, but with a pride

That quarrels at self breath: imagin'd worth

Holds in his blood such swoln and hot discourse,

That, 'twixt his mental and his active parts,

Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,

And batters down himself: What should I say?

He is so plaguy proud, that the death tokens of it¹ Cry—No recovery.

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.—

Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent:

'Tis said he holds you well; and will be led,

At your request, a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so!

We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes,

When they go from Achilles: Shall the proud lord,

That bastes his arrogance with his own seam²;

And never suffers matter of the world

Enter his thoughts,—save such as do revolve

And ruminates himself,—shall he be worshipp'd

Of that we hold an idol more than he?

No, this thrice-worthy and right-valiant lord

Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;

Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,

As amply titled as Achilles is,

By going to Achilles:

That were to enlard his fat-already pride;

And add more coals to Cancer, when he burns

With entertaining great Hyperion.

This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid;

And say in thunder—Achilles, go to him.

Nest. O, this is well: he rubs the vein of him.

[Aside.]

Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause!

[Aside.]

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist

I'll pash him o'er the face.

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.

Ajax. An he be proud with me, I'll pheeze³ his pride:—

5 Let me go to him.

[quarrel.]

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon out

Ajax. A paltry insolent fellow,—

Nest. How he describes himself! [Aside.]

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

10 Ulyss. The raven chides blackness. [Aside.]

Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.

Agam. He will be the physician, that should be the patient. [Aside.]

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—

15 Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion. [Aside.]

Ajax. He should not bear it so,

He should eat swords first: Shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 'twould, you'd carry half. [Aside.]

Ulyss. He would have ten shares. [Aside.]

20 Ajax. I will knead him, I'll make him supple:—

Nest. He's not yet thorough warm: force him⁴ with praises: [Aside.]

Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry.

Ulyss. My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

[To Agamemnon.]

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

30 Here is a man—But 'tis before his face;

I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

35 Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!

Would, he were a Trojan!

Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now—

Ulyss. If he were proud?

40 Diom. Or covetous of praise?

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne?

Diom. Or strange, or self-affected?

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure;

45 Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor: and thy parts of nature

Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition:

But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight,

Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

50 And give him half: and, for thy vigour,

Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield

To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,

Which, like a bourn⁵, a pale, a shore, confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts: Here's Nestor,—

55 Instructed by the antiquary times,

He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;—

But pardon, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,

You should not have the eminence of him,

60 But be as Ajax.

¹ Alluding to the decisive spots appearing on those infected by the plague.

² Seam is grease.

³ To pheeze is to comb or curry.

⁴ i. e. stuff him with praises (from farcir, Fr.).

⁵ A bourn is a boundary, and sometimes a rivulet dividing one place from another.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?
Nest. Ay, my good son.
Diom. Be rul'd by him, lord Ajax.
Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hart Achilles Keeps thicket. Please it our great general
 To call together all his state of war;
 Fresh kings are come to Troy: To-morrow,

We must with all our main of power stand fast:
 And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west,
 And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.
Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep.
 Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep. [Exeunt.]

S C E N E I.

T R O Y.

The Palace.

Enter Pandarus, and a Servant. [Musick within.]

Pan. FRIEND! you! pray you, a word:
 Do not you follow the young lord
 Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You do depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You do depend upon a noble gentleman;
 I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace?

Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles:—What musick is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is musick in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love musick.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend?

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another;
 I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning: At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir: Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul¹,—

Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen; Could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complimental assault upon him, for my business seeths.

Serv. Sudden business! there's a stew'd phrase,
 indeed!

Enter Paris, and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them!—especially to you, fair queen!
 Fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.—
 Fair prince, here is good broken musick.

Par. You have broke it, cousin: and, by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance:—
 Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir,—

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord! well, you say so in fits².

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen;—
 My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out; we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me.—But (marry) thus, my lord.—My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen. My lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himself most affectionately to you.

Helen. You shall not hob us out of our melody; If you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen, i' faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad, is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen; my very very sweet queen?

¹ i. e. the soul of love invisible every where else.

² i. e. now and then, by fits.

Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night?

Helen. Nay but, my lord,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen? My cousin will fall out with you.

Helen. You must not know where he sups.

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter, you are wide; come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say—Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I spy¹.

Pan. You spy! what do you spy?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain.

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three².

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, pr'ythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. Oh, Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love, ay, that it shall i' faith. [love.]

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but

Pan. In good troth, it begins so:

“Love, love, nothing but love, still more!

“For, oh, love's bow

“Shoots buck and doe:

“The shaft confounds

“Not that it wounds,

“But tickles still the sore.

“These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!

“Yet that which seems the wound to kill,

“Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!

“So dying love lives still:

“Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

“Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

“Hey ho!”

Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds?—Why, they are vipers: Is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have arm'd to-day, but my Nell would not have it so:

How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Helen. He hangs the lip at something;—you know all, lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen.—I long to hear how they sped to-day.—You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit. Sound a retreat.]

Par. They are come from field: let us to Priam's hall, [you

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo

To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles,

15 With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,

Shall more obey, than to the edge of steel,

Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do more

Than all the island kings, disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant,

20 Paris:

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty

Gives us more palm in beauty than we have;

Yea, over-shines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

Pandarus' Garden.

Enter Pandarus, and Troilus' man.

Pan. How now? where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?

Serv. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. O, here he comes.—How now, how now?

Troi. Sirrah, walk off.

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Troi. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door,

Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks

Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon,

40 And give me swift transportance to those fields,

Where I may wallow in the lily beds

Propos'd for the deserver! O gentle Pandarus,

From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings,

And fly with me to Cressid!

45 Pan. Walk here i' the orchard, I will bring her straight. [Exit Pandarus.]

Troi. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.

Th' imaginary relish is so sweet,

That it enchants my sense; What will it be,

50 When the watry palate tastes indeed

Love's thrice-reputed nectar? death, I fear me;

Swooning destruction; or some joy too fine,

Too subtle potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness,

For the capacity of my ruder powers:

55 I fear it much; and I do fear besides,

That I shall lose distinction in my joys;

As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps

The enemy flying.

Re-enter Pandarus.

60 Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight; you must be witty now. She does so

¹ This is the usual exclamation at a childish game called Hie, spy, hie. ² i. e. says Mr. Tollet, the reconciliation and wanton dalliance of two lovers after a quarrel, may produce a child, and so make three of two.

blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain:—she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow. [Exit Pandarus.]

Troi. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom:

My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse;
And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
Like vassalage at unawares encount'ring
The eye of majesty.

Enter Pandarus, and Cressida.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? shame's a baby.—Here she is now: swear the oaths now to her, that you have sworn to me.—What, are you gone again? you must be watch'd ere you be made tame¹, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we'll put you i' the files².—Why do you not speak to her!—Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loth you are to offend day-light! an'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now, a kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out, ere I part you. The fault con as the tercel, for all the ducks i' the river³: go to, go to.

Troi. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds: but she'll bereave you of the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? here's—In witness whereof the parties interchangeably—Come in, come in; I'll go get a fire. [Exit Pandarus.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Troi. O Cressida, how often have I wish'd me thus?

Cres. Wish'd, my lord?—The gods grant!—O my lord!

Troi. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Troi. Fears make devils of cherubims; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: To fear the worst, oft cures the worst.

Troi. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Troi. Nothing, but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tygers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrosity in love, lady,—that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say, all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions, and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Troi. Are there such? such are not we: Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare, 'till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert, before his birth; and being born, his addition shall be humble⁴. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst, shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest, not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pan. What, blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that; if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me: Be true to my lord; if he flinch, chide me for it.

Troi. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too; our kindred, though they be long ere they are woo'd, they are constant, being won: they are burrs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart:—

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day,
For many weary months.

Troi. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord,

With the first glance that ever—Pardon me:—

If I confess much, you will play the tyrant,
I love you now; but not, 'till now, so much
But I might master it:—in faith, I lie;

My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown
Too headstrong for their mother: See, we fools!
Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us,
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?

But though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man;

Or, that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;
For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,

Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws
My very soul of counsel: Stop my mouth.

Troi. And shall, albeit sweet musick issues
Pan. Pretty, i' faith. [thence.]

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;
'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss:

of cowardice in the middle places.

² Alluding to the custom of putting men suspected
³ Pandarus means, that he'll match his niece against her lover for any bett.—The tercel is the male hawk; by the faulcon we generally understand the female.

⁴ We will give him no high or pompous titles.

I am asham'd;—O heavens! what have I done?—
For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Troi. Your leave, sweet Cressid?

Pan. Leave! an you take leave 'till to-morrow morning,——

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Troi. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Troi. You cannot shun yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:

I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave,
To be another's fool. I would be gone:—
Where is my wit? I speak I know not what.

Troi. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I shew more craft than love;

And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts: But you are wise;
Or else you love not; For to be wise, and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Troi. O, that I thought it could be in a woman,
(As, if it can, I will presume in you)

To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Out-living beauties outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays!

Or that persuasion could but thus convince me,—
That my integrity and truth to you

Might be affronted¹ with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;

How were I then uplifted! but, alas,

I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Troi. O virtuous fight, [right!
When right with right wars who shall be most
True swains in love shall, in the world to come, Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Want similies, truth tir'd with iteration,——

As true as steel², as plantage³ to the moon,

As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,

As iron to adamant, as earth to the center,——

Yet after all comparisons of truth,

As truth's authentic author to be cited,

As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse,

And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!

If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,

When time is old and hath forgot itself,

When water-drops have worn the stones of Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,

And mighty states characterless are grated

To dusty nothing; yet let memory,

From false to false, among false maids in love,
Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said—as
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth, [false
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,

5 Pard to the hind, or step-dame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
As false as Cressid.

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it:
I'll be the witness.——Here I hold your hand;

10 here, my cousin's. If ever you prove false to one another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all—Pandars; let all inconstant men be 15 Troilus's, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say amen.

Troi. Amen,

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will shew you a 20 bed-chamber; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death:
away,

And Cupid grant all tongue-ty'd maidens here,
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this geer!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Grecian Camp.

30 Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomed, Nestor,
Ajax, Menelaus, and Calchas.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done
you,

The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
35 To call for recompence. Appear it to your mind,

That, through the sight I bear in things, to Jove
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possessions,

Incurr'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,

40 To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition,
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;

And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:

45 I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,

Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What would'st thou of us, Trojan? make 50 demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took; Troy holds him very dear.

Oft have you (often have you thanks therefore)
Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,

55 Whom Troy hath still deny'd: But this Antenor,
I know, is such a wrest in their affairs,

That their negotiations all must slack,

¹ I wish, "my integrity might be met and matched with such equality and force of pure unmingled love." ² This is an ancient proverbial simile.

³ Formerly neither sowing, planting, nor grafting, were ever undertaken without a scrupulous attention to the increase or waning of the moon, as may be proved by the following quotation from Scott's Discoverie of Witchcraft: "The poore husbandman perceiveth that the increase of the moone maketh plants fruitfull: so as in the full moone they are in the best strength; decaieing in the wane; and in the conjunction to utterlie wither and vade."

Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence
Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain¹.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither; Calchas shall have
What he requests of us.—Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal, bring word—if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Diom. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burthen
Which I am proud to bear.

[Exit Diomed, and Calchas.]

Enter Achilles and Patroclus, before their tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i' the entrance of his tent:—
Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot;—and, princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him;—
I will come last: 'Tis like he'll question me,
Why such unplausible eyes are bent, why turn'd
on him:

If so, I have derision med'cinable,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink;
It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To shew itself, but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on
A form of strangeness as we pass along;—
So do each lord; and either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What, comes the general to speak with me? [Troy.]

You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us? [neral?]

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the ge-Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord?

Agam. The better.

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you?

Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exeunt.]

Achil. What mean these fellows? know they not Achilles? [bend,

Patr. They pass by strangely: They were us'd to
To send their smiles before them to Achilles;
To come as humbly, as they us'd to creep
To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late? [tune,
'Tis certain, Greatness, once fallen out with for-
Must fall out with men too: What the declin'd is,

He shall as soon read in the eyes of others,
As feel in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,
Shew not their mealy wings, but to the summer;
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour; but's honour'd for those honours
That are without him, as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit:

Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Doth one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:

Fortune and I are friends; I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess, [out
Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find Something in me not worth that rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses;
I'll interrupt his reading.—How now, Ulysses?

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son?

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here
Writes me, That man—how dearly ever parted²,
How much in having, or without, or in,—
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face,
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself
(That most pure spirit of sense) behold itself,
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form.
For speculation turns not to itself,
'Till it hath travell'd, and is marry'd there
Where it may see itself: this is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position,
It is familiar; but at the author's drift:
Who, in his circumstance³, expressly proves—
That no man is the lord of any thing, (Though in and of him there is much consisting)
'Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
'Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they are extended; which, like an arch, reverberates

The voice again; or like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in this;
And apprehended here immediately
The unknown⁴ Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse;
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,
Most abject in regard, and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem,
And poor in worth! Now shall we see to-morrow
An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men do,

¹ i. e. Her presence shall strike off, or recompence, the service I have done even in these labours which were most accepted. ² i. e. however excellently endowed, with however dear or precious parts enriched or adorned. ³ i. e. in the detail or circumduction of his argument. ⁴ Ajax, who has abilities which were never brought into view or use.

While some men leave to do!

How some men creep¹ in skittish fortune's hall,
While others play the ideots in her eyes!
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords!—why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder;
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it: for they pass'd by me,
As misers do by beggars; neither gave to me
Good word, nor look: What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-siz'd monster of ingratitude: [devour'd
Those scraps are good deeds past; which are
As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: Perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: To have done, is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant way;
For honour travels in a streight so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast: keep then the path:
For emulation hath a thousand sons,
That one by one pursue; If you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an entred tide, they all rush by,
And leave you hindmost;—

Or like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear
O'er-run and trampled on: Then what they do in present, [yours:

Though less than yours in past, must o'er-top
For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand;
And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer: Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was; for beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,—
That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds,
Tho' they are made and moulded of things past;
And shew to dust, that is a little gilt,
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.

The present eye praises the present object:
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye,
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee,
And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou would'st not entomb thyself alive,
And case thy reputation in thy tent;

Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions² 'mongst the gods them-
And drove great Mars to faction. [selves,

Achil. Of this my privacy

I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy

The reasons are more potent and heroical:

5 'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters³.

Achil. Ha! known?

Ulyss. Is that a wonder?

The providence that's in a watchful state,
10 Knows almost every grain of Pluto's gold;
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps;
Keeps place with thought; and almost, like the
gods,

Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.

15 There is a mystery (with whom relation Durst never meddle⁴) in the soul of state;
Which hath an operation more divine,
Than breath, or pen, can give expressure to:
All the commerce that you have had with Troy,

20 As perfectly is ours, as yours, my lord;
And better would it fit Achilles much,
To throw down Hector, than Polyxena:
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When Fame shall in our islands sound her trump;

25 And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,— “Great Hector's sister did Achilles win;
“But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.”

Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak;
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.
[Exit.

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd you:

A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this:

35 They think, my little stomach to the war,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
40 Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector? [by him.

Patr. Ay; and, perhaps, receive much honour

Achil. I see, my reputation is at stake;

My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O, then beware; [selves:

Those wounds heal ill, that men do give them-
Omission to do what is necessary

Seals a commission to a blank of danger⁵;

And danger, like an ague, subtly taints

50 Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus:

I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him

To invite the Trojan lords after the combat,

To see us here unarm'd: I have a woman's long-

55 An appetite that I am sick withal, [ing,

To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;

To talk with him, and to behold his visage,

Even to my full of view.—A labour sav'd!

¹ To creep is to keep out of sight, from whatever motive.—The meaning is, Some men keep out of notice in the hall of fortune, while others, though they but play the ideot, are always in her eye, in the way of distinction. ² The meaning of mission, Dr. Johnson says, seems to be dispatches of the gods from heaven about mortal business, such as often happened at the siege of Troy. ³ Polyxena; in the act of marrying whom, he was afterwards killed by Paris. ⁴ i. e. There is a secret administration of affairs, which no history was ever able to discover. ⁵ i. e. By neglecting our duty, we commission or enable that danger of dishonour, which could not reach us before, to lay hold upon us.

Enter Thersites.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What? [for himself.

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector; and is so prophetically proud of an heroic cudgelling, that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock, a stride, and a stand: ruminates, like an hostess, that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politic regard¹, as who should say—there were wit in this head, an 'twould out; and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he'll break it himself in vain-glory.

He knows not me: I said, Good-morrow, Ajax; and he replies, Thanks, Agamemnon. What think you of this man, that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer no body; he professes not answering; speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence; let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus: Tell him,—I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent; and to procure safe conduct for his person, of the magnanimous, and most illustrious, six-or-seven-times-honour'd captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon, &c. Do this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax!

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent.

Ther. Hum!

[memnon.

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Aga-

Ther. Agamemnon?

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to't?

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock, it will go one way or other; howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What musick will be in him when Hector has knock'd out his brains, I know not: But, I am sure, none; unless the fidler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings² on.

[straight.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse; for that's the more capable creature.

[stirr'd;

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt Achilles, and Patroclus.

Ther. 'Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep, than such a valiant ignorance.

[Exit.

A C T IV.

SCENE I.

A Street in Troy.

Enter at one door Æneas, and Servant, with a torch; at another, Paris, Deiphobus, Antenor, and Diomed, &c. with torches.

Par. SEE, ho! who is that there?

Deiph. It is the lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person?—

Had I so good occasion to lie long, [ness
As you, prince Paris, nought but heavenly busi-
Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Diom. That's my mind too.—Good morrow, lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas; take his hand: Witness the process of your speech, wherein You told—how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir,

During all question³ of the gentle truce:

But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance,
As heart can think, or courage execute.

Diom. The one and other Diomed embraces. Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long, health: But when contention and occasion meet, By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life, With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly With his face backward. In humane gentleness, Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear, No man alive can love, in such a sort,

The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Diom. We sympathize:—Jove, let Æneas live, If to my sword his fate be not the glory, ¹ With a sly look. ² A calling signifies a small lute-string made of catgut. ³ Question here means intercourse, interchange of conversation.

S C E N E II.

Pandarus' House.Enter Troilus, and Cressida.

Troi. Dear, trouble not yourself; the morn is cold. [down;

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call my uncle
He shall unbolt the gates.

Troi. Trouble him not;

To bed, to bed: Sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses,
As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres. Good morrow then.

Troi. I pr'ythee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you aweary of me?

Troi. O Cressida! but that the busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, has rouz'd the ribald crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,
I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief.

Troi. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights
she stays,

As tediously as hell; but flies the grasps of love,
With wings more momentary swift than thought.

Cres. Pr'ythee, tarry;—you men will never tarry,
O foolish Cressida!—I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarry'd. Hark! there's one up.

Pan. [Within] What's all the doors open here?

Troi. It is your uncle.

Enter Pandarus. [ing:

Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mock-
I shall have such a life,—

Pan. How now, how now? how go maiden-heads?—Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid?

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!

Pan. You bring me to do², and then you flout me too.

To do what? to do what?—let her say
What have I brought you to do? [what:

Cres. Come, come; beshrew your heart! you'll ne'er be good,

Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchia¹!—hast not slept to-night? would he not,
a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!

[One knocks.

Cres. Did not I tell you?—'would he were knock'd o' the head!—

Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see.—

My lord, come you again into my chamber:

You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Troi. Ha, ha! [thing—

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such

How earnestly they knock!—pray you, come in;

I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Knock.

[Exit.

A thousand complete courses of the sun!
But, in mine emulous honour, let him die,
With every joint a wound; and that to-morrow!

Ane. We know each other well. [worse.

Diom. We do; and long to know each other

Par. This is the most despightful gentle greeting,

The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.—
What business, lord, so early?

Ane. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not. [Greek

Par. His purpose meets you; 'Twas to bring this
To Calchas' house; and there to render him
For the enfréed Antenor, the fair Cressid:

Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us: I constantly do think,

(Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge)
My brother Troilus lodges there to-night;

Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore: I fear,

We shall be much unwelcome.

Ane. That I assure you:

Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece,
Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help;

The bitter disposition of the time

Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Ane. Good morrow, all. [Exit.

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed; 'faith, tell me true,

Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship,—

Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best, Myself, or Menelaus?

Diom. Both alike:

He merits well to have her, that doth seek her
(Not making any scruple of her soylure)

With such a hell of pain, and world of charge;
And you as well to keep her, that defend her

(Not palating the taste of her dishonour)
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends:

He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece¹;

You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors:

Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more;
But he as he, the heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your country-woman.

Diom. She's bitter to her country: Hear me,
Paris,—

For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple

Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Trojan hath been slain: since she could speak,

She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy:

But we in silence hold this virtue well,—
We'll not commend what we intend to sell.

Here lies our way, [Exeunt.

¹ i. e. a piece of wine out of which the spirit is all flown. ² To do is here used in an obscene sense. ³ Meaning to say, "Poor fool! hast not slept to-night?"—The Italian word capocchio signifies the thick head of a club; and thence, metaphorically, a head of not much brain, a sot, dullard, heavy gull.

Pan. Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now? what's the matter?

Enter Æneas.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there? my lord Æneas? By my troth, I knew you not: What news with you so early?

Æne. Is not prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! what should he do here? [him;

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord, do not deny it doth import him much, to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know, I'll be sworn:—For my own part, I came in late:—What should he do here?

Æne. Who!—nay, then:— [ware: Come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you are You'll be so true to him, to be false to him: Do not you know of him, but yet fetch him hither; Go.

As Pandarus is going out, enter Troilus.

Troi. How now? what's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you, My matter is so rash¹: There is at hand Paris your brother, and Deiphobus, The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith, Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour, We must give up to Diomedes' hand The lady Cressida.

Troi. Is it concluded so?

Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy: They are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Troi. How my achievements mock me!— I will go meet them: and, my lord Æneas, We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of neighbour Pandar

Have not more gift in taciturnity.

[Exeunt Troilus, and Æneas.

Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got, but lost? The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would, they had broke's neck!

Enter Cressida.

Cres. How now? What's the matter? Who was here?

Pan. Ah, ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord? gone?

Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan. 'Would I were as deep under the earth, as I am above!

Cres. O the gods!—what's the matter?

Pan. Pr'ythee get thee in; Would thou had'st ne'er been born! I knew, thou wouldst be his death:—O poor gentleman!—A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you on my knees, I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art chang'd for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus; 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it.

Cres. O you immortal gods!—I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father; I know no touch of consanguinity;

No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me, As the sweet Troilus.—O you gods divine!

Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood, If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,

Do to this body what extremes you can; But the strong base and building of my love

Is as the very center of the earth, Drawing all things to it.—I'll go in, and weep,—

Pan. Do, do. [cheeks;

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy, [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Before Pandarus' House.

Enter Paris, Troilus, Æneas, Diomedes, &c.

Par. It is great morning²; and the hour prefix'd Of her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon:—Good my brother Troilus, Tell you the lady what she is to do, And haste her to the purpose.

Troi. Walk in to her house; I'll bring her to the Grecian presently: And to his hand when I deliver her, Think it an altar; and thy brother Troilus A priest, there offering to it his own heart.

[Exit Troilus.

Par. I know what 'tis to love; And 'would, as I shall pity, I could help!— Please you, walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

An Apartment in Pandarus' House.

Enter Pandarus, and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation? The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste, And violenteth in a sense as strong As that which causeth it: How can I moderate it? If I could temporize with my affection, Or brew it to a weak and colder palate, The like allayment could I give my grief: My love admits no qualifying dross; No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes.—Ah sweet ducks!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus!

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too: O heart,—as the goodly saying is,— —o heart, o heavy heart,

Why sigh'st thou without breaking?

where he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart

By friendship, nor by speaking.

¹ i. e. so hasty, so abrupt.

² Grand jour, a Gallicism.

There never was a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse; we see it, we see it.—How now, lambs?

Troi. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity, That the blest gods—as angry with my fancy, More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities—take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Troi. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Troi. From Troy, and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Troi. And suddenly; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows Even in the birth of our own labouring breath: We two, that with so many thousand sighs Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves With the rude brevity and discharge of one. Injurious time now, with a robber's haste, Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how: As many farewells as be stars in heaven, With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to them, He fumbles up into a loose adieu; And scants us with a single famish'd kiss, Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Aeneas. [Within.] My lord! is the lady ready?

Troi. Hark! you are call'd: Some say, the Genius so

Cries, Come! to him that instantly must die.— Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, Or my heart will be blown up by the root.

[Exit Pandarus.]

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Troi. No remedy. [Greeks!—]

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry When shall we see again?

Troi. Hear me, my love:—Be thou but true of heart,—

Cres. I true! how now? what wicked deem is Troi. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly, For it is parting from us:—

I speak not, be thou true, as fearing thee; For I will throw my glove¹ to death himself, That there's no maculation in thy heart: But, be thou true, say I, to fashion in My frequent protestation; be thou true, And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, to danger As infinite as imminent! but, I'll be true.

Troi. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see

Troi. I will corrupt the Grecian centinels,

To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens!—be true, again?

Troi. Hear why I speak it, love: The Grecian youths

Are well compos'd, with gifts of nature flowing, And swelling o'er with arts and exercise; How novelties may move, and parts with person, Alas, a kind of godly jealousy

(Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin) Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Troi. Die I a villain then!

In this I do not call your faith in question, So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing,

Nor heel the high lavolt², nor sweeten talk,

Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all, To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:

But I can tell, that in each grace of these There lurks a still and dumb-discursive devil, That tempts most cunningly: But be not tempted.

Cres. Do you think, I will?

Troi. No.

But something may be done, that we will not; And sometimes we are devils to ourselves, When we will tempt the frailty of our powers, Presuming on their changeable potency.

Aeneas. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—

Troi. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Paris. [Within.] Brother Troilus!

Troi. Good brother, come you hither;

And bring Aeneas, and the Grecian, with you.

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Troi. Who I? alas, it is my vice, my fault: While others fish with craft for great opinion, I with great truth catch mere simplicity; Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns, With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.

Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit³ Is—plain, and true,—there's all the reach of it.

Enter Aeneas, Paris, and Diomed.

Welcome, sir Diomed! here is the lady, Whom for Antenor we deliver you:

At the port⁴, lord, I'll give her to thy hand;

And, by the way, possess thee what she is⁵.

Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek, If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword, Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe

As Priam is in Ilion.

Diom. Fair lady Cressid, [pects:

So please you, save the thanks this prince expects The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek, Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed

You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Troi. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously, To shame the zeal of my petition to thee, In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece, She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises, As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.

¹ That is, I will challenge death himself in defence of thy fidelity.

² The lavolta was a dance.

³ That is, the governing principle of my understanding. ⁴ i. e. the gate. ⁵ i. e. I will make thee fully understand.

I charge thee, use her well, even for my charge:
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Diom. O, be not mov'd, prince Troilus:
Let me be privileg'd by my place, and message,
To be a speaker free; when I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust: And know you, lord,
I'll nothing do on charge: to her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that thou say—be't so,
I speak it in my spirit and honour,—no.

Troi. Come, to the port.—I'll tell thee, Diomed,
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head.—
Lady, give me your hand; and as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Exeunt Troilus and Cressida. Sound trumpet.]

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Ane. How have we spent this morning!
The prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault: Come, come, to field with him.

Diom. Let us make ready straight.

Ane. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity,
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

The Grecian Camp.

Enter Ajax arm'd, Agamemnon, Achilles, Patroclus, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor, &c.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,
Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant,
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse:
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:
Blow, villain, till thy spher'd bias cheek¹
Out-swell the cholic of puff'd Aquilon: [blood;
Come stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout
Thou blow'st for Hector.

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early days. [ter:]

Agam. Is not yon Diomed, with Calchas' daugh-

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on his toe; that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter Diomed, with Cressida.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressida?

Diom. Even she. [lady:]

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;

'Twere better, she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin.
So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair
Achilles bids you welcome. [lady:]

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now:

5 For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment;

And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!

For which we lose our heads, to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss; this, mine:
10 Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O, this is trim!

Patr. Paris, and I, kiss evermore for him.

Men. I'll have my kiss, sir; Lady, by your leave.

15 Cres. In kissing, do you render, or receive?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give;

Therefore no kiss. [one.]

20 Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for Cres. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 'tis true,
That you are odd, and he is even with you.

25 Men. You filip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.—

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

30 Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg then. [kiss]

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a 35 Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.

Dio. Lady, a word; I'll bring you to your father. [Diomed leads out Cressida.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

40 Ulyss. Fie, fie, upon her!

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip,
Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out
At every joint and motive² of her body.

O, these encounters, so glib of tongue,

45 That give a coasting³ welcome ere it comes,

And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts

To every ticklish reader! set them down

For sluttish spoils of opportunity⁴,

And daughters of the game. [Trumpet within.]

50 All. The Trojans' trumpet!

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Enter Hector, Aeneas, Troilus, &c. with attendants.

Ane. Hail, all the state of Greece! What shall be done to him

55 That victory commands? Or do you purpose

A victor shall be known? Will you the knights

Shall to the edge of all extremity

Pursue each other; or shall they be divided

By any voice or order of the field?

60 Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Aeneas. He cares not, he'll obey conditions.

Agamemnon. 'Tis done like Hector! but securely¹ done,
A little proudly, and great deal misprising
The knight oppos'd.

Aeneas. If not Achilles, sir,
What is your name?

Achilles. If not Achilles, nothing. [this:—

Aeneas. Therefore Achilles: But, whate'er, know
In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
And that, which looks like pride, is courtesy.
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood;
In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;
Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek
This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.

Achilles. A maiden battle then!—O, I perceive you.

Re-enter Diomed.

Agamemnon. Here is Sir Diomed:—Go, gentle knight,
Stand by our Ajax: as you and lord Aeneas
Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breath: the combatants being kin,
Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

Ulysses. They are oppos'd already. [heavy?

Agamemnon. What Trojan is that same that looks so

Ulysses. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight;
Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word;
Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon calm'd.
His heart and hand both open, and both free;
For what he has, he gives, what thinks, he shews;
Yet gives he not, till judgement guide his bounty,
Nor dignifies an impair'd thought with breath:
Manly as Hector, but more dangerous:
For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes³
To tender objects; but he, in heat of action,
Is more vindicative than jealous love:
They call him Troilus, and on him erect
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.
Thus says Aeneas: one that knows the youth
Even to his inches, and, with private soul,
Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me⁴.

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.

Agamemnon. They are in action.

Nestor. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

Troilus. Hector, thou sleep'st, awake thee!

Agamemnon. His blows are well dispos'd:—there, Ajax!

[Trumpets cease.

Diomedes. You must no more.

Aeneas. Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.

Diomedes. As Hector pleases.

Hector. Why then, will I no more:—

Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
A cousin-german to great Priam's seed;
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation 'twixt us twain:
Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so,

That thou could'st say—“This hand is Grecian all,
“And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg
“All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood “Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister
5 “Bounds in my father's;” by Jove multipotent,
Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member Wherein my sword had not impressure made
Of our rank feud: But the just gods gainsay,
That any drop thou borrow'st from thy mother,
10 My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword
Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax:
By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms;
Hector would have them fall upon him thus:—
Cousin, all honour to thee!

15 Ajax. I thank thee, Hector:

Thou art too gentle and too free a man:
I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death.

Hector. Not Neoptolemus so mirable [yes
(On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st Cries, This is he) could promise to himself
A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

Aeneas. There is expectance here from both the
What further you will do. [sides,

25 Hector. We'll answer it⁵;

The issue is embracement:—Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,
(As seld I have the chance) I would desire
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

30 Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish; and great Achilles
Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hector. Aeneas, call my brother Troilus to me;
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part:

35 Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cousin;
I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hector. The worthiest of them tell me name by name;

40 But for Achilles, my own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agamemnon. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy:

45 But that's no welcome: Understand more clear,
What's past, and what's to come, is strew'd with

And formless ruin of oblivion; [husks

But in this extant moment, faith and troth,

Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing,

Bids thee, with most divine integrity,

50 From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hector. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

Agamemnon. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you. [To Troilus.

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting;—

55 You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hector. Whom must we answer?

Men. The noble Menelaus.

Hector. O you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, 60 thanks!

¹ Securely is here used in the sense of the Latin, securus; a negligent security arising from a contempt of the object opposed.

² i. e. A thought unsuitable to the dignity of his character.

³ That is, yields, gives way.

⁴ i. e. thus explain his character.

⁵ That is, answer the ex-pectance.

Mock not, that I affect the untraded oath;
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove:
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.

Hect. O, pardon; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way [thee
Through ranks of Greekish youth; and I have seen
As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many forfeits and subduements,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' the air,
Not letting it decline on the declin'd;
That I have said to some my standers-by,
Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!

And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: This have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in still,
I never saw 'till now. I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee! let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Ane. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time:--
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would, my arms could match thee in contention,
As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha! by this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow.

Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time--

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, lord Ulysses, well.
Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue:
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls that pertly front your town,
Yon towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet; and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: The end crowns all;
And that old common arbitrator, time,
Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle, and most valiant Hector, welcome:
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, lord Ulysses, thou!--
Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted² joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles?

Achil. I am Achilles. [thee.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief; I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er;

But there's more in me than thou understand'st.

Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body [there?

Shall I destroy him? whether there, there, or

That I may give the local wound a name;

And make distinct the very breach whereout

Hector's great spirit flew: Answer me, heavens!

Hect. It would discredit the blest gods, proud man,

To answer such a question: Stand again:

Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly,

As to prenominate in nice conjecture,

Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee, yea.

Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,

I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;

For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;

But, by the forge that stithy'd Mars his elm,

I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er.—

You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag,

His insolence draws folly from my lips;

But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,

Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin;—

And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,

'Till accident, or purpose, bring you to't:

You may have every day enough of Hector,

If you have stomach; the general state, I fear,

Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field:

We have had pelting wars, since you refus'd

The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?

To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death;

To-night, all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match. [tent;

Agam. First all your peers of Greece, go to my

As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall

Concur together, severally entreat him.—

Beat loud the tabourines⁴, let the trumpets blow,

That this great soldier may his welcome know.

[Exeunt.

Manent Troilus, and Ulysses.

Troi. My lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,

In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus:

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night;

Who neither looks on heaven, nor on the earth,

But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view

On the fair Cressid. [much,

Troi. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so

² To convive is to feast.

⁴ Tabourines are small drums.

After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring them thither?

Ulyss. You shall command me, sir.
As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there,
That wails her absence?

Troi. O, sir, to such as boasting shew their scars
A mock is due: Will you walk on, my lord?
She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth:
But, still, sweet love is food for fortune's tooth.
[Exeunt.]

A C T V.

SCENE I.

Achilles' Tent.

Enter Achilles, and Patroclus.

Achil. I'LL heat his blood with Greekish wine
to-night,
Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.—
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

Achil. Ho now, thou core of envy?
Thou crusty batch¹ of nature, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

Patr. Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks?

Ther. Pr'ythee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that?

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, lime-kilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivell'd fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries!

Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt; you whore-son indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleive silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pester'd with such water-flies? diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall!

15 Ther. Finch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite
From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle.
Here is a letter from queen Hecuba;
A token from her daughter, my fair love;
20 Both taxing me, and gaging me to keep
An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it:
Fall, Greeks; fail, fame; honour, or go or stay;
My major vows lie here, this I'll obey.—
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;
25 This night in banqueting must all be spent.—
Away, Patroclus. Exeunt.

Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain and too little blood, they do, I'll be a curer 30 of madmen. Here's Agamemnon,—an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails²; but he hath not so much brain as ear-wax: And the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique³ me-35 morial of cuckolds; a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced⁴ with wit, turn him? To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ox 40 were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care: but to be a Menelaus,—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I 45 would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus.
—Hey day! spirits, and fires!

Enter Hector, Troilus, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, and Diomed, with lights.

50 Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;
There, where we see the light.

Hect. I trouble you.

55 Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

¹ Batch signifies all that is baked at one time, without heating the oven afresh. A batch of bread is a phrase still used in Staffordshire.—Thersites had already been called cobloaf. ² By loving quails, the poet may mean loving the company of harlots.—A quail is remarkably salacious. ³ The author of The Revival observes, that "the memorial is called oblique, because it was only indirectly such, upon the common supposition that both bulls and cuckolds were furnished with horns." ⁴ i. e. stuffed with wit.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good night. Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and good night, to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught: Sweet, quoth a'! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night, and welcome, both at once, to those

That go, or tarry.

Agam. Good night. [Exeunt Agam. and Men.]

Achil. Old Nestor tarries: and you too, Diomed, keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business, The tide whereof is now.—Good night, great Hec-

Hect. Give me your hand. [tor.]

Ulyss. Follow his torch, he goes to Calchas' tent; I'll keep you company. [To Troilus.]

Troi. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so, good night.

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt severally.]

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth, and promise like Brabler¹ the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it; it is prodigious, there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him; they say, he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas his tent: I'll after.—Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets! [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Calchas' Tent.

Enter Diomed.

Diom. What are you up here, ho? speak.

Cal. Who calls?

Diom. Diomed.—

Calchas, I think. Where is your daughter?

Cal. She comes to you.

Enter Troilus, and Ulysses, at a distance; after them Thersites.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter Cressida.

Troi. Cressid come forth to him!

Diom. How now, my charge?

Cress. Now, my sweet guardian!—Hark, A word with you. [Whispers.]

Troi. Yea, so familiar!

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man

Maysing her, if he can take her cliff²; she's noted.

Diom. Will you remember?

Cres. Remember? yes.

Diom. Nay, but do then;

And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Troi. What should she remember?

Ulyss. List! [folly.]

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to Ther. Roguery!

Diom. Nay then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what.

Diom. Pho! pho! come, tell a pin: You are forsworn—

Cres. In faith, I cannot: What would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick, to be—secretly open.

Diom. What did you swear you would bestow on me?

Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath; Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Diom. Good night.

Troi. Hold, patience!

Ulyss. How now, Trojan?

Cres. Diomed,—

Diom. No, no, good night: I'll be your fool no more.

Troi. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark, one word in your ear.

Troi. O plague and madness! [pray you,]

Ulyss. You are mov'd, prince; let us depart, I Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself

To wrathful terms: this place is dangerous;

The time right deadly; I beseech you, go.

Troi. Behold, I pray you!

Ulyss. Now, good my lord, go off:

You flow to great distraction³: come, my lord.

Troi. I pr'ythee, stay.

Ulyss. You have not patience; come. [torments,]

Troi. I pray you, stay; by hell, and by hell's I will not speak a word.

Diom. And so good night.

Cres. Nay but you part in anger.

Troi. Doth that grieve thee?

O wither'd truth!

Ulyss. Why, how now, lord?

Troi. By Jove, I will be patient.

Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!

Diom. Pho, pho! adieu; you palter.

Cres. In faith, I do not; come hither once again.

Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something; will you go?

Troi. You will break out.

Troi. She strokes his cheek!

Ulyss. Come, come. [word.]

Troi. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a There is between my will and all offences

A guard of patience:—stay a little while.

Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump, and potatoe finger, tickles these together⁴! Fry, lechery, fry!

¹ If a hound gives his mouth, and is not upon the scent of the game, he is by sportsmen called a babler or brabler.

² Cliff is a mark in musick at the beginning of the lines of a song; and is the indication of the pitch, and bespeaks what kind of voice,—as base, tenour, treble, it is proper for.

³ The meaning is, The tide of your imagination will hurry you either to noble death from the hand of Diomed, or to the height of madness from the predominance of your own passions.

⁴ Mr. Collins explains this passage thus: "Luxuria was the appropriate term used by school-divines, to express the sin of incontinence, which accordingly is called luxury in all our old English writers.—But why

Diom. But will you then?
Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me else.
Diom. Give me some token for the surety of it.
Cres. I'll fetch you one.
Ulyss. You have sworn patience.
Troi. Fear me not, my lord;
 I will not be myself, nor have cognition
 Of what I feel; I am all patience.
Re-enter Cressida.
Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now!
Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve¹.
Troi. O beauty!
 Where is thy faith?
Ulyss. My lord,—
Troi. I will be patient; outwardly, I will.
Cres. You look upon that sleeve: Behold it well.—
 He lov'd me—O false wench!—Give't me again.
Diom. Whose was't?
Cres. It is no matter, now I have't again.
 I will not meet with you to-morrow night;
 I pr'ythee, Diomed, visit me no more.
Ther. Now shesharpens;—Well said, whetstone.
Diom. I shall have it.
Cres. What, this?
Diom. Ay, that.
Cres. O, all you gods!—O pretty pretty pledge!
 Thy master now lies thinking on his bed
 Of thee, and me; and sighs, and takes my glove,
 And gives memorial dainty kisses to it,
 As I kiss thee.—Nay, do not snatch it from me;
 He, that takes that, must take my heart withal.
Diom. I had your heart before, this follows it.
Troi. I did swear patience.
Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith you shall not;
 I'll give you something else.
Diom. I will have this; Whose was it?
Cres. It is no matter.
Diom. Come, tell me whose it was, [will. 40
Cres. 'Twas one's that lov'd me better than you
 But, now you have it, take it.
Diom. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diana's waiting women yonder²,
 And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Diom. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm;
 And grieve his spirit, that dares not challenge it.
Troi. Wer't thou the devil, and wor'st it on thy horn,
 It should be challeng'd. [is not; 50
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past;—and yet it
 I will not keep my word.
Diom. Why then, farewell;
 Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cres. You shall not go:—One cannot speak a
 But it straight starts you. [word, 55
Diom. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you,
 Pleases me best.
Diom. What, shall I come? the hour?

Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!—
 Do, come:—I shall be plagu'd.
Diom. Farewell, 'till then. [Exit.
Cres. Good night. I pr'ythee, come.
 5 Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee;
 But with my heart the other eye doth see.—
 Alas! poor our sex! this fault in us I find,
 The error of our eye directs our mind:
 What error leads, must err; O then conclude,
 10 Minds, sway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude. [Exit.
Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more³,
 Unless she say, My mind is now turn'd whore.
Ulyss. All's done, my lord.
 15 Troi. It is.
Ulyss. Why stay we then?
Troi. To make a recordation to my soul
 Of every syllable that here was spoke.
 But, if I tell how these two did co-act,
 20 Shall I not lye in publishing a truth?
 Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
 An esperence so obstinately strong,
 That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears;
 As if those organs had deceptious functions,
 25 Created only to calumniate.
 Was Cressid here?
Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan,
Troi. She was not, sure.
Ulyss. Most sure, she was.
 30 Troi. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.
Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.
Troi. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!
 Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage
 To stubborn critics—apt, without a theme,
 For depravation—to square the general sex
 By Cressid's rule: rather think this is not Cressid.
Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?
 40 Troi. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.
Ther. Will he swagger himself out on's own eyes?
Troi. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida:
 If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
 If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimony,
 45 If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
 If there be rule in unity itself⁴,
 This is not she. O madness of discourse,
 That cause sets up with and against itself!
 Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt
 50 Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
 Without revolt⁵; this is, and is not, Cressid;
 Within my soul there doth commence a fight
 Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate
 Divides far wider than the sky and earth;
 55 And yet the spacious breadth of this division
 Admits no orifice for a point, as subtle
 As Arachnè's broken woof, to enter.
 Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
 Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
 60 Instance, O instance! strong as Heaven itself;

The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;

And with another knot, five-finger-tied¹,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy reliques
Of her o'er-eaten² faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express!

Troi. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well
In characters as red as Mars his heart
Inflam'd with Venus: never did young man fancy
With so eternal, and so fix'd a soul.

Hark, Greek;—As much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed:

That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm;
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,

My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout,
Which shipmen do the hurricano call,

Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear

In his descent, than shall my prompted sword
Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy.

Troi. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,

And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O, contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter Æneas.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord;
Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;

Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Troi. Have with you, prince:—My courteous lord, adieu:—

Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle³ on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Troi. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exeunt Troilus, Æneas, and Ulysses.]

Ther. 'Would, I could meet that rogue Diomed!
I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode, Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore; the parrot will not do more for an almond, than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery; still, wars and lechery: nothing else holds fashion: A burning devil take them! [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The palace of Troy.

Enter Hector, and Andromache.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,

To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in:
By all the everlasting gods, I'll go. [day.]

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to—Hect. No more, I say.

Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent:
Consort with me in loud and dear petition,

Pursue we him on knees; for I have dreamt
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night [ter.]

Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaugh-
Cas. O, it is true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound!

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother. [swear.]

Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard me
Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows;

They are polluted offerings, more abhorr'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O! be persuaded: Do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful

For us to count we give what's gain'd by thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose, that makes strong the vow;
But vows to every purpose must not hold:

Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:

Life every man holds dear; but the dear⁴ man
Holds honour far more precious—dear than life.—

Enter Troilus.

How now, young man? mean'st thou to fight today?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.
[Exit Cassandra.]

Hect. No, 'faith, young Troilus; doff⁵ thy harness, youth;

I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews 'till their knots be strong,

And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave boy,

I'll stand, to-day, for thee, and me, and Troy.

Troi. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion, than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it. [fall,]

Troi. When many times the captive Grecians
Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,

You bid them rise, and live.

Hect. O, 'tis fair play.

Troi. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector!

Hect. How now? how now?

Troi. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mother;

And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;

Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.

Hect. Fie, savage, fie!

Troi. Hector, then 'tis wars. [day.]

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-Troi. Who should withhold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;

⁵ i. e. put off.

Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'er-galled with recourse¹ of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn,
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter Cassandra, with Priam.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:
He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Priam. Come, Hector, come, go back:
Thy wife hath dreamt; thy mother hath had vi-
Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself [sions;
Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee—that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Æneas is a-field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Priam. But thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.

And. Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit Andromache.]

Troi. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell, dear Hector!
Look, how thoudy'st! look, how thy eye turns pale!
Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!
Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!
How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth!
Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless anticks, one another meet,
And all cry—Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Troi. Away!—Away!—

Cas. Farewell. Yet soft:—Hector, I take my leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. [Exit.]

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim:
Go in, and cheer the town: we'll forth, and fight;
Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at night.

Priam. Farewell: The gods with safety stand about thee! [Exit Priam. Alarums.]

Troi. They are at it; hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Troi. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter come from yon' poor girl.

Troi. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson ptisick, a whoreson rascally ptisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days; And I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that, unless a man were curst, I cannot tell what to think on't.—What says she there?

Troi. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart; [Tearing the letter.]

5 The effect doth operate another way.—
Go, wind to wind, there turn and change together.—
My love with words and errors still she feeds;
But edifies another with her deeds.

Pan. Why, but hear you— [shame

10 Troi. Hence, broker lacquey!—Ignominy and Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.

Between Troy and the Camp.

15 [Alarum.] Enter Thersites.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy, there, 20 in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whore-masterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, of a sleeveless errand. O' the 25 other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor; and that same dog-fox, Ulysses,—is not prov'd worth a black-berry:—They set me up in policy, that mungil cur, Ajax, against that dog, of 30 as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism²; and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here comes sleeve, and t'other.

Enter Diomed, and Troilus.

Troi. Fly not; for, should'st thou take the river
I would swim after. [Styx,

Diom. Thou dost mis-call retire:
I do not fly; but advantageous care

40 Withdrew me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee! [They go off fighting.]

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

Enter Hector.

45 Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match;

Art thou of blood, and honour?
Ther. No, no;—I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

50 Hect. I do believe thee;—live. [Exit.]

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me;
but a plague break thy neck, for frightening me!
What's become of the wenching rogues? I think, they have swallowed one another: I would laugh
55 at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself.
I'll seek them. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

The Same.

Enter Diomed, and a Servant.

60 Diom. Go, go, my servant; take thou Troilus' horse;

¹ i. e. tears that continue to course one another down the face.
sneering; which is most probably right.
that they will be governed by policy no longer.

² Mr. Theobald supposes
i. e. to set up the authority of ignorance, to declare

Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid:
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;
Tell her, I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan,
And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord.

Enter Agamemnon.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas
Hath beat down Menon: bastard Margarelon
Hath Doreus prisoner;
And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,
Upon the pashed corpses of the kings
Epistrophus and Cediús: Polixenes is slain;
Amphimachus, and Thoas, deadly hurt;
Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruis'd: the dreadful Sagittary¹
Appals our numbers; haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles;
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame.—
There is a thousand Hectors in the field:
Now here he fights on Galathè² his horse,
And there lacks work; anon, he's there afoot,
And there they fly, or die, like scaled sculls³
Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,
And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him, like the mower's swath:
Here, there, and every where, he leaves and takes;
Dexterity so obeying appetite,
That what he will, he does; and does so much,
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. O courage, courage, princes! great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance:
Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noseless, handless, hack'd and chip'd, come
to him,
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it,
Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day
Mad and fantastic execution;
Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force, and forceless care,
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.]

Diom. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together. [Exeunt.]

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector?

Come, come, thou boy-queller, shew thy face;
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.
Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector.
[Exit.]

SCENE VI.

Another part of the Field.

Re-enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, shew thy head!

Enter Diomed.

Diom. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What wouldst thou?

Diom. I would correct him. [my office,

Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have Ere that correction:—Troilus, I say! what, Troi-lus!

Enter Troilus.

Troilus. O traitor Diomed!—turn thy false face,
thou traitor,

And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!

Diom. Ha! art thou there?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone; stand, Diomed.

Diom. He is my prize; I will not look upon.

Troi. Come both, you cogging Greeks; have at you both. [Exeunt fighting.]

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now, do I see thee: Ha!—Have at thee, Hector. [Fight.]

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.
Be happy, that my arms are out of use:
My rest and negligence befriend thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
'Till when, go seek thy fortune.

Hect. Fare thee well:—

I would have been much more a fresher man,
Had I expected thee.—How now, my brother?

Re-enter Troilus.

Troi. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas; Shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him; I'll be taken too,
Or bring him off:—Fate, hear me what I say!
I reck not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.]

Enter one in armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark:—

No? wilt thou not?—I like thy armour well;
I'll frush⁴ it, and unlock the rivets all,

¹ "Beyond the royalme of Amasonne came an auncyent kynge, wyse and dyscreete, named Epystrophus, and brought a M. knyghtes, and a marvayllouse beste that was called SAGITTAYRE, that behynde the myddes was an horse, and to fore, a man: This beste was heery like an horse, and had his eyen rede as a cole; and shotte well with a bowe: This beste made the Greekes sore aferde, and slewe many of them with his bowe."—The Three Destructions of Troy, printed by Caxton.

² From The Three Destructions of Troy is taken this name given to Hector's horse. ³ Sculls are great numbers of fishes swimming together. ⁴ Dr. Johnson says, he never found the word frush elsewhere, nor does he understand it; but that Hammer explains it, to break or bruise. Mr. Steevens adds, that to frush a chicken, is a term in carving which he cannot explain; but that the word is as ancient as Wynkyn de Worde's Booke of Kervinge, 1508; and that it seems to be sometimes used for any action of violence by which things are separated, disordered, or destroyed.

But I'll be master of it:—Wilt thou not, beast, abide?

Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.

[Exit.]

SCENE VII.

The Same.

Enter Achilles, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons;

Mark what I say,—Attend me where I wheel:
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath;
And when I have the bloody Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about;
In fellest manner execute your arms¹.
Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye:—
It is decreed—Hector the great must die.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.

The Same.

Enter Thersites, Menelaus, and Paris.

Ther. The cuckold, and the cuckold-maker are at it: Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo!
now my double-hen'd sparrow! 'loo, Paris, 'loo!
The bull has the game:—'ware horns, ho!

[Exeunt Paris, and Menelaus.]

Enter Margarelon.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's.

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quar-rel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgement: Farewell, bastard.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.

Another Part of the Field.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrified core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done; I'll take good breath:
Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death!

Enter Achilles, and his Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set;
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels;
Even with the vail² and dark'ning of the sun,
To close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd; forego this 'vantage, Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike; this is the man
I seek.

[Hector falls.]

So, Ilion, fall thou next! now Troy, sink down;
Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone,—
On, Myrmidons; and cry you all amain,
'Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.'

5 Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part. [Lord,

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, my Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth,

And, stickler-like³, the armies separates.

10 My half-supt sword, that frankly would have fed,
Pleas'd with this dainty bit, thus goes to bed.

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail;

Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exeunt.]

[Sound retreat. Shout.]

SCENE X.

The Same.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomedes, and the rest, marching.

20 Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?

Nest. Peace, drums.

Sol. Achilles! Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be;

25 Great Hector was as good a man as he. [sent,

Agam. March patiently along:—Let one be
To pray Achilles see us at our tent.—

If in his death the gods have us befriended,

Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended,

[Exeunt.]

SCENE XI.

Another Part of the Field.

Enter Æneas, and Trojans.

35 Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field;

Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter Troilus.

Troi. Hector is slain.

40 All. Hector?—the gods forbid! [tail,

Troi. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's

In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field,

Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile⁴ at Troy!

45 I say, at once! let your brief plagues be mercy,

And linger not our sure destructions on!

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Troi. You understand me not, that tell me so;

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death;

50 But dare all imminence, that gods, and men,

Address their dangers in, Hector is gone!

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him, that will a screech-owl eye be call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead!

55 There is a word will Priam turn to stone;

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives;

¹ Mr. Steevens proposes to read—aims. ² i. e. the sinking of the sun. ³ A stickler was one who stood by to part the combatants when victory could be determined without bloodshed. They were called sticklers, from carrying sticks or staves in their hands, with which they interposed between the duellists.—We now call these sticklers sidesmen. ⁴ Mr. Steevens proposes to read—smite at Troy."

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,
Scare Troy out of itself. But, march away;
Hector is dead; there is no more to say.
Stay yet.—You vile abominable tents,
Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,
Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
I'll through and through you!—And thou, greatsiz'd coward!

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates;
I'll haunt thee, like a wicked conscience still,
That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy thoughts.
Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go;
Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Æneas, &c.

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Troi. Hence, broker lacquey! ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit Troilus.

Pan. A goodly med'cine for my aching bones!
Oh world! world! world! thus is the poor agent
despis'd!

O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavour be so lov'd, and the performance so loath'd? what verse for it? what instance for it?

—Let me see:—

5 Full merrily the humble bee doth sing,
'Till he hath lost his honey, and his sting:
But being once subdu'd in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.—
10 Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of Pandar's hall,
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;
Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
15 Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren, and sisters, of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my will shall here be made;
It should be now, but that my fear is this—
Some galled goose¹ of Winchester would hiss:
20 'Till then, I'll sweat, and seek about for eases;
And, at that time, bequeath you my diseases.

[Exit,

¹ Mr. Pope on this passage remarks, that the public stews were anciently under the jurisdiction of the bishop of Winchester.—A particular symptom in the lues venerea was called a Winchester goose; and this explanation may be supported by the vulgar phrase at present applied to a person infected with a certain disease, that "he has got the goose."

SCENE I.

Cymbeline's Palace in Britain.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. YOU do not meet a man, but frowns :
our bloods

No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers',
Still seem, as does the king's¹.

2 Gent. But what's the matter?

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom

He purpos'd to his wife's sole son, (a widow,
That late he married) hath referr'd herself [ded;
Unto a poor, but worthy gentleman: She's wed-
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all
Is outward sorrow; though, I think, the king
Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king? [queen,

1 Gent. He, that hath lost her, too: so is the
That most desir'd the match: But not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent

Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so? [thing

1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess, is a

5 Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her,
(I mean, that marry'd her,—alack, good man!—
And therefore banish'd) is a creature such

As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing

10 In him that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far.

1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself²;

15 Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.

2 Gent. What's his name, and birth?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: His father
Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour,

20 Against the Romans, with Cassibelan;
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom

¹ Dr. Johnson observes, that this passage is so difficult, that commentators may differ concerning it without animosity or shame;—that the lines stand as they were originally written, and that a paraphrase, such as the licentious and abrupt expressions of our author too frequently require, will make emendation unnecessary. We do not meet a man, but frowns; our bloods—our countenances, which, in popular speech, are said to be regulated by the temper of the blood,—no more obey the laws of heaven,—which direct us to appear what we really are,—than our courtiers; that is, than the bloods of our courtiers; but our bloods, like theirs,—still seem, as doth the king's. Mr. Steevens is of opinion, that blood appears to be used for inclination; and Mr. Tyrwhitt proposes to make the passage clear by a very slight alteration, only leaving out the last letter; "You do not meet a man but frowns: our bloods no more obey the heavens than our courtiers still seem, as does the king:—That is, Still look as the king does." ² The meaning is, My praise, however extensive, is within his merit.

He

He serv'd with glory and admir'd success;
So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus:
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons; who, in the wars o' the time,
Dy'd with their swords in hand: for which, their father

(Then old and fond of issue) took such sorrow,
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus;
Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber;
Puts to him all the learning that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast as 'twas minister'd; and
In his spring became a harvest: Liv'd in court,
(Which rare it is to do) most prais'd, most lov'd:
A sample to the youngest; to the more nature,
A glass that feated them¹; and to the graver,
A child that guided dotards: to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd,—her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read,
What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?

1 Gent. His only child.
He had two sons, (if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it) the eldest of them at three years old,
I' the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
Were stolen; and to this hour, no guess in know-
Which way they went. [ledge]

2 Gent. How long is this ago?

1 Gent. Some twenty years. [vey'd]

2 Gent. That a king's children should be so con-
So slackly guarded! and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

1 Gent. Howsoe'er 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.

1 Gent. We must forbear: Here comes the gentleman,
The queen, and princess. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, Imogen, and Attendants.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me,
daughter,
After the slander of most step-mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you: you are my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him; and 'twere good,
You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:—

I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections; though the king
Hath charg'd you should not speak together. [Exit.]
Imo. O dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband,
I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing, (Always reserv'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me: You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes; not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world,
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O, lady, weep no more; lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man! I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.
My residence in Rome, at one Philario's;
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter: thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,
Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
If the king come, I shall incur I know not [him]
How much of his displeasure:—Yet, I'll move [Aside.]

To walk this way: I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends;
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.]

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The lothness to depart would grow: Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself,
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;
This diamond was my mother's: take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another?—
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And sear up my embracements from a next
With bonds of death!—Remain, remain thou here
[Putting on the ring.]
While sense can keep it on! And sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss; so, in our trifles
I stil win of you: For my sake, wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it

[Putting a bracelet on her arm.]
Upon this fairest prisoner.

Imo. O, the gods!—
When shall we see again?

Enter Cymbeline, and Lords.
Post. Alack, the king!
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence from my sight!

If, after this command, thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou dy'st: Away!
Thou art poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you!
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. [Exit.]

¹ i. e. a glass that formed them, meaning, a model, by the contemplation and inspection of which they formed their manners.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this.

Cym. O disloyal thing,
That should'st repair my youth; thou heapest
A year's age on me!

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation; I
Am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare¹
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience?

Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That might'st have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo. O blest, that I might not! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a puttock².

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; would'st have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus:
You bred him as my play-fellow; and he is
A man worth any woman; over-buys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What?—art thou mad? [I were

Imo. Almost, sir:—Heaven restore me!—'Would
A neat-herd's daughter! and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter Queen.

Cym. Thou foolish thing!
They were again together: you have done
[To the Queen. 35
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience:—Peace,
Dear lady daughter, peace!—Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort

Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly! [Exit. 45

Enter Pisanio.

Queen. Fie!—you must give way: [news?
Here is your servant.—How now, sir? What

Pisan. My lord, your son, drew on my master.

Queen. Ha!
No harm, I trust, is done?

Pisan. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.—

To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!—
I would they were in Africk both together;

Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer back. Why came you from your master?

Pisan. On his command: He would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven: left these notes
5 Of what commands I should be subject to,
When it pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour,
He will remain so,

10 Pisan. I humbly thank your highness.

Queen. Pray, walk a while.

Imo. About some half hour hence, pray you speak with me:

You shall, at least, go see my lord aboard:

15 For this time, leave me. [Exit.

SCENE III.

Enter Cloten, and two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt;
20 the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: Where air comes out, air comes in:
there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clot. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it.—
25 Have I hurt him?

2 Lord. No, faith; not so much as his patience.
[Aside.

1 Lord. Hurt him? his body's a passable carcase, if he be not hurt: it is a thorough-fare for 30 steel, if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. His steel was in debt; it went o' the back-side of the town.

Clot. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. No; but he fled forward still, toward 35 your face. [Aside.

1 Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.

2 Lord. As many inches as you have oceans:
40 Puppies! [Aside.

Clot. I would, they had not come between us.

2 Lord. So would I, 'till you had measur'd how long a fool you were upon the ground. [Aside.

Clot. And that she should love this fellow, and 45 refuse me!

2 Lord. If it be a sin to make a true election,
she is damn'd. [Aside.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: She's a good sign³, 50 but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. [Aside.

Clot. Come, I'll to my chamber: 'Would there had been some hurt done!

55 2 Lord. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. [Aside.

Clot. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clot. Nay, come, let's go together.

60 2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exit.

¹ A touch more rare, may mean a nobler passion, or a more exquisite feeling, a superior sensation.
² A kite. ³ Sign here means fair outward shew. Mr. Steevens adds, that to understand the whole force of Shakspeare's idea, it should be remembered, that anciently almost every sign had a motto, or some attempt at a witticism, underneath it.

SCENE IV.

Imogen's Apartments.Enter Imogen, and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o'
the haven,

And question'dst ev'ry sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost
As offer'd mercy is¹. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pisan. 'Twas, ' His queen, his queen !'

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pisan. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I!—
And that was all?

Pisan. No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye, or ear,
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pisan. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
crack'd them, but
To look upon him; till the diminution
Of space² had pointed him sharp as my needle:
Nay, follow'd him, 'till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air; and then [nio,
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisanio,
When shall we hear from him?

Pisan. Be assur'd, madam,
With his next vantage³.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him,
How I would think on him, at certain hours,
Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him
swear,

That she's of Italy should not betray [him,
Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,
To encounter me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set
Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company. [patch'd.—

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dis-
I will attend the queen.

Pisan. Madam, I shall.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Rome.An Apartment in Philario's House.Enter Philario, Iachimo, and a Frenchman.

Iach. Believe it, sir: I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy, as since he has been allowed the name of: but I could then have look'd on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phil. You speak of him when he was less fur-nish'd than now he is, with that which makes⁴ him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter (wherein he must be weigh'd rather by her value, than his own) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter⁵.

French. And then his banishment.

Iach. Ay, and the approbations of those, that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours⁶, are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgement, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you?—How creeps acquaintance?

Phil. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life:—

Enter Posthumus.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality. I beseech you a.l, be better known to this gentleman; whom
I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine:—
How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness; I was glad I did atone⁷ my countryman and you;
it had been pity, you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunn'd to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences⁸: but, upon my mended judgement, (if I offend not to say it is mended) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

¹ The meaning is, that the loss of that paper would prove as fatal to her, as the loss of a pardon to a condemned criminal. ² Dr. Johnson remarks, that the diminution of space, is the diminution of which space is the cause.—Trees are killed by a blast of lightning, that is, by blasting, not blasted lightning. ³ i. e. next opportunity. ⁴ Make is here used in the sense in which we say, This will make or mar you. ⁵ i. e. makes the description of him very distant from the truth. ⁶ i. e. by her influence. ⁷ To atone signifies in this place to reconcile. ⁸ That is, I was then willing to take for my direction the experience of others, more than such intelligence as I had gathered myself.

French

French. 'Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of sword; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in publick, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report¹. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses: This gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptible, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provok'd as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Britany. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady. [stone.

Post. I praised her, as I rated her; so do I my Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagon'd mistress is dead, or she's out-priz'd by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so, of your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual: a cunning thief, or a that-way accomplish'd courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplish'd a courtier, to convince² the honour of my mistress; if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phil. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress: make her go back, even to the yielding; had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare, thereupon, pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something: But I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abus'd³ in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of, by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse: Though your attempt, as you call it, deserves more; a punishment too.

Phil. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. 'Would I had put my estate, and my neighbour's, on the approbation⁴ of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; who in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers, which you imagine so reserv'd.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiser⁵. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a drachm, you cannot preserve it from tainting: But, I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue: you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond 'till your return:—Let there be covenants drawn between us: My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Phil. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one:—If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoy'd the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours;—provided, I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us:—only thus far you shall answer. If you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy, she is not worth our debate: if she remain uneduc'd, (you not making it appear otherwise) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain; lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve; I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phil. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;

Make haste: who has the note of them?

1 Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Dispatch.—

[Exeunt Ladies.]

Now, master doctor; have you brought those drugs?

[madam:]

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay; here they are, But I beseech your grace, (without offence; My conscience bids me ask) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,

Which are the movers of a languishing death;

But, though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor,

Thou ask'st me such a question: Have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distill? preserve? yea, so That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded, (Unless thou think'st me devilish) is 't not meet That I did amplify my judgement in

Other conclusions¹? I will try the forces

Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, (but none hurt) To try the vigour of them, and apply [man] Allayments to their act; and by them gather Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness

Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: 45

Besides, the seeing these effects will be

But noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.—

Enter Pisanio.

Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him [Aside.]

Will I first work: he's for his master,

And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisanio?—

Doctor, your service for this time is ended;

Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you, madam;

But you shall do no harm.—

[Aside.]

Queen. Hark thee, a word.— [To Pisanio.]

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think, she has

Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, 60

And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature: Those she has, Will stupify and dull the sense a while: [dogs; Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats, and Then afterward up higher: but there is No danger in what shew of death it makes, More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect; and I the truer, So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor, Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think, in time

She will not quench; and let instruction enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work: When thou shalt bring me word, she loves my son, I'll tell thee, on the instant, thou art then

As great as is thy master: greater; for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name Is at last gasp: Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being², Is to exchange one misery with another;

And every day that comes, comes to decay A day's work in him: What shalt thou expect, To be depender on a thing that leans³?

Who cannot be new built; nor has no friends,

So much as but to prop him?—Thou tak'st up

Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour.

It is a thing I make, which hath the king

Five times redeem'd from death; I do not know

What is more cordial:—Nay, I pr'ythee, take it;

It is an earnest of a further good

That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how

The case stands with her; do 't, as from thyself.

Think what a chance thou changest on⁴; but think

Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot, my son,

Who shall take notice of thee: I'll move the king

To any shape of thy preferment, such

As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,

That set thee on to this desert, am bound

To load thy merit richly. Call my women:

[Exit Pisanio.]

Think on my words.—A sly and constant knave;

Not to be shak'd: the agent for his master;

And the remembrancer of her, to hold

The hand fast to her lord.—I have given him that,

Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her

Of leigers⁵ for her sweet; and which she, after,

Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd

To taste of too.—So, so;—well done, well done

Bear to my closet:—Fare thee well, Pisanio;

Think on my words. [Exeunt Queen, and Ladies.]

Pisan. And shall do:

But when to my good lord I prove untrue,

I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.

Imogen's Apartment.Enter Imogen.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady, [band!
That hath her husband banish'd;—O, that hus-
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious! Blessed be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort!—Who may this be?
Fie!

Enter Pisanio, and Iachimo.

Pisan. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly. [Gives a letter.

Imo. Thanks, good sir;
You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich!
If she be furnished with a mind so rare, [Aside.
She is alone the Arabian bird; and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather directly fly.

Imogen reads.

—“He is one of the noblest note, to whose “kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect “upon him accordingly, as you value your trust.
“LEONATUS.”

So far I read aloud:

But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.—
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so,
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes [Aside.

To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land¹, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above, and the twinn'd stones
Upon the number'd beach²? and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be i' the eye; for apes and monkeys,

'Twixt two such she's, would chatter this way, and Contemn with mows the other: Nor i' the judgement;

For idiots, in this case of favour, would
Be wisely definite: Nor i' the appetite;
Sluttery, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed³.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The cloyed will,
(That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
That tub both fill'd and running) ravening first
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,

Thus raps you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, madam; well:—Beseech you,
sir, [To Pisanio.

Desire my man's abode where I did leave him;
He's strange⁴, and peevish.

Pisan. I was going, sir,

To give him welcome. [beseech you?

Imo. Continues well, my lord? His health,

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope, he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.

There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him; while the jolly Briton (Your lord, I mean) laughs from 's free lungs, cries! “O!” [knows

“Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—who
“By history, report, or his own proof,

“What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose

“But must be,—will his free hours languish

“For assur'd bondage?”

Imo. Will my lord say so? [laughter.

Iach. Ay, madam; with his eyes in flood with
It is a recreation to be by, [know,
And hear him mock the Frenchman: But, heavens
Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope. [him might Iach. Not he: But yet heaven's bounty towards

Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much;
In you,—which I account his, beyond all talents,—

¹ That is, according to Warburton, “who are beholden only to the seasons for their support and nourishment; so that, if those be kindly, such have no more to care for or desire.” ² The crop of sea and land means the productions of either element. ³ Dr. Johnson says, he knows not well how to regulate this passage. Number'd is perhaps numerous.—Twinn'd stones he does not understand. Twinn'd shells, or pairs of shells, are very common.—Mr. Steevens adds, that the pebbles on the sea-shore are so much of the same size and shape, that twinn'd may mean as like as twins.—Dr. Farmer thinks we may read the umbered, the shaded beach. ⁴ Dr. Johnson explains this passage thus: “Iachimo, in this counterfeited rapture, has shewn how the eyes and the judgement would determine in favour of Imogen, comparing her with the present mistress of Posthumus, and proceeds to say, that appetite too would give the same suffrage. Desire, says he, when it approached sluttery, and considered it in comparison with such neat excellence, would not only be not so allured to feed, but, seized with a fit of loathing, would vomit emptiness, would feel the convulsions of disgust, though, being unfed, it had nothing to eject.” ⁵ Strange here seems to signify shy or backward.

Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?

You look on me; what wreck discern you in me,
Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What!

To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I' the dungeon by a snuff?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your——But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know [you,
Something of me, or what concerns me; Pray
(Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Than to be sure they do: For certainties
Either are past remedies; or, timely knowing¹,
The remedy then born) discover to me:
What both you spur and stop².

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here: should I (damn'd then)
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands Made hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood, as
With labour); then lie peeping in an eye,
Base and unlustrous as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow; it were fit,
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
That from my mutest conscience, to my tongue,
Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more. [heart

Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my
With pity that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fastened to an empery³, [ner'd
Would make the greatest king double! to be part-
With tomboys⁴, hir'd with that self-exhibition
Which your own eeffers yield⁵! with diseas'd ventures,

That play with all infirmities for gold [stuff,
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd
As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
Or she, that bore you, was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.

Imo. Reveng'd!
How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,

(As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse) if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Iach. Should he make me
5 Live like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets;
Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despatch, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure;
More noble than that runagate to your bed;
10 And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close, as sure.

Imo. What ho, Pisanio!

Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Imo. Away!—I do condemn mine ears, that 15 have

So long attended thee.—If thou wert honourable,
Thou would'st have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st; as base, as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far 20 From thy report, as thou from honour; and Solicit'st here a lady, that disdains
Thee and the devil alike:—What ho, Pisanio!—
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,

25 A saucy stranger, in his court, to mart
As in a Romish stew, and to expound
His beastly mind to us; he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter whom
He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisanio!

30 Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say;
The credit, that thy lady hath of thee,
Deserves thy trust: and thy most perfect goodness
Her assur'd credit!—Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir, that ever

35 Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this, to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er: And he is one

40 The truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
That he enchants societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god;
45 He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,

Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judge-
50 In the election of a sir so rare, [ment
Which you know, cannot err: The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir: Take my power i' the court for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To intreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
60 Are partners in the business.

¹ Rather, timely known. ² What it is that at once incites you to speak, and restrains you from
it. ³ Empery is a word signifying sovereign command; now obsolete. ⁴ A masculine, forward girl is still called a tomboy. ⁵ Gross strumpets, hired with the very pension which you allow your husband.

Imo. Pray, what is 't?

Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,
(The best feather of our wing) have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'Tis plate, of rare device; and jewels,
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;
And I am something curious, being strange¹,
To have them in safe stowage; May it please you
To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;

I must aboard to-morrow.

Iach. O, no, no.

Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word,
By length'ning my return. From Gallia
5 I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank thee for your pains;
But not away to-morrow?

Iach. O, I must, madam:
10 Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
I have out-stood my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.
15 Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you: You are very welcome.
[Exeunt.]

A C T II.

SCENE I.

Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cloten, and two Lords.

Clot. WAS there ever man had such luck!
when I kiss'd the jack² upon an up-cast, to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't: And then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrow'd my oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2 Lord. If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out. [Aside.]

Clot. When a gentleman is dispos'd to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths: Ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; nor crop the ears of them. [Aside.]

Clot. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction?
'Would, he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.]

Clot. I am not vex'd more at any thing in the earth,—A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother: every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that no body can match.

2 Lord. You are a cock and a capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on³. [Aside.]

Clot. Say'st thou?

1 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion⁴ that you give offence to.

Clot. No, I know that; but it is fit, I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clot. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night?

Clot. A stranger! and I not know on't!

2 Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. [Aside.]

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clot. Leonatus! a banish'd rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clot. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clot. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate. [Aside.]

Clot. Come, I'll go see this Italian: What I have lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt Cloten, and first Lord.]

50 That such a crafty devil as his mother
Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess,
55 Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st!
Betwixt a father, by thy step-dame govern'd;
A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer,
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
60 Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm

¹ i. e. being a stranger. ² The jack is the small bowl at which the others are aimed. He who is nearest to it wins.—To kiss the jack is a state of great advantage. ³ The allusion is to a fool's cap, which hath a comb like a cock's. ⁴ i. e. every fellow.

The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st stand,
To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land!

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

A Bed-chamber; in one part of it, a Trunk.

Imogen reading in her bed; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam. [weak:—

Imo. I have read three hours then: mine eyes are Fold down the leaf where I have left; To bed:
Take not away the taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I pr'ythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit Lady.]

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies, and the tempters of the night,
Guard me, beseech ye! [Sleeps.]

[Iachimo, from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest: Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes¹, ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded.—Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily!
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss one kiss!—Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do't!—'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: The flame o' the taper
Bows toward her; and would under-peep her lids,
To see the inclosed lights, now canopy'd
Under these windows: White and azure! lac'd
With blue of heaven's own tinct.—But my design?
To note the chamber:—I will write all down:—
Such, and such pictures;—There the window:—
Such

The adornment of her bed;—The arras, figures?
Why, such, and such:—And the contents o' the story,—

Ah, but some natural notes about her body,
(Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify) to enrich mine inventory.
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her!
And be her sense but as a monument,
Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off;—

[Taking off a bracelet.]

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard!—
'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I' the bottom of a cowslip: Here's a voucher,
Stronger than ever law could make; this secret
Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and ta'en

[end?]

The treasure of her honour, No more.—To what

Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading, late,

The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down,
Where Philomel gave up—I have enough:
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it. [ing
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night! that dawn-
May bear the raven's eye: I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock strikes.]

One, two, three:—Time, time!

[Goes into the trunk: the scene closes.]

SCENE III.

Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Cloten and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turn'd up ace.
Clot. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship; You are most hot,
and furious, when you win.

Clot. Winning will put any man into courage:
If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough: It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clot. I would this musick would come: I am advis'd to give her musick o' mornings; they say, it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune; If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too:
if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing; after a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider,

SONG,

*Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phæbus' gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chalic'd flowers that lies²;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes;
With every thing that pretty bin:
My lady sweet, arise;
Arise, arise.*

So, get you gone: If this penetrate, I will consider your musick the better: if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs, and cats-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend.

[Exit Musicians.]

Enter Cymbeline, and Queen.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clot. I am glad, I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early: He cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother.

¹ We have in a former play observed, that it was the custom in the time of our author to strew chambers with rushes, as we now cover them with carpets. ² i. e. the morning sun dries up the dew which lies in the cups of flowers.—It may be noted, that the cup of a flower is called calix, whence chalice. ³ i. e. I will pay you more amply for it.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter?

Will she not forth?

Clot. I have assail'd her with musicks, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new; She hath not yet forgot him: some more time Must wear the print of his remembrance out, And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king; Who lets go by no vantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter: Frame yourself To orderly solicits¹; and be friended With aptness of the season: make denials Increase your services: so seem, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which You tender'd to her; that you in all obey her, Save when command to your dismissal tends, And therein you are senseless.

Clot. Senseless! not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome; The one is Caius Lucius,

Cym. A worthy fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his: We must receive him According to the honour of his sender; And towards himself, his goodness foreshows² on us², We must extend our notice.—Our dear son, When you have given good morning to your mistress, Attend the queen, and us; we shall have need To employ you toward this Roman.—Come, our queen. [Exeunt.]

Clot. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not, Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave, ho!— [Knocks.]

I know, her women are about her; What If I do line one of their hands; 'Tis gold Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up Their deer to the stand o' the stealer: and 'tis gold Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief; [What]

Nay, sometime, hangs both thief and true man: Can it not do, and undo? I will make One of her women lawyer to me; for I yet not understand the case myself. By your leave. [Knocks.]

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there that knocks?

Clot. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clot. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more

Than some, whose taylor's are as dear as yours, Can justly boast of: What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clot. Your lady's person: Is she ready?

Lady. Ay, to keep her chamber. [report.]

Clot. There's gold for you; sell me your good

Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you? What I shall think is good?—The princess—

Enter Imogen.

Clot. Good-morrow, fairest sister: your sweet hand. [pains]

Imo. Good-morrow, sir: You lay out too much For purchasing but trouble: The thanks I give, Is telling you that I am poor of thanks, And scarce can spare them.

Clot. Still, I swear, I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me: If you swear still, your recompence is still That I regard it not.

Clot. That is no answer. [silent,]

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith, I shall unfold equal discourtesy To your best kindness: one of your great knowing Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clot. To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin: I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clot. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad; That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir, You put me to forget a lady's manners, By being so verbal³: and learn now, for all, That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce, By the very truth of it, I care not for you; And am so near the lack of charity, (To accuse myself) I hate you: which I had rather You felt, than make't my boast.

Clot. You sin against

Obedience, which you owe your father. For The contract you pretend with that base wretch, (One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes, With scraps o' the court) it is no contract, none; And though it be allow'd in meaner parties, (Yet who, than he, more mean?) to knit their souls (On whom there is no more dependency But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot⁴; Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by The consequence o' the crown; and must not soil The precious note of it with a base slave, A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth, A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Prophane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more, But what thou art, besides, thou wert too base To be his groom: thou wert dignify'd enough, Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd The under-hangman of his kingdom; and hated For being prefer'd so well.

Clot. The south-fog rot him! [come]

Imo. He never can meet more mischance, than To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment, That ever hath but clip'd his body, is dearer, In my respect, than all the hairs above thee,

² i. e. the good offices done by him to us heretofore.

³ Verbal

here means so verbose, so full of talk.

⁴ A self-figured knot is a knot formed by yourself.

Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisanio?

Enter Pisanio.

Clot. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee present—

Clot. His garment? [ly:— 5

Imo. I am sprighted with a fool¹; [man

Frighted, and anger'd worse:—Go, bid my wo-

Search for a jewel, that too casually

Hath left mine arm²; it was thy master's: shrew me,

If I would lose it for a revenue

Of any king's in Europe. I do think,

I saw't this morning: confident I am,

Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kissed it;

I hope, it be not gone, to tell my lord

That I kiss aught but him.

Pisan. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so: go and search. [Exit Pisanio.

Clot. You have abus'd me:—

His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, sir;

If you will make't an action, call witness to't.

Clot. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:

She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,

But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,

To the worst of discontent. [Exit.

Clot. I'll be reveng'd:—

His meanest garment?—Well. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

ROME.

An Apartment in Philario's House.

Enter Posthumus, and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would, I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold, her honour
Will remain hers.

Phil. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any; but abide the change of time;
Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come; In these fear'd hopes,

I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phil. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'er pays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do his commission throughly; And, I think,
He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages,
Or³ look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
(Statist⁴ though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Cæsar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: Their discipline (Now mingled with their courages) will make known

To their approvers⁵, they are people, such
That mend upon the world.

Enter Iachimo.

Phil. See! Iachimo!

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land;
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phil. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer made 10 The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady

Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And, therewithal, the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
15 And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust,

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Post. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
20 When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,

But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.—

Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not 25 Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold,
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which 30 Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by,

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,

35 Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good, sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
40 We were to question further; but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make it apparent
45 That you have tasted her in bed, my hand,
And ring, is yours: If not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both 50 To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe; whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
55 You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bed-chamber,
(Where, I confess, I slept not; but, profess,
60 Had that was well worth watching) It was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story,

¹ i. e. I am haunted by a fool, as by a spright. ² i. e. too many chances of losing it have arisen from my carelessness. ³ Or for ere. ⁴ i. e. statesman. ⁵ i. e. to those who try them.

Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which, I wonder'd,
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on 't was——

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report¹ themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; out-went her,
Motion and breath left out².

Post. This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap;
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubim is fretted: Her andirons
(I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour!—
Let it be granted, you have seen all this, (and praise
Be given to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her chamber, nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can, [Pulling out the bracelet.
Be pale; I beg but leave to air this jewel: See!—
And now 'tis up again: It must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Jove!—
Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, (I thank her) that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did out-sell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: she gave it me,
And said, she priz'd it once.

Post. May be, she pluck'd it off,
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you? doth she?

Post. O, no, no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this too; [Gives the ring.

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't:—Let there be no honour,
Where there is beauty; truth, where resemblance;
love,

Where there's another man: The vows of women
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing:—
O, above measure false!

Phil. Have patience, sir,

And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
It may be probable, she lost it; or,
Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stolen it from her.

Post. Very true;
And so I hope, he came by 't:—Back my ring;—
Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this: for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears,
'Tis true;—nay, keep the ring—'tis true: I am sure,

She could not lose it: her attendants are All sworn, and honourable:—They induc'd to steal it!

Iach. And by a stranger?—No; he hath enjoy'd her:
The cognizance³ of her incontinency
Is this—she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly.—

Post. There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!

Phil. Sir, be patient:

This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuaded well of——

Post. Never talk on 't:
She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast,
(Worthy the pressing!) lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging: By my life,
I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more? [turns;

Post. Spare your arithmetick: never count the Once, and a million!

Iach. I'll be sworn,——

Post. No swearing:—

If you will swear you have not done't, you lye;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
I'hou hast made me cuckold.

Iach. I will deny nothing. [meal!

Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-
I will go there, and do't; i' the court; before
Her father:—I'll do something—— [Exit.

Phil. Quite besides

The government of patience!—You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Excunt.

SCENE V.

Another Room in Philario's House.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women
Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;

¹ i. e. so near to speech.—The Italians call a portrait, when the likeness is remarkable, a speaking picture. ² The meaning is this: The sculptor was as nature, but as nature dumb; he gave every thing that nature gives, but breath and motion.—In breath is included speech. ³ i. e. the token; the visible proof.

And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was I know not where
When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools
Made me a counterfeit: Yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time: so doth my wife [geance!
The non-pareil of this.—Oh vengeance, ven-
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me, oft, forbearance: did it with
A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on't [her
Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought
As chaste as unsunn'd snow:—O, all the devils!—
This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was't not?—
Or less,—at first: Perchance he spoke not; but,
Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
Cry'd, 'Oh!' and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out

The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: Be't lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges,
hers;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longings, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell knows,
Why, hers, in part, or all; but, rather, all:
For even to vice
They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
Detest them, curse them:—Yet 'tis greater skill
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit,

SCENE I.

Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter, in state, Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords, at one door; and at another, Caius Lucius, and Attendants.

Cym. NOW say, what would Augustus Cæsar with us? [yet

Luc. When Julius Cæsar (whose remembrance
Lives in men's eyes; and will to ears, and tongues,
Be theme, and hearing ever) was in this Britain,
And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,
(Famous in Cæsar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it,) for him,
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute,
Yearly three thousand pounds: which by thee
Is left untender'd. [lately

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.

Clot. There be many Cæsars,
Ere such another Julius. Britain is
A world by itself; and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity,
Which then they had to take from us, to resume
We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors; together with
The natural bravery of your isle; which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscaleable, and roaring waters;
With sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats,
But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of conquest

Cæsar made here; but made not here his brag
Of, came, and saw, and overcame; with shame
(The first that ever touch'd him) he was carried
From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping, (Poor ignorant¹ baubles,) on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd

25 As easily 'gainst our rocks: For joy whereof
The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point
(O, giglet fortune!) to master Cæsar's sword,
Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
And Britons strut with courage.

30 Clot. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid:
Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time;
and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars; other of them may have crook'd noses; but to own such strait arms, none.

35 Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clot. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan; I do not say, I am one:
but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
'Till the injurious Roman did extort [bition,
45 This tribute from us, we were free: Cæsar's am-
(Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch
The sides o' the world,) against all colour², here
Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off,
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
50 Ourselves to be; we do. Say then to Cæsar,
Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which
Ordain'd our laws; whose use the sword of Cæsar Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and franchise,

55 Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,
Who was the first of Britain which did put
His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
60 Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar (Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants, than

¹ i. e. unacquainted with the nature of our boisterous seas. ² i. e. without any pretence of right.
Thyself

Thyself domestic officers) thine enemy :
Receive it from me then :—War, and confusion,
In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee : look
For fury not to be resisted :—Thus defy'd,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me ; my youth I spent Much under him ; of him I gather'd honour ;
Which he, to seek of me again, perforce,
Behoves me keep at utterance ¹. I am perfect ²,
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for
Their liberties, are now in arms ; a precedent
Which not to read, would shew the Britons cold ;
So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clot. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day, or two, or longer : If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle : if you beat us out of it, it is yours ; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you ; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir.

[mine :

Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he
All the remain, is welcome. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Another Room.

Enter Pisanio.

Pisan. How ! of adultery ? Wherefore write you not

What monsters her accuse ?—Leonatus !
O master ! what a strange infection
Is fallen into thine ear ? What false Italian
(As poisonous tongu'd, as handed) hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing ?—Disloyal ? No ;
She's punish'd for her truth ; and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
As would take in ³ some virtue.—O my master !
Thy mind to her is now as low, as were
Thy fortunes.—How ! that I should murder her ?
Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I Have made to thy command ?—I, her ?—her blood ?

If it be so to do good service, never Let me counted serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity,
So much as this fact comesto ? 'Do't : The letter

[Reading.

'That I have sent her, by her own command,
'Shall give thee opportunity :—O damn'd paper !
Black as the ink that's on thee ! Senseless bauble !
Art thou a feodary ⁴ for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without ?—Lo, here she comes.

Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded ⁵.

Imo. How now, Pisanio ?

Pisan. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.
Imo. Who ? thy lord ? that is my lord ? Leonatus ?

O, learn'd indeed were that astronomer,
That knew the stars, as I his characters ;
He 'd lay the future open.—You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not,
That we two are asunder, let that grieve him !
10 (Some griefs are med'cinable ; that is one of them,
For it doth physic love ⁶)—of his content,
All but in that !—Good wax, thy leave :—Blest be You bees, that make these locks of counsel ! Lovers,

15 And men in dangerous bonds, pray not alike ;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's stables⁷.—Good news, gods ! [Reading.

'Justice, and your father's wrath, should he 20 'take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel
'tome, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would not
'even renew me with your eyes. Take notice,
'that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven : What
'your own love will, out of this, advise you, fol-25 'low. So, he wishes you all happiness, that re-
'maius loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in
'love,

'LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.'

O, for a horse with wings !—Hear'st thou, Pi-sanio ?

He is at Milford-Haven : Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day ?—Then, true Pisanio,
35 (Who long'st, likeme, to see thy lord ; who long'st—
O, let me 'bate,—but not like me : yet long'st,—
But in a fainter kind :—O, not like me ;
For mine's beyond, beyond,) say, and speak thick, (Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing, 40 To the smothering of the sense) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford : And, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
To inherit such a haven : But, first of all,
How we may steal from hence ; and, for the gap
45 That we shall make in time, from our hence-going 'Till our return, to excuse :—but first, how get
hence :

Why should excuse be born or e'er begot ?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,
50 How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour ?

Pisan. One score, 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you ; and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution, man, 55 Could never go so slow ; I have heard of riding
wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the sands

¹ At utterance means to keep at the extremity of defiance. ² i. e. I am well informed. ³ To take in a town is to conquer it. ⁴ A feodary is one who holds his estate under the tenure of suit and service to a superior lord. ⁵ i. e. I am unpractised in the arts of murder. ⁶ That is, grief for absence keeps love in health and vigour. ⁷ The meaning is, that the bees are not blest by the man who, forfeiting a bond, is sent to prison, as they are by the lover, for whom they perform the more pleasing office of sealing letters.

That run i' the clock's behalf¹:—But this is fool-ery:—

Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father: and provide me, present-
A riding suit; no costlier than would fit [ly, 5
A franklin's housewife².

Pisan. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man, not here, nor here,
Nor what ensues; but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through³. Away, I pr'ythee; 10
Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Changes to a Forest in Wales, with a Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys: This gate Instructs you how to adore the heavens; and bows 20
you

To morning's holy office: The gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbands⁴ on, without
Good morrow to the sun.—Hail thou, fair heaven! 25
We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Guid. Hail, Heaven!

Arr. Hail, Heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountainsport: up to yon hill,
Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place, which lessens, and sets off.
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,
Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war: 30
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd: To apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see:
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded⁵ beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
Is nobler, than attending for a check⁶; 35
Richer, than doing nothing for a babe⁷;
Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him, that makes them fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours.

Guid. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor unfledg'd, [know not
Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor
What air's from home. Haply, this life is best, 50
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you,
That have a sharper known; well corresponding
With your stiff age: but, unto us, it is

A cell of ignorance; travelling abed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit⁸.

Arr. What should we speak of,
When we are as old as you? When we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing;
We are beastly; subtle as the fox, for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf, for what we eat:
Our valour is, to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!

15 Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court,
As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame, and honour; which dies i' the search;

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph,
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well: what's worse,
Must curt'sy at the censure:—O, boys, this story
The world may read in me: My body's mark'd
With Roman swords; and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd me;
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: Then was I as a tree, [night,
Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but, in one
A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves, 35
And left me bare to weather.

Guid. Uncertain favour! [off]

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline,
40 I was confederate with the Romans: So,
Follow'd my banishment; and these twenty years,
This rock, and these demesnes, have been my world:

Where I have liv'd at honest freedom; pay'd
45 More pious debts to heaven, than in all [tains;
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the moun-
This is not hunters' language: He, that strikes
The venison first, shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
50 And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

[Exeunt Guid. and Arr.

How hard it is, to hide the sparks of nature!

¹ This fantastical expression means no more than sand in an hour-glass, used to measure time. ² A franklin is literally a freeholder, with a small estate, neither villan, nor rascal. ³ That is, "I can see neither one way nor other, before me nor behind me; but all the ways are covered with an impenetrable fog." ⁴ The idea of a giant was, among the readers of romances, who were almost all the readers of those times, always confounded with that of a Saracen. ⁵ i. e. the beetle, whose wings are enclosed within two dry husks or shards. ⁶ Check may mean in this place a reproof; but it rather seems to signify command, controul. ⁷ Dr. Johnson suspects, that the right reading of this passage is as follows: "Richer than doing nothing for a brabe."—Brabium is a badge of honour, or the ensign of an honour, or any thing worn as a mark of dignity. The word is found (he adds) in Holyoak's Dictionary, who terms it a reward; and that Cooper, in his Thesaurus, defines it to be a prize, or reward for any game. ⁸ To overpass his bound.

These boys know little, they are sons to the king;
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.

They think, they are mine: and, though train'd up thus meanly [hit

Y^e the cave, wherein they bow¹, their thoughts do

The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things, to prince it, much

Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,—
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom

The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell

The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story: say,—Thus mine enemy fell;

And thus I set my foot on his neck; even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,

Strains his young nerves, and put himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother Cad-

(Once, Arviragus) in as like a figure, [wal,
Strikes life into my speech, and shews much more

His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rouz'd!—
O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows,

Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon,
At three, and two years old, I stole these babes;

Thinking to bar thee of succession, as
Thou reit'st me of my lands. Eariphilè,

Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,

And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,

They take for natural father.—The game is up.
[Exit.

SCENE IV.

Near Milford-Haven.

Enter Pisanio and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place.

Was near at hand:—Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now:—Pisanio! Man!

Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh

From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,

Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: Put thyself

Into a 'haviour of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my staid senses. What's the matter?

Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If it be summer news,

Smile to't before; if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!

That drug-damn'd Italy² hath out-crafted him,

And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man; thy tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pisan. Please you, read;

And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imogen reads:

Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath play'd the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me.

I speak not out of weak surmises; but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers.

Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: Where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pandar to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pisan. What, shall I need to draw my sword?
the paper

Hath cut her throat already.—No, 'tis slander; Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose

tongue
Out-venoms all the worms³ of Nile; whose breath

Rides on the posting winds, and doth belye
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states⁴,

Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
Thy viperous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?

To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge
nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed?

Is it?

Pisan. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness:—Iachimo,
Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;

Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks,
Thy favour's good enough.—Some jay of Italy,

Whose mother was her painting⁵, hath betray'd
Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion; [him:

And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be ript:—to pieces with me!—O, [ing,

Men's vows are women's traitors!—All good seem-
By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought

Put on for villainy; not born, where't grows;
But worn, a bait for ladies.

Pisan. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false
Æneas, [weeping

Were, in his time, thought false: and Sinon's
Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity [humus,

From most true wretchedness: So, thou, Post-
Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men;

Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and perjur'd,
From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be thou honest:

Do thou thy master's bidding:—When thou see'st
him,

A little witness my obedience: Look!
I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit

The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief:

¹ i. e. Thus meanly brought up:—Yet in this very cave, which is so low that they must bow or bend in entering it, yet are their thoughts so exalted, &c.

² This is another allusion to Italian poisons. ³ Serpents and dragons by the old writers were called worms.

⁴ Persons of highest rank. ⁵ That is, Some jay of Italy, made by art the creature, not of nature, but of painting.—In this sense, painting may be not improperly termed her mother.

Thy master is not there; who was, indeed,
The riches of it: Do his bidding, strike.—
Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pisan. Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's: Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine,
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart;— [fence;

Something's afore't:—Soft, soft; we'll no de-
Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart! Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers: Though those that are betray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, that diddest set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And mad'st me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be dis-edg'd by her
That now thou tir'st on', how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'ythee, dispatch:
The lamb entreats the butcher: Where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pisan. O gracious lady!
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pisan. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Did'st undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles, with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent, whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pisan. But to win time
To lose so bad employment: in the which
I have consider'd of a course; Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard, I am a strumpet; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pisan. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pisan. Not so, neither:

But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abus'd:

5 Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtezan.

Pisan. No, on my life.

I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
10 Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: You shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it:

Imo. Why, good fellow, [live]
What shall I do the while? where bide? how 15 Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pisan. If you'll back to the court,—

Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, nothing;
20 That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pisan. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?

25 Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest: Pr'ythee, think There's livers out of Britain.

30 Pisan. I am most glad
You think of other place: The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is; and but disguise
35 That, which to appear itself, must not yet be,
But by self-danger²; you should tread a course
Pretty, and full of view¹: yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
40 Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O, for such means!

Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

45 Pisan. Well; then here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear, and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,
Woman its pretty self,) into a waggish courage;
50 Ready in gybes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrellous as the weazel: nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it, (but, O the harder heart!—
Alack, no remedy!) to the greedy touch
55 Of common-kissing Titan; and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:

I see into thy end, and am almost 60 A man already.

¹ A hawk is said to tire upon that which he pecks; from tirer, French. ² The meaning is, "You must disguise that greatness, which, to appear hereafter in its proper form, cannot yet appear without great danger to itself." i. e. with opportunities of examining your affairs with your own eyes.

Pisan. First, make yourself but like one:
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit,
(Tis in my cloak-bag) doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: Would you in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy, (which you'll make him
know,
If that his head have ear in music) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable,
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning, nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even
All that good time will give us¹: This attempt
I am soldier to², and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee. [well;
Pisan. Well, madam, we must take a short fare-Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box; I had it from the queen;
What's in't is precious: if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper.—To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood:—May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen: I thank thee.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.

The Palace of Cymbeline.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My emperor hath wrote: I must from hence;
And am right sorry, that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To shew less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you
A conduct over land, to Milford-Haven.—
Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you! [kiss;

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that of—
The due of honour in no point omit:—
So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Clot. Receive it friendly: but from this time forth I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner: Fare you well. [lords,

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my
'Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness!

[Exeunt Lucius, &c.

Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it honours
That we have given him cause.

Clot. 'Tis all the better;

Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us therefore, ripely,
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he
His war for Britain. [moves

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it should be thus,
Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day: She looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty;
We have noted it.—Call her before us; for
We have been too light in sufferance.

[Exit a Servant.

Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. 'Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her; She's a lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter the Servant.

Cymb. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?

Serv. Please you, sir, [swear
Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no an-
That will be given to the loud of noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close;
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proffer: this
She wish'd me to make known; but our great court
Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd? [fear,
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that, which I Prove false! [Exit.

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clot. That man of hers, Pisanio her old servant,
I have not seen these two days. [Exit.

Queen. Go, look after.—
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!—
He hath a drug of mine: I pray his absence
Proceed by swallowing that; for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her, [her:
Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd
Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desir'd Posthumus: Gone she is
To death, or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either: She being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter Cloten.

How now, my son?

Clot. 'Tis certain, she is fled:

Go in, and cheer the king; he rages, none
Dare come about him.

¹ i. e. we'll make our work even with our time; we'll do what time will allow.

² i. e. I have

Queen.

Queen. All the better: May
This night fore-stall him of the coming day!

[Exit Queen.]

Clot. I love and hate her: for she's fair and royal;

And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all; I love her therefore: But,
Disdaining me, and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgement,
That what's else rare, is choak'd; and, in that
I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed, [point,
To be reveng'd upon her. For, when fools

Enter Pisanio.

Shall—Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah?

Come hither: Ah, you precious pandar! Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word; or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pisan. O, good my lord!

Clot. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter,
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.

Pisan. Alas, my lord,
How can she be with him? when was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.

Clot. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;
No further halting: satisfy me home,
What is become of her?

Pisan. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clot. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is, at once,
At the next word,—No more of worthy lord,— Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation, and thy death.

Pisan. Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight.

Clot. Let's see't:—I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pisan. Or this, or perish! [this]
She's far enough; and what he learns by } [Aside.
May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clot. Humh!

Pisan. I'll write to my lord, she's dead. O,
Imogen, [Aside.]
Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again!

Clot. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pisan. Sir, as I think.

Clot. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't.—Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a villain, but do me true service; undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villainy so'er I bid thee do, to perform it, directly and truly,—I would think thee an honest man: thou should'st neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pisan. Well, my good lord.

Clot. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pisan. Sir, I will.

Clot. Give me thy hand, here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pisan. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clot. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pisan. I shall, my lord. [Exit.]

Clot. Meet thee at Milford-Haven:—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember't anon:
—Even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would, these garments were come.
She said upon a time, (the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: First kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so prais'd) to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despis'd me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter Pisanio, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pisan. Ay, my noble lord.

Clot. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pisan. She can scarce be there yet.

Clot. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee:
the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford; would I had wings to follow it!—
Come, and be true. [Exit.]

Pisan. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for, true to thee,

Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him that is most true.—To Milford go, [flow,
And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow,
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed
Be crost with slowness; labour be his meed! [Exit.]

SCENE VI.

The Forest and Cave.

Enter Imogen, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see, a man's life is a tedious one:
I have tir'd myself; and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,
But that my resolution helps me.—Milford,
When from the mountain top Pisanio shew'd thee,
Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think,

¹ That is, I must either give him the paper freely, or perish in my attempt to keep it.

Foundations fly the wretched: such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me,

I could not miss my way: Will poor folk lye,
That have afflictions on them; knowing 'tis
A punishment, or trial? Yes: no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true: To lapse in fullness
Is sorer¹, than to lye in need; and falsehood
Is worse in kings, than beggars.—My dear lord!
Thou art one of the false ones: Now I think on
thee,

My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for food.—But what is this?
Here is a path to it: 'Tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet famine,
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant.
Plenty, and peace, breeds cowards; hardness ever
Of hardness is mother.—Ho! who's here?
If any thing that's civil², speak; if savage,
Take, or lend³.—Ho!—No answer; then I'll enter.

Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't.
Such a foe, good heavens! [She goes into the cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and

Are master of the feast: Cadwal, and I,
Will play the cook, and servant; 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry, and die,
But for the end it works to. Come, our stomachs
Will make what's homely, savoury: Weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth
Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be here,
Poor house, that keeps thyself!

Guid. I am thoroughly weary. [tite.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appe-

Guid. There is cold meat i' the cave; we'll brouze on that,

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. Stay; come not in:— [Looking in.
But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.

Guid. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthly paragon!—Behold divineness
No elder than a boy!

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took:
good troth, [had found
I have stolen nought; nor would not, though I Gold strew'd o' the floor. Here's money for my meat:

I would have left it on the board, so soon

As I had made my meal; and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Guid. Money, youth?

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!

5 As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see, you are angry:

Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have dy'd, had I not made it.

10 Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir: I have a kinsman, who
Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford;
15 To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fallen in this offence.

Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth,

Think us no churls; nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd!

'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart; and thanks, to stay and eat it.—
Boys, bid him welcome.

Guid. Were you a woman, youth, [nesty
I should woo hard, but be your groom.—In ho-
25 I bid for you, as I'd buy.

Arv. I'll make't my comfort,

He is a man; I'll love him as my brother:

And such a welcome as I'd give to him,

After long absence, such is yours:—Most wel-30 Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends. [come!

Imo. 'Mongst friends!

If brothers?—'Would it had been so, that they [prize

Had been my father's sons! then had my 35 Been less; and so more equal ballasting } Aside.
To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Guid. 'Would, I could free't!

Arv. Or I; whate'er it be,

40 What pain it cost, what danger! Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys.

[Whispering.

Imo. Great men,

That had a court no bigger than this cave,

That did attend themselves, and had the virtue

45 Which their own conscience seal'd them (laying by
That nothing gift of differing⁴ multitudes),

Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods!

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.

Bel. It shall be so: [in!

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come

Discourse is heavy, fasting: when we have supp'd,

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,

So far as thou wilt speak it.

55 Guid. Pray, draw near. [lark, less welcome.

Arv. The night to the owl, and morn to the

¹ i. e. is a greater or heavier crime. ² Civil, for human creature. ³ Dr. Johnson suspects that, after the words, if savage, a line is lost, and proposes to read the passage thus————Ho! who's here?

If any thing that's civil, take or lend,

If savage, speak.

If you are civilised and peaceable, take a price for what I want, or lend it for a future recompence; if you are rough inhospitable inhabitants of the mountain, speak, that I may know my state. ⁴ Dif- fering may here be applied in a sense equivalent to the many-headed rabble.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arr. I pray, draw near.

[[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.

ROME.

Enter two Roman Senators, and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ;
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians;
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons; that we do incite

The gentry to this business: He creates
Lucius pro-consul: and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commands
His absolute commission¹. Long live Caesar!

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2 Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With those legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be supplyant: The words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their dispatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [[Exeunt.

A C T IV.

SCENE I.

The Forest near the Cave.

Enter Cloten.

I AM near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapp'd it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the taylor, not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word)
for, 'tis said, a woman's fitness comes by fits.
Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer; in his own chamber, I mean) the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperseverant² thing loves him in my despatch. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which is now growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father; who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage: but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendation. My horse is ty'd up safe: Out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me.

[[Exit.

SCENE II.

The Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. You are not well: remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.

Arr. Brother, stay here: [[To Imogen.
Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be;

But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Guid. Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not; yet I am not well:

But not so citizen a wanton, as

To seem to die, ere sick: So please you, leave me;

Stick to your journal course: the breach of custom

Is breach of all³. I am ill; but your being by me

Cannot amend me: Society is no comfort

To one not sociable: I am not very sick,

Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here:

I'll rob none but myself; and let me die,

Stealing so poorly.

Guid. I love thee; I have spoke it:

How much the quantity, the weight as much,

As I do love my father.

Bel. What? how? how?

Arr. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me

In my good brother's fault: I know not why,

I love this youth; and I have heard you say,

Love's reason's without reason: the bier at door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say,

My father, not this youth.

Bel. O noble strain!

O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!

Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:

Nature hath meal, and bran; contempt, and grace.

I am not their father; yet who this should be,

Doth miracle itself! lov'd before me.—

'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.

Arr. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish you sport.

Arr. You health.—So please you, sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all's savage, but at court:

Experience, O, thou disprov'st report!

The imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish,

Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

¹ i. e. he commands the commission to be given to you.

² Imperseverant means no more than perseverant.

³ That is, keep your daily course uninterrupted: if the stated plan of life is once broken, nothing follows but confusion.

I am sick still; heart-sick:—Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drug.

Guid. I could not stir¹ him:
He said, he was gentle², but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.

Arv. Thus did he answer me: yet said, hereafter
I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field:—
We'll leave you for this time; go in, and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you. [Exit Imogen.]

Bel. And shalt be ever.— [had]
This youth, how'er distress'd, appears, he hath Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings!

Guid. But his neat cookery!
He cuts our roots in characters;
And sauc'd our broths, as Juno had been sick,
And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh: as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Guid. I do note,
That grief and patience, roofed in him both,
Mingle their spurs³ together.

Arv. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root, with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning⁴. Come; away.—
Who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clot. I cannot find those runagates; that villain
Hath mock'd me:—I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates!
Means he not us?—I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know, 'tis he:—We are held as outlaws:—
Hence.

Guid. He is but one: You and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.]

Clot. Soft! What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?
I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Guid. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er, than answering
A slave without a knock.

Clot. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain: Yield thee, thief.

Guid. To who? to thee? What art thou?
Have not I

An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not

My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art;
Why I should yield to thee?

Clot. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Guid. No, nor thy taylor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather; he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clot. Thou precious varlet,
My taylor made them not.

Guid. Hence then, and thank [fool;
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some
I am loath to beat thee.

Clot. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Guid. What's thy name?

Clot. Cloten, thou villain.

Guid. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it; were it toad, adder, spider,
'Twould move me sooner.

Clot. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I am son to the queen. [ac]

Guid. I am sorry for't; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clot. Art not afraid?

Guid. Those that I reverence, those I fear the wise:

At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clot. Die the death:

Clot. When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:
Yield, rustic mountaineer. [Fight, and exeunt.]

Enter Belarius, and Arviragus.

Bel. No company's abroad.

Arv. None in the world: You did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour
Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute;
'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors: For the effect of judgement
Is oft the cause of fear.—But see, thy brother.

Re-enter Guiderius, with Cloten's head.

Guid. This Cloten was a fool; an empty purse,
There was no money in't: not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Guid. I am perfect, what's: cut off one Cloten's
head,

Son to the queen, after his own report;

Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in⁵,

² Gentle implies well-born, of birth above the vulgar.

³ Spurs, an old word for the fibres of a tree.

⁴ A Gallicism. Grand-jour.

⁵ i. e. well-informed, what.

⁶ To take in means, here, to conquer, to subdue.

Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they
And set them on Lud's town. [grow,

Bel. We are all undone.

Guid. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But, that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protects not us; Then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us;
Play judge, and executioner, all himself;
For¹ we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul

Can we set eye on, but, in all safe reason,
He must have some attendants. Tho' his honour
Was nothing but mutation²; ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd,
To bring him here alone: Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are out-laws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he hearing,

(As it is like him) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear;
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arr. Let ordinance

Come as the gods foresay it: howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind

To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth³.

Guid. With his own sword,

Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw it into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes, he's the queen's son, Cloten:
'That's all I reckon. [Exit.

Bel. I fear, 'twill be reveng'd:

'Would, Polydore, thou had'st not done't! though valour

Becomes thee well enough.

Arr. 'Would I had done't,

So the revenge alone pursu'd me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would, revenges, [us through,

That possible strength might meet⁴, would seek
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done:—

We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pr'y thee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay
'Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arr. Poor sick Fidele!

I'll willingly to him: To gain his colour,

I'd let a parish of such Cloten's blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess,

Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
5 In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchain'd, as the rudest wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
10 And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonderful,
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other; valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
15 As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange,
What Cloten's being here to us portends;
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Guid. Where's my brother?

I have sent Cloten's clot-pole down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn musick.

Bel. My ingenious instrument!

Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Guid. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Guid. What does he mean? since death of my dearest mother

30 It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter Arrviragus, with Imogen as dead, bearing her in his arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms,
40 Of what we blame him for!

Arr. The bird is dead,

That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
And turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
45 Than have seen this.

Guid. O sweetest, fairest lily!

My brother wears thee not the one half so well,
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O, melancholy!

50 Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to shew what coast thy sluggish crare⁵
Might easiliest harbour in?—Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou might'st have made;
but I⁶,

55 Thou dy'dst, a most rare boy, of melancholy!—
How found you him?

Arr. Stark, as you see;

Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,

¹ For is here used in the sense of because.
the fashion, which was perpetually changing.
the cave tedious.

² That is, The only notion he had of honour was

³ i. e. Fidele's sickness made my walk forth from

⁴ i. e. such pursuit of vengeance as fell within any possibility of opposition.

⁵ A crare is a small trading vessel, called in the Latin of the middle ages crayera. The word often occurs in Holinshed. ⁶ The meaning is, "Jove knows what man thou might'st have made,

but I know thou dy'dst."

Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: his right
Reposing on a cushion. [cheek]

Guid. Where?

Arr. O' the floor;

His arms thus leagu'd: I thought, he slept; and put [rudeness]

My clouted brogues¹ from off my feet, whose Answer'd my steps too loud.

Guid. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arr. With fairest flowers,
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: Thou shalt not lack
The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose; nor
The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock²
With charitable bill (O bill, sore-shaming [would,
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument!]) bring thee all this; [none, Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are
To winter-ground thy corse.

Guid. Pry' thee, have done;
And do not pray in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave.

Arr. Say, where shall's lay him?

Guid. By good Euriphele, our mother.

Arr. Be't so;

And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,
As once our mother; use like note, and words,
Save that Euriphele must be Fidele.

Guid. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee:
For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arr. We'll speak it then. [Cloten]

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less; for
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys;
And, though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid³ for that; Though mean and mighty rotting

Together, have one dust; yet reverence
(That angel⁴ of the world) doth make distinction
Of place⁵ twixt high and low. Our foe was princely;
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Guid. Pray, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax,
When neither are alive.

Arr. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin.
[Exit Belarius.]

Guid. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;

My father hath a reason for't.

Arr. 'Tis true.

Guid. Come on then, and remove him,

Arr. So,—begin.

S O N G.

Guid. *Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages:
Both golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.*

Arr. *Fear no more the frown o' the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to cloath, and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The scepter, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.*

Guid. Fear no more the lightning flash,
Arr. Nor all the dreaded thunder-stone;

Guid. Fear not slander, censure rash;

Arr. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign⁶ to thee, and come to dust.

Guid. No exorciser harm thee!

Arr. Nor no witch-craft charm thee!

Guid. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!

Arr. Nothing ill come near thee!

Both. *Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!*

Re-enter Belarius, with the body of Cloten.

Guid. We have done our obsequies: Come, lay him down.

Bel. Here's a few flowers; but about midnight,
more: [night,

The herbs that have on them the cold dew o' the
Are strewings fitt'st for graves.—Upon their faces:—
You were as flowers, now wither'd; even so
These herb'lets shall, which we upon you strow.—
Come on, away: apart upon our knees.

The ground, that gave them first, has them again:
Their pleasure here is past, so is their pain. [Exe.
Imogen, awaking.

Imo. Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; Which is the way?—

I thank you.—By yon bush?—Pray, how far thither?

'Ods pittikins⁶!—can it be six miles yet?—
I have gone all night:—Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow:—O, gods and goddesses!
[Seeing the body.]

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;

¹ Clouted brogues are shoes strengthened with clout or hob-nails. In some parts of England, thin plates of iron called clouts are likewise fixed to the shoes of ploughmen. ² The ruddock is the red-breast, to which bird the office of covering the dead is ascribed. ³ Paid is here used for punished.

⁴ Meaning, that reverence, or due regard to subordination, is the power which keeps peace and order in the world. ⁵ To consign to thee, is to seal the same contract with thee, i. e. add their names to thine upon the register of death. ⁶ This diminutive adjuration is derived from God's my pity.

This bloody man, the care on't.—I hope, I dream;
For, so, I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures: but 'tis not so;
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eyes
Are sometimes like our judgements, blind. Good faith,

I tremble still with fear: But if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still: even when I wake, it is,
Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man!—The garments of Posthumus!
I know the shape of his leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh;
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial¹ face—
Murder in heaven?—How?—'Tis gone.—Pisanio,
All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irregular² devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord.—To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous!—Damn'd Pisanio
Hath with his forged letters,—damn'd Pisanio—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main top!—O, Posthumus! alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Ay me!
where's that?

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart, [nio?
And left this head on.—How should this be? Pisa-
'Tis he, and Cloten; malice and lucre in them Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant!

The drug he gave me, which, he said, was pre-
And cordial to me, have I not found it
Murd'rous to the senses? That confirms it home:
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those
Which chance to find us: O, my lord! my lord!

Enter Lucius, Captains, &c. and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them, the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cross'd the sea; attending
You here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:
They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits,
That promise noble service; and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,
Syenna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

Luc. This forwardness [numbers
Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't.—Now, sir,
What have you dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods³ shew'd me a
(I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence) Thus:—
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd

From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sun-beams: which portends
(Unless my sins abuse my divination)
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here,
Without his top? The ruin speaks, that sometime
It was a worthy building.—How! a page!—
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather:
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord. [one,

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—Young Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded; Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who is he,
That otherwise than noble nature did⁴, [rest
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy inte-
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing; or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton, and a good,
That here by Mountaineers lies slain:—Alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than
Thy master in bleeding: Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. If I do lye, and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
[Aside.

They'll pardon it. Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:
Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd; but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee: Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But, first, an't please the gods,

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pick-axes⁵ can dig: and when
With wild wood leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep, and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—
My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties: Let us
Find out the prettiest daizy'd plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans

¹ Jovial face signifies in this place, such a face as belongs to Jove. ² i. e. lawless, licentious.
³ i. e. the gods themselves. ⁴ i. e. made, or did it. ⁵ Meaning her fingers.

A grave: Come, arm him¹.—Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us; and he shall be interr'd,
As soldiers can. Be chearful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt.]

S C E N E III.

Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisanio.

Cym. Again; and bring me word, how 'tis with her.

A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life's in danger:—

Heavens,

How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone: my queen
Upon a desperate bed; and in a time
When fearful wars point at me: her son gone,
So needful for this present: It strikes me, past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pisan. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will: But, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. 'Beseech your Hold me your loyal servant. [highness]

Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing, he was here:
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome;
We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy
[To Pisan.]

Does yet depend².

Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast; with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son, and queen!—
I am amaz'd with matter³.

Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront⁴ no less Than what you hear of; come more, for more you're ready:

The want is, but to put these powers in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you: Let's withdraw:
And meet the time, as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but
We grieve at chances here.—Away. [Exeunt.]

Pisan. I heard no letter from my master, since
I wrote him, Imogen was slain: 'Tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings: Neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain

Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work; Wherein I am false, I am honest; not true, to be true.

These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note⁵ o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd:
Fortune brings in some boats, that are not steer'd.
[Exit.]

S C E N E IV.

Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Guid. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arr. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Guid. Nay, what hope

Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us; or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,

We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going: newness Of Cloten's death (we being not known, nor muster'd

Among the bands) may drive us to a render⁶
Where we have liv'd; and to extort from us that
Which we have done, whose answer⁷ would be Drawn on with torture. [death]

Guid. This is, sir, a doubt,
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arr. It is not likely,
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires⁸, have both their eyes
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known
Of many in the army: many years, [him]
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore
From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to the still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Guid. Than be so,
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arr. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither: What thing is it, that I never Did see man die? scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of coward haies, hot goats, and venison?
Never bestrid a horse, save one, that had

¹ i. e. take him up in your arms. ² That is, My suspicion is yet undetermined. ³ i. e. confounded with variety of business. ⁴ i. e. can face no less, &c. ⁵ i. e. observation. ⁶ Render means an account. ⁷ i. e. The retaliation of the death of Cloten would be death, &c. ⁸ i. e. their fires regularly disposed.

A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel? I am asham'd
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his blest beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Guid. By heavens, I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans!

Arr. So say I; Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve [boys;
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you,
If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead—The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn, [Aside,
Till it fly out, and shew them princes born. [Exeunt.

A C T V.

SCENE I.

A Field, between the British and Romish Camps.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. YEA, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd [ones,
Thou should'st be colour'd thus. You married
If each of you would take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves
For wrying but a little!—O, Pisanió!
Every good servant does not all commands;
No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv'd to put on¹ this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me, wretch, more worth your vengeance, But,
alack, [love,
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse²;
And make them dread it³, to the doers' thrift.
But Imogen is your own: Do your best wills,
And make me blest to obey!—I am brought hither
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'Tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace!
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death; and thus, unknown,
Pity'd nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me than my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without, and more within. [Exit.

SCENE II.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army at one Door; and the British Army at another; Leonatus Posthumus following it like a poor Soldier. They march over, and go out. Then enter again in skirmish Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him. Iach. The heaviness, and guilt, within my bosom

15 Takes off my manhood: I have bely'd a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't
Revengingly enfeebles me; Or could this carle⁴,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me,
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours,
20 As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn, [borne
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout, as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit.
The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cymbeline is 25 taken: then enter to his rescue, Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus. [the ground;
Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us, but
The villainy of our fears.

30 Guid. Arr. Stand, stand! and fight!
Enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britons. They rescue Cymbeline, and Exeunt.
Then enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.
Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save
thyself;
35 For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hood-wink'd.
Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: Or betimes
40 Let's reinforce, or fly. [Exeunt,

SCENE III.

Another Part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus, and a British Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the 45 Post. I did: [stand?
Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.
Lord. I did.
Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,
But that the heavens fought: The king himself
50 Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work
More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
55 Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damm'd
With dead men, hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame.
60 Lord. Where was this lane? [turf;
Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with

¹ i. e. to incite, to instigate. ² i. e. Where corruptions are, they grow with years, and the oldest sinner is the greatest. You, gods, permit some to proceed in iniquity; and the older such are, the more their crime. ³ i. e. according to Mr. Steevens, to make them persevere in the commission of dreadful actions. ⁴ Carle is used by our old writers in opposition to a gentleman.—Carlot is a word of the same signification, and occurs in our author's As You Like It. Which

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—
 An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd
 So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
 In doing this for his country;—athwart the lane,
 He, with two striplings (lads more like to run
 The country base¹, than to commit such slaughter;
 With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
 Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame²),
 Made good the passage; cry'd to those that fled,
Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards! Stand!
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beasts, which you shun beastly; and may save,
But to look back in frown: stand, stand.—These Three thousand confident, in act as many, [three,
 (For three performers are the file, when all
 The rest do nothing) with this word, stand, stand,
 Accommodated by the place, more charming
 With their own nobleness, (which could have turn'd
 A distaff to a lance) gilded pale looks, [coward
 Part, shame, part, spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd
 But by example (O, a sin in war, Damn'd in the first beginners!)—'gan to look
 The way that they did, and to grin like lions
 Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
 A stop i' the chaser, a retire; anon,
 A rout, confusion thick: Forthwith, they fly
 Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves,
 The strides they victors made: And now our cow-(Like fragments in hard voyages, became [ards,
 The life o' the need) having found the back-door open [wound!
 Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they
 Some, slain before; some, dying; some, their friends
 O'erborne i' the former wave: ten, chas'd by one,
 Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
 Those, that would die or ere resist, are grown
 The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance;

A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys!

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: You are made
 Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
 Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon't,
 And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane.

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. 'Lack, to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend:
 For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
 I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
 You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you are angry. [Exit.

Post. Still going?—This is a lord: O noble misery!

To be i' the field, and ask, what news, of me!
 To-day, how many would have given their honours
 To have say'd their carcasses? took heel to do't,

And yet died too? I, in mine own woe charm'd³,
 Could not find death, where I did hear him groan;
 Nor feel him, where he struck: Being an ugly monster,

5 'Tis strange, he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
 Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
 That draw his knives i' the war.—Well, I will find him:

For, being now a favourer to the Roman,
 10 No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
 The part I came in: Fight I will no more,
 But yield me to the veriest hind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer⁴ be 15 Britons must take: For me, my ransom's death;
 On either side I come to spend my breath;
 Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,
 But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken:
 'Tis thought, the old man and his sons were angels.

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly⁵ habit,
 That gave the affront⁶ with them.

1 Cap. So 'tis reported; [there?
 25 But none of them can be found.—Stand! Who's

Post. A Roman;

Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
 Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; A dog!

30 A leg of Rome shall not return to tell [his service
 What crows have peck'd them here: He brags
 As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler: after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.

A Prison.

Enter Posthumus, and two Gaolers.

40 1 Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you⁷;

So graze, as you find pasture.

2 Gaol. Ay, or a stomach. [Exit Gaolers.

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a 45 I think, to liberty: Yet am I better [way,
 Than one that's sick o' the gout; since he had Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd [rather
 By the sure physician, death; who is the key
 To unbar these locks. My conscience! thou art
 50 fetter'd [give me

More than my shanks, and wrists: You good gods,
 The penitent instrument, to pick that bolt,
 I then, free for ever! Is't enough, I am sorry?
 So children temporal fathers do appease;
 55 Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
 I cannot do it better than in gyves,
 Desir'd, more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
 If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take

² Shame for modesty.

³ i. e. terrors. ⁴ Alluding to the common superstition of charms being powerful enough to keep men unhurt in battle.—It was derived from our Saxon ancestors, and so is common to us with the Germans, who are, above all other people, given to this superstition; which made Erasmus, where, in his Moriae Encomium, he gives to each nation its proper characteristic, say, "Germani corporum proceritate & magiae cognitione sibi placent."

⁵ Silly is simple or rustic. ⁶ That is, that turned their faces to the enemy. ⁷ This wit of the gaoler alludes to the custom of putting a lock on a horse's leg, when he is turned to pasture.

No stricter render of me, than my all¹.
 I know you are more clement than vile men,
 Who of their broken debtors take a third,
 A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
 On their abatement; that's not my desire:
 For Imogen's dear life, take mine; and though
 'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:
 'Tween man and man, they weigh not every stamp;
 Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake;
 You rather mine, being yours: And so, great
 If you will take this audit, take this life, [powers,
 And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
 I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.

Solemn Musick. Enter, as in an apparition, Sicilius Leonatus, father to Posthumus, an old man, attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to Posthumus, with musick before them. Then, after other musick, follow the two young Leonati, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, shew
 Thy spite on mortal flies:
 With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
 That thy adulteries
 Rates, and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
 Whose face I never saw?
 I dy'd, whilst in the womb he stay'd,
 Attending Nature's law.
 Whose father then (as men report,
 Thou orphan's father art,)
 Thou should'st have been, and shielded him
 From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
 But took me in my throes;
 That from me was Posthumus ript,
 Came crying 'mongst his foes,
 A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
 Moulded the stuff so fair,
 That he deserv'd the praise o'the world,
 As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
 In Britain where was he
 That could stand up his parallel;
 Or fruitful object be
 In eye of Imogen, that best
 Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
 To be exil'd, and thrown
 From Leonati's seat, and cast
 From her his dearest one,
 Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
 Slight thing of Italy,
 To taint his nobler heart and brain
 With needless jealousy;
 And to become the geck and scorn
 O' the other's villainy?

2 Bro. From this, from stiller seats we came,
 Our parents, and us twain,
 That, striking in our country's cause,
 Fell bravely, and were slain;
 Our fealty, and Tenantius' right,
 With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
 To Cymbeline perform'd:
 Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
 Why hast thou thus adjourn'd

The graces for his merits due;
 Being all to dolours turn'd?
Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out:
 No longer exercise,

Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
 And potent injuries:

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
 Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help!
 Or we poor ghosts will cry
 To the shining synod of the rest,
 Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal,
 And from thy justice fly.

Jupiter descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle: he throws a thunder-bolt. The ghosts fall on their knees.

Jupit. No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing; hush!—How dare you ghosts

Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know,
 Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
 Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
 Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:

Be not with mortal accidents oppress;
 No care of yours it is: you know, 'tis ours.
 Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift,
 The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
 Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift;
 His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
 Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in
 Our temple was he married.—Rise, and fade!—
 He shall be lord of lady Imogen,
 And happier much by his affliction made.

This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein
 Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;
 And so, away; no farther with your din
 Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.—
 Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath
 Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
 Stoop'd, as to foot us; his ascension is
 More sweet than our blest fields; his royal bird
 Prunes² the immortal wing, and cloy³ his beak,
 As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter! [ter'd

Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is en-
 His radiant roof:—Away! and, to be blest,
 Let us with care perform his great behest. [Vanish.

60 Post. [waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grand-sire, and begot

A father to me: and thou hast created

¹ Meaning, his life, if it is the main part, the chief point, or principal condition of his freedom, i. e. of his freedom from future punishment. ² A bird is said to prune himself when he clears his feathers from superfluities. ³ i. e. claws.—To claw their beaks, is an accustomed action with hawks and eagles.

A mother, and two brothers: But (O scorn!)
Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born.
And so I am awake.—Poor wretches that depend
On greatness' favour, dream as I have done;
Wake, and find nothing.—But, alas, I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not why.
What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O, rare one!

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

[Reads.]

"When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embrac'd
"by a piece of tender air; and when from a "stately cedar shall be lopt branches, which, be"ing dead many years, shall after revive, be joint-
"ed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then
"shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be "fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty."
'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing:
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie¹. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaolers.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather: ready long ago.

Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir; if you be ready for that, you are well cook'd.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir: But the comfort is, you shall be call'd to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much²;
purse and brain both empty: the brain the heavier, for being too light; the purse too light, being drawn³ of heaviness: O! of this contradiction you shall be now quit.—O, the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor⁴ but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge:—
Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.

Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the tooth-ache: But a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, he would change places with his officer: for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed, do I, fellow.

Gaol. Your death has eyes in's head then; I have not seen him so pictur'd: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know;
or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know; or jump the after-enquiry⁵ on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think, you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes, to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink, and will not use them.

Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes, to see the way of blindness! I am sure, hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bring'st good news; I am call'd to be made free.

Gaol. I'll be hang'd then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead. [Exit Posthumus & Messenger.]

Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone⁶. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O,
there were desolation of gaolers, and gallowses!
I speak against my present profit; but my wish hath a preferment in't. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus,
Pisanio, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my side, you, whom the gods have made

Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart,
That the poor soldier, that so richly fought,
Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast

Stept before targe of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw
Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him? [living,
Pisa. He hath been search'd among the dead and
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward; which I will add
To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,
[To Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.]
By whom, I grant, she lives: 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are:—report it.

¹ The meaning, according to Dr. Johnson, is this: "This is a dream or madness, or both,—or nothing:—but whether it be a speech without consciousness, as in a dream, or a speech unintelligible, as in madness, be it as it is, it is like my course of life." ² i. e. sorry that you have paid too much out of your pocket, and sorry that you are paid or subdued, too much by the liquor. ³ Drawn is embowell'd, exenterated. ⁴ Debtor and creditor for an accounting book. ⁵ That is, venture at it without thought. ⁶ i. e. forward.

Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen :
Further to boast, were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees :
Arise my knights o' the battle ; I create you
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates.—

Enter Cornelius, and Ladies.

There's business in these faces :—Why so sadly
Greet you our victory ? you look like Romans,
And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king !
To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician
Would this report become ? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she ?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life ;
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd,
I will report, so please you : These her women
Can trip me, if I err ; who, with wet cheeks,
Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pr'ythee, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you ; only Affected greatness got by you, not you :
Married your royalty ; was wife to your place ;
Abhorr'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this :
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed, [love

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to
With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight ; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had
Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend !
Who is 't can read a woman ?—Is there more ?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess,
she had

For you a mortal mineral ; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and ling'ring,
By inches waste you : In which time she purpos'd,
By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her shew : yes, and in time,
(When she had fitted you with her craft) to work
Her son into the adoption of the crown.
But failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless-desperate ; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes ; repented
The ills she hatch'd were not effected ; so,
Despairing, dy'd.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women ?

Lady. We did, so please your highness,

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful ;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery ; nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming ; it had been vicious,

To have mistrusted her : yet, O my daughter !
That it was folly in me, thou may'st say,

And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all !

*Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and other Roman prisoners ;
Posthumus behind, and Imogen.*

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute ; that
The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one ; whose kinsmen have made suit [ter

That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaugh-
Of you their captives, which ourself have granted :
So think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war : the day
Was yours by accident : had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cold, have threaten'd

15 Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come : sufficeth,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer :
Augustus lives to think on't : And so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat ; My boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd : never master had
A gage so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,

25 So feat¹, so nurse-like : let his virtue join With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness

Cannot deny ; he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have serv'd a Roman : save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.

30 Cym. I have surely seen him :
His favour² is familiar to me :—Boy,
Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace, and art
Mine own. I know not why, wherefore, I say,
35 Live, boy : ne'er thank thy master ; live :
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it ;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

40 Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad ;
And yet I know, thou wilt.

Imo. No, no ; alack,
There's another work in hand : I see a thing
Bitter to me as death : your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me : Briefly die their joys,
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.—
50 Why stands he so perplex'd ?

Cym. What would'st thou, boy ?
I love thee more and more ; think more and more What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on ?
speak,

55 Wilt have him live ? Is he thy kin ? thy friend ?

Imo. He is a Roman ; no more kin to me,
Than I to your highness ; who, being born your Am something nearer. [vassal,

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so ?

60 Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name ?

¹ i. e. so ready ; so dexterous in waiting.

² i. e. his countenance.

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master: Walk with me; speak freely.
[Cymbeline and Imogen walk aside.]

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arr. One sand another

Not more resembles: That sweet rosy lad,
Who dy'd, and was Fidele—What think you?

Guid. The same dead thing alive. [forbear;

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not;
Creatures may be alike; were't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Guid. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pisan. It is my mistress: [Aside.
Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good or bad. [Cym. and Imogen come forward.]

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side;
Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, step you forth;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely;
Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to him. [der

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may ren-
Of whom he had this ring.

Post. What's that to him? [Aside.

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say,
How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken that
Which; to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How! me? [which

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that Torments me to conceal. By villainy
I got this ring; 'twas Leonatus' jewel, Whom thou didst banish; and (which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me) a nobler sir ne'er liv'd [my lord:
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,— [spirits
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false
Quail¹ to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength:

I had rather thou should'st live while nature will,
Than die e'er I hear more; strive, man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!) it was in Rome, (accurs'd
The mansion where!) 'twas at a feast, (O, 'would
Our viands had been poison'd! or, at least,
Those which I heav'd to head!) the good Posthumus

(What should I say? he was too good, to be
Where ill men were; and was the best of all
Among the rar'st of good ones) sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak: for feature, laming
The shrine of Venus or straight-pight Minerva,

Postures beyond brief nature²; for condition,
A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides, that hook of wiving,
Fairness, which strikes the eye:—

Cym. I stand on fire:

Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall, [humus,
Unless thou would'st grieve quickly—This Post-(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover) took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom he prais'd, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,

And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description
Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.
He spake of her, as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: Whereat, I, wretch!
Made scruple of his praise; and wager'd with him
Pieces of gold, 'gainst this which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger to attain

In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By hers and mine adultery; he, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident

Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phœbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of his car. Away to Britain

Post I in this design: Well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught,
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gan in your duller Britain operate

Most vilely, for my 'vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with simular proof enough

To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this, her bracelet,
(O, cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,—
Methinks I see him now,—

Post. Ay, so thou dost, [Coming forward.
Italian fiend!—Ah me, most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing

That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come!—O, give me cord or knife or poison,
Some upright justicer! Thou, king, send out
For tortures ingenious: it is I

That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter:—villain-like, I lie;
That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do't:—the temple

¹ To quail is to sink into dejection. ² i. e. the ancient statues of Venus and Minerva, which exceeded, in beauty of exact proportion, any living bodies, the work of brief nature, i. e. of hasty un-laborate nature.

Of virtue was she ; yea, and she herself¹.
 Spit and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
 The dogs o' the street to bay me : every villain
 Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus : and
 Be villainy less than 'twas !—O Imogen !
 My queen, my life, my wife ! O Imogen,
 Imogen, Imogen !

Imo. Peace, my lord ; hear, hear——

Post. Shall's have a play of this ? thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her, she falls.]

Pisan. O, gentlemen, help
 Mine, and your mistress,—O my lord Posthumus !
 You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now :—Help, help !—
 Mine honour'd lady !

Cym. Does the world go round ?

Post. How come these staggers² on me ?

Pisan. Wake, my mistress !

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
 To death with mortal joy.

Pisan. How fares my mistress ?

Imo. O, get thee from my sight ;
 Thou gav'st me poison : dangerous fellow, hence !
 Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen ! [me, if]

Pisan. Lady, the gods throw stones of sulphur on That box I gave you was not thought by me
 A precious thing ; I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still ?

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O gods !

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
 Which must approve thee honest : If Pisanio
 Have, said she, given his mistress that confection
 Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd
 As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius ?

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
 To temper poisons for her ; still pretending
 The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
 In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
 Of no esteem ; I, dreading that her purpose
 Was of more danger, did compound for her
 A certain stuff, which being ta'en, would cease
 The present power of life ; but, in short time,
 All offices of nature should again
 Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it ?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,

There was our error.—

Guid. This is sure Fidele. [you ?]

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from Think that you are upon a rock ; and now
 Throw me again.

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
 'Till the tree die !

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child ?
 What, mak'st thou me a dullard³ in this act ?
 Wilt thou not speak to me ?

Imo. Your blessing, sir. [Kneeling.]

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame
 you not ;

You had a motive for it.

[To Guiderius and Arviragus.]

Cym. My tears, that fall,
 Prove holy water on thee ! Imogen,
 Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I'm sorry for't, my lord.

Cym. O, she was naught ; and, long of her it was,
 That we meet here so strangely : But her son
 Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pisan. My lord, [ten]
 Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord Clo-
 Upon my lady's missing, came to me
 With his sword drawn ; foam'd at the mouth, and swore,

15 If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
 It was my instant death : By accident,
 I had a feigned letter of my master's
 Then in my pocket ; which directed him
 To seek her on the mountains near to Milford ;
20 Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
 Which he inforc'd from me, away he posts
 With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
 My lady's honour : what became of him,
 I further know not.

25 Guid. Let me end the story :
 I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forefend !
 I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
 Pluck a hard sentence : pr'ythee, valiant youth,
30 Deny't again.

Guid. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince. [me]

Guid. A most uncivil one : The wrongs he did
 Were nothing prince-like ; for he did provoke me
35 With language that would make me spurn the sea,
 If it could so roar to me : I cut off's head ;
 And am right glad, he is not standing here
 To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee : [must]
40 By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and Endure our law : Thou art dead.

Imo. That headless man
 I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
45 And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king :

This man is better than the man he slew,
 As well descended as thyself ; and hath
 More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens
50 Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone ;

[To the Guard.]

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
 Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
55 By tasting of our wrath ? How of descent
 As good as we ?

Arr. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three :

60 But I will prove, that two of us are as good
 As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,
 For my own part, unfold a dangerous speech,

³ A dullard in this place means a person stupidly unconcerned.

Though, haply, well for you.

Arr. Your danger's ours.

Guid. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then.—

[who

By leave;—Thou had'st, great king, a subject, 5

Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath
Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how, a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence;
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons? [knee;

Bel. I am too blunt and saucy: Here's my
Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;
Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue!

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my near¹ offence, my punish-
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd, [ment 30
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes
(For such and so they are) these twenty years
Have I train'd up: those arts they have, as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as
Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile, 35
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;
Having receiv'd the punishment before,
For that which I did then: Beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason: Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world:—
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st and speak'st.
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st: I lost my children; 50
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd a while.—
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius: 55
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lap'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;

It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;

Who hath upon him still that natural stamp:
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what am I

A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother
Rejoic'd deliverance more:—Blest may you be,
That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
10 You may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord; [thers,

I have got two worlds by 't.—O my gentle bro-
Have we thus met? O, never say hereafter,
15 But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?

Arr. Ay, my good lord.

Guid. And at first meeting lov'd;
Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!

When shall I hear all through? This fierce² abridgement

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where? how liv'd you?

And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met
them?

Why fled you from the court? and whither? These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;

35 And all the other by-dependancies, [place,
From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor Will serve our long intergatories. See,

Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye,

40 On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting
Each object with a joy: the counter-change
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—

Thou art my brother; So we'll hold thee ever.

[To Belarius.

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'er-joy'd,

Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,

I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
55 He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd
The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,

The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeeming; 'twas a fitment for 60 The purpose I then follow'd:—That I was he, Speak, Iachimo; I had you down, and might
Have made you finish.

² Fierce is vehement, rapid.

Iach. I am down again :
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, 'beseech
Which I so often owe: but your ring first; [you,
And here the bracelet of the truest princess,
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me :
The power that I have on you, is to spare you ;
The malice towards you, to forgive you: Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd :
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law ;
Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You help us, sir.
As you did mean indeed to be our brother ;
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.——Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer : As I slept, methought,
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
Appear'd to me, with other sprightly shews¹
Of mine own kindred : when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom ; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection² of it : let him shew
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus,——

Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Soothsayer reads.

“ When as a lion's whelp shall to himself “ unknown, without seeking find, and be em-“ brac'd by a piece of tender air ; and when from “ a stately cedar shall be lopt branches, which,
“ being dead many years, shall after revive, be “ joined to the old stock, and freshly grow ; then “ shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be “ fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.”

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp ;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much ;
The piece of tender air thy virtuous daughter,

[To Cymbeline.

Which we call mollis aer ; and mollis aer
We term it mulier : which mulier, I divine, [now
Is this most constant wife ; [To Post.] who, even Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clip'd about,
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee : and thy lopt branches point,
Thy two sons forth : who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd ; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well.

My peace we will begin :—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Roman empire, promising

To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen ;
On whom heaven's justice (both on her, and her's)
Hath lay'd most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplished: For the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which fore-shew'd, our princely eagle,
The imperial Cæsar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods ;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our blest altars ! Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward : Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together: so thro' Lud's town march;
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify ; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there:—Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.

[Exeunt omnes.

A SONG, sung by Guiderius and Arviragus over
Fidele, supposed to be dead.

By Mr. WILLIAM COLLINS.

1.

To fair Fidele's grassy tomb,
Soft maids and village lads shall bring
Each op'ning sweet, of earliest bloom,
And rifle all the breathing spring.

2.

No wailing ghost shall dare appear
To vex with shrieks this quiet grove :
But shepherd-lads assemble here,
And melting virgins own their love.

3.

No wither'd witch shall here be seen,
No goblins lead their mighty crew:
The female fays shall haunt the green,
And dress thy grave with pearly dew.

4.

The red-breast oft' at ev'ning hours
Shall kindly lend his little aid,
With hoary moss, and gather'd flowers,
To deck the ground where thou art laid.

5.

When howling winds, and beating rain,
In tempests shake the sylvan cell ;
Or 'midst the chace on ev'ry plain,
The tender thought on thee shall dwell.

6.

Each lonely scene shall thee restore ;
For thee the tear be duly shed:
Belov'd, till life could charm no more ;
And mourn'd, till pity's self be dead.

SCENE I.

King Lear's Palace.

Enter Kent, Gloster, and Edmund.

Kent. I THOUGHT, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed, that curiosity¹ in neither can make choice of either's moiety².

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge:
I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I am braz'd to 't.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could:
whereupon she grew round-womb'd; and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have, sir, a son by order of law, some years elder than this, who is yet no dearer in my account, though this knave came somewhat saucily into the world before he was sent for: yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.

—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent. Remember him here after as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship. [ter.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you bet-

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again:—The king is coming.

[Trumpets sound within.

Enter Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Goneril, Regan,
Cordelia, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloster.

Glo. I shall, my liege. [Exeunt Gloster and Edmund.

Lear. Mean time we shall express our darker³
purpose.

The map there.—Know, that we have divided
In three our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent

To shake all cares and business from our age;

Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburthen'd crawl toward death.—Our son of

Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany,

We have this hour a constant⁴ will to publish

Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife

May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

one of two equal parts: but Shakspeare commonly uses it for any part or division.

more secret; not for indirect, oblique.

⁴ Constant is firm, determined.

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love,
Longinourcourt have made their amorous sojourn,
And here are to be answer'd.—Tell me, my daugh-(Since now we will divest us, both of rule, [ters, Interest of territory, cares of state,)

Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most?
That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge.—Go—
Our eldest born, speak first. [neril,

Gon. Sir, I

Do love you more than words can wield the mat-
Dearer than eye-sight, space and liberty;
Beyond what can be valued rich or rare; [nour:
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, ho-
As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found
A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable;
Beyond all manner of so much¹ I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent. [Aside.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd,
With plenteous rivers, and white-skirted meads,
We make thee lady: To thine and Albany's issue
Bethis perpetual.—What says our second daughter, 25
Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find, she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short:—that² I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys,
Which the most precious square³ of sense pos-
And find, I am alone felicitate (sesses;
In your dear highness' love.

Cor. Then poor Cordelia! [Aside. 35

And yet not so; since I am sure, my love's
More pond'rous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity⁴, and pleasure,
Than that confirm'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy,
Although the last, not least; to whose young love,
The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy,
Strive to be interest'd; what can you say, to draw
A third, more opulent than your sisters? Speak. 45

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing. [again.

Lear. Nothing can come of nothing: speak

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond; nor more, nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia! mend your speech a little,

Lest it may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,

You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say,

They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry

Half my love with him, half my care, and duty:
5 Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.

Lear. But goes thy heart with this?

Cor. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

Cor. So young, my lord, and true. [dower: 10

Lear. Let it be so—Thy truth then be thy Propinquity and property of blood,

And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee, from this⁵, for ever. The barbarous Scythian,

Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—

Lear. Peace, Kent!
Come not between the dragon and his wrath:
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid my 30 sight!— [To Cordelia.

So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her!—Call France;—
Who stirs?

Call Burgundy.—Cornwall, and Albany,
35 With my two daughters' dowers digest this third:
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.

I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects [course,
That troop with majesty. Ourself, by monthly

By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode [tain
Make with you by due turns. Only, we shall re-
The name, and all the addition to a king;

The sway, revenue, execution of the rest⁶,
45 Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm,
This coronet part between you. [Giving the crown.

Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,

50 As my great patron thought on in my prayers,— Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart: be Kent unmannerly, 55 When Lear is mad. What would'st thou do, old man?

Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to speak,
When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bound,

60 When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom;

¹ That is, beyond all assignable quantity. ² That seems to stand without relation, but is referred to find; the first conjunction being inaccurately suppressed.—I find that she names my deed, I find that I profess, &c. ³ Square here means compass, comprehension. ⁴ Validity, for worth, value. ⁵ i. e. from this time. ⁶ i. e. the execution of all the other business.

And, in thy best consideration, check [ment,
This hideous rashness: answer my life, my judge—
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;
Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound
Reverbs¹ no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.

Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.

Lear. Out of my sight!

Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain
The true blank² of thine eye.

Lear. Now, by Apollo,—

Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

Lear. O vassal! miscreant!

[Laying his hand on his sword.

Alb. Corn. Dear sir, forbear.

Kent. Do; kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift;
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee, thou dost evil.

Lear. Hear me, recreant;
On thine allegiance hear me!—
Sincethou hast sought to make us break our vow, (Which we durst never yet,) and, with strain'd
pride³,

To come betwixt our sentence and our power⁴,
(Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,)
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee for provision
To shield thee from disasters of the world;
And, on the sixth, to turn thy hated back
Upon our kingdom: if on the tenth day following,
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death: Away! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.

Kent. Why, fare thee well, king: since thus thou wilt appear,
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.—
The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,

[To Cordelia.

That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said.—
And your large speeches may your deeds approve,

[To Regan and Goneril.

That good effects may spring from words of love.—
Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu;
He'll shape his old course in a country new. [Exit.

Re-enter Gloster, with France, Burgundy, and Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble
lord.

Lear. My lord of Burgundy,
We first address towards you, who with this king
Have rivall'd for our daughter; What, in the least,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love⁵?

Bur. Most royal majesty,

I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd.
Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy,

When she was dear to us, we did hold her so;
But now her price is fall'n: Sir, there she stands;
If aught within that little seeming⁶ substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd,
And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer. [owes⁷,

Lear. Sir, will you, with those infirmities she Unfriended, new-adopted to our hate, [oath,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our
Take her, or leave her?

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir;
Election makes not up⁸ on such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir; for by the power that made me,

I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king,
[To France.

I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate; therefore beseech you
To avert your liking a more worthier way
Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd
Almost to acknowledge hers.

France. This is most strange!
That she, who even but now was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
The best, the dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favour! Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall into taint⁹: which to believe of her,
Must be of faith, that reason without miracle
Should never plant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,
(If for I want that glib and oily art, [tend,
To speak and purpose not; since what I well in-I'll do't before I speak) that you make known
It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour:
But even for want of that, for which I am richer:
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it
Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou [better.
Hadst not been born, than not to have pleas'd me France. Is it no more but this? a tardiness in nature,

Which often leaves the history unspoke,
That it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady? Love is not love,
When it is mingled with regards, that stand
Aloof from the entire¹⁰ point. Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear,
Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,

¹ Means the same as reverberates. ² The blank is the white or exact mark at which the arrow is shot.—See better, says Kent, and keep me always in your view. ³ i. e. pride exorbitant; pride passing due bounds. ⁴ i. e. our power to execute that sentence. ⁵ Quest of love is amorous expedition. The term originated from romance.—A quest was the expedition in which a knight was engaged. ⁶ Seeming is specious. ⁷ i. e. is possessed of. ⁸ i. e. makes not advances. ⁹ Taint is here used for corruption and for disgrace. ¹⁰ Entire for single.

And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Dutchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing; I have sworn: I am firm.

Bur. I am sorry then you have so lost a father,
That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, thou art most rich, being poor;
Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd!
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! 'tis strange, that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, and ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of wat'rish Burgundy
Shall buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.—
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:
Thou lovest here, a better where¹ to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine;
for we

Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of her's again:—Therefore be gone,
Without our grace, our love, our benison.—
Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, &c.]

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes
Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are:
And, like a sister, am most loth to call [ther:
Your faults, as they are nam'd. Use well our fa-
To your professing bosoms I commit him:
But yet, alas! stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.

Gon. Let your study
Be, to content your lord; who hath receiv'd you
At fortune's alms: You have obedience scanted,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted².

Cor. Time shall unfold what plaited³ cunning hides;

Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Exeunt France and Cordelia.]

Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say, of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think, our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is!
the observation we have made of it hath not been little! he always lov'd our sister most; and with what poor judgement he hath now cast her off, appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long engrafted condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together⁴: If our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i' the heat.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Castle belonging to the Earl of Gloster.

Enter Edmund, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law
My services are bound: Wherefore should I Stand in the plague⁵ of custom; and permit
The curiosity⁶ of nations to⁷ deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines [base?

Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore
When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true,
As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us
With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base?
Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take

More composition, and fierce quality
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to the creating of a whole tribe of fops,
Got 'tween asleep and wake?—Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land:

Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund,
As to the legitimate: Fine word,—legitimate!
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper:—
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler parted!

And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd⁸ his power!

Confin'd to exhibition¹⁰! All this done

¹ Here and where have the power of nouns.—Thou lovest this residence to find a better residence in another place. ² The meaning is, "You well deserve to meet with that want of love from your husband, which you have professed to want for our father."

³ i. e. agree. ⁴ i. e. We must strike while the iron's hot. ⁵ i. e. complicated, involved cunning.

⁶ That is, Wherefore should I acquiesce, submit tamely to the plagues and injustice of custom? ⁷ Curiosity, in the time of Shakespeare, was a word that signified an over-nice scrupulousness in manners, dress, &c.—The curiosity of nations means, the idle, nice distinctions of the world. ⁸ To deprive was, in our author's time, synonymous to disinherit. ⁹ Subscrib'd for transferred, alienated. ¹⁰ Exhibition is allowance.

Upon the gad¹! Edmund! How now? what news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the letter.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No? What needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket? The quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read; and for so much as I have perus'd, I find it not fit for your overlooking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an assay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [reads.] "This policy, and reverence of age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us, 'till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond² bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny; who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep 'till I wak'd him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, Edgar."—Hum!—Conspiracy!—"Sleep, 'till I wak'd him!—you shall enjoy half his revenue!"—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in?—When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord, there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope, his heart is not in the contents. [this business?]

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in

Edm. Never, my lord: But I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him:—Abominable villain!—Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, 'till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you should run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath w³at this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence⁴ of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very even-

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.— [ing.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom: I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution⁵.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey⁶ the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourg'd by the frequent effects⁷; love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond crack'd 'twixt son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: Machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund: it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully:—And the noble and true-hearted Kent banish'd! his offence, honesty!—Strange! strange! [Exit.

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world! that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains, by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, lyars, and adulterers, by an enforc'd obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: An admirable evasion of whore-

¹ To do upon the gad, is, to act by the sudden stimulation of caprice, as cattle run madding when they are stung by the gad-fly. ² i. e. weak and foolish. ³ Pretence is design, purpose. ⁴ The meaning is, according to Dr. Johnson, Do you frame the business, who can act with less emotion; I would unstate myself; it would in me be a departure from the paternal character, to be in a due resolution, to be settled and composed on such an occasion.—Mr. Steevens comments on this passage thus: "Edgar has been represented as wishing to possess his father's fortune, i. e. to unstate him; and therefore his father says, he would unstate himself to be sufficiently resolved to punish him."—To enstate is to confer a fortune. ⁵ To convey, here means to manage artfully. ⁶ That is, though natural philosophy can give account of eclipses, yet we feel their consequences.

master man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail; and my nativity was under ursa major; so that it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut, I should have been that I am, had the madienliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar—

Enter Edgar.

and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy. My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o'Bedlam.—O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi—

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of, succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities, divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty, forbear his presence, until some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you have a continent forbearance, 'till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: Pray you, go; there's my key:—If you do stir abroad, go arm'd.

Edg. Arm'd, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; go arm'd; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it: Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.—

[Exit Edgar.]

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,

That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty
My practices ride easy!—I see the business—
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit:
All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit. [Exit.]

S C E N E III.

The Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Goneril, and Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. Ay, madam. [hour

Gon. By day and night! he wrongs me; every He flashes into one gross crime or other,
That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it:

His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us
On every trifle: When he returns from hunting,
I will not speak with him: Say, I am sick:

If you come slack of former services,

You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Stew. He's coming, madam; I hear him.

[Horns within.]

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your fellows; I'd have it come to ques-
If he dislike it, let him to my sister, [tion:

Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,
Not to be over-rul'd. Idle old man,

That still would manage those authorities

That he hath given away!—Now, by my life,

Old fools are babes again; and must be us'd

With checks as flatteries when they are seen ab-
Remember what I have said. [us'd,

Stew. Very well, madam.

Gen. And let his knights have colder looks among you; [so:

What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows
I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall,
That I may speak:—I'll write straight to my sister

To hold my very course:—Prepare for dinner.
[Exeunt.]

S C E N E IV.

An open Place before the Palace.

Enter Kent, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech diffuse², my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likeness.—Now, banish'd

Kent, [demn'd,

If thou canst serve where thou dost stand con-
(So may it come!) thy master, whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter Lear, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go, get it ready.

How now, what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

¹ The sense, according to Dr. Johnson, is this: "Old men must be treated with checks, when as they are seen to be deceived with flatteries: or, when they are weak enough to be seen abused by flatteries, they are then weak enough to be used with checks. There is a play on the words used and abused.—To abuse is, in our author, very frequently the same as to deceive." ² That is, If I can change my speech as well as I have changed my dress.—To diffuse speech, signifies to disorder it, and so to disguise it.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What would'st thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly, that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse¹ with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgement; to fight, when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish².

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What would'st thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Whom would'st thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualify'd in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me, if I like thee no worse after dinner: I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho, dinner!—Where's my knave? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither:—

Enter Steward.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Stew. So please you,— [Exit.

Lear. What says the fellow there?—Call the clotpole back.—Where's my fool, ho?—I think the world's asleep.—How now? where's that mungrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me, when I call'd him?

Knight. Sir, he answer'd me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgement, your highness is not entertain'd with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the general dependents, as in the duke himself also, and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! say'st thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness is wrong'd.

Lear. Thou but remember'st me of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity, than as a very pretence³ and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't.—But where's my fool? I have not seen him these two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pin'd away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

Re-enter Steward.

O, you sir, you sir, come you hither: Who am I, Stew. My lady's father. [sir?

Lear. My lady's father! my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Stew. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech you, pardon me.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him.

Stew. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tript neither; you base foot-ball player. [Tripping up his heels.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou serv'st me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away; I'll teach you differences; away, away: If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry: but away: go to: Have you wisdom? so.

[Pushes the Steward out.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service. [Giving Kent money.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too;—Here's my coxcomb. [Giving Kent his cap.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave? how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why, for taking one's part that is out of favour: Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: There, take my coxcomb⁴: Why, this fellow has banish'd two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; it thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, nuncle? Would I had two coxcombs⁵, and two daughters!

¹ To converse signifies immediately and properly to keep company, not to discourse or talk.—His meaning is, that he chooses for his companions men of reserve and caution; men who are no tattlers nor tale-bearers. ² In Queen Elizabeth's time, the Papists were esteemed, and with good reason, enemies to the government.—Hence the proverbial phrase of He's an honest man, and eats no fish; to signify he is a friend to the government, and a Protestant; the eating fish, on a religious account, being then esteemed such a badge of popery, that when it was enjoin'd for a season by act of parliament, for the encouragement of the fish-towns, it was thought necessary to declare the reason; hence it was called Cecil's fast. ³ Pretence for design. ⁴ Meaning his cap, called so because: on the top of the fool's or jester's cap was sewed a piece of red cloth, resembling the comb of a cock.—The word, afterwards, was used to denote a vain, conceited, meddling fellow. ⁵ Two foolscaps, intended, as it seems, to mark double folly in the man that gives all to his daughters.

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself: There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog that must to kennel; he must be whipp'd out, when the lady brach¹ may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech. [To Kent.]

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:—

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest²,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest³,
Set less than thou throwest;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then it is like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for't:—Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool.

[To Kent.]

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad, teach me.

Fool. That lord, that counsell'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come, place him here by me,—
Or do thou for him stand;
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,
The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly on't, they would have part on't⁴: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns, Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back over the dirt: Thou had'st little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipp'd that first finds it so.

Fool's sne'er had less grace in a year⁵; [Singing.]

For wise men are grown foppish;
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou mad'st thy daughters thy mothers: for when thou gav'st them the rod, and putt'st down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing.]
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie; I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. If you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipt.

Fool. I marvel, what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipt for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipt for lying; and, sometimes, I am whipt for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing, than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing in the middle: Here comes one of the parings.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, daughter? what makes that frontlet⁶ on?

Methinks, you are too much of late i' the frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou had'st no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure: I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing.—Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; [to Goneril.] so your face bids me, though you say nothing.

Mum, mum,

He that keeps nor crust nor crum,
Weary of all, shall want some.—

That's a sheal'd peascod⁷. [Pointing to Lear.]

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool, But other of your insolent retinue Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir, [you, I had thought, by making this well known unto To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,

¹ Brach is a bitch of the hunting-kind. ² That is, do not lend all that thou hast.—To owe, in old English, is to possess. ³ To trow, is an old word which signifies to believe. ⁴ A satire on the gross abuses of monopolies at that time; and the corruption and avarice of the courtiers, who commonly went shares with the patentee.—Monopolies were, in Shakspeare's time, the common objects of satire. ⁵ The meaning is, There never was a time when fools were less in favour; and the reason is, that they were never so little wanted, for wise men now supply their place.—Both the quarto editions read—less wit for less grace. ⁶ Lear alludes to the frontlet, which was anciently part of a woman's dress, ⁷ i. e. now a mere husk, which contains nothing.

By what yourself too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on¹
By your allowance; which if you should, the fault
Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep;
Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you trow, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it had its head bit off by its young.
So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. Come, sir,
I would, you would make use of that good wisdom
Whereof I know you are fraught; and put away
These dispositions, which of late transform you
From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?—Whoop, Jug! I love thee².

Lear. Does any here know me?—Why, this is not Lear: [eyes?]

Does Lear walk thus? speak thus?—Where are his Either his notion weakens, or his discernings
Are lethargy'd—Ha! waking?—'Tis not so.—
Who is it that can tell me who I am?—Lear's shadow?

I would learn that; for by the marks
Of sov'reignty, of knowledge, and of reason,
I should be false persuaded I had daughters.—
Your name, fair gentlewoman?

Gon. Come, sir,
This admiration is much o' the favour
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright:
As you are old and reverend, you should be wise:
Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires;
Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd and bold,
That this our court, infected with their manners,
Shews like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust
Make it more like a tavern, or a brothel, [speak
Than a grac'd palace³. The shame itself doth
For instant remedy: Be then desir'd
By her, that else will take the thing she begs,
A little to disquantity your train;
And the remainder, that shall still depend⁴,
To be such men as may besort your age,
And know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!—
Saddle my horses; call my train together.—
Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee;
Yet have I left a daughter. [rabble]

Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd
Make servants of their betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents,—O, sir, are you come?

Is it your will? speak, sir.—Prepare my horses.—

[To Albany
Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou shew'st thee in a child
Than the sea-monster⁵!

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.

Lear. Detested kite! thou liest: [To Goneril.
My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know;

10 And in the most exact regard support
The worships of their name.—O most small fault,
How ugly didst thou in Cordelia shew! [nature
Which, like an engine⁶, wrench'd by frame of
From the fixt place, drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in,

[Striking his head.
And thy dear judgement out!—Go, go, my people.

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
20 Of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord.

Hear, nature! hear; dear goddess, hear!

Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful!

25 Into her womb convey sterility;
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate⁷ body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
30 And be a thwart disnatur'd⁸ torment to her!

Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth:
With cadent⁹ tears fret channels in her cheeks;

Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel 35 How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child!—Away, away! [Exit.

Alb. Now, gods, that we adore, whereof comes
this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause;
40 But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers, at a clap!
45 Within a fortnight!

Alb. What's the matter, sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee;—Life and death! I am asham'd
That thou hadst power to shake my manhood thus:

50 [To Goneril.
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them.—Blasts and fogs,
upon thee!

The untented¹⁰ woundings of a father's curse
55 Pierce every sense about thee!—Old fond eyes,
Beweepe this cause again, I'll pluck you out;
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,

 Let it be so:—Yet I have left a daughter,
 Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;
 When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
 She'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find,
 That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think
 I have cast off for ever; thou shalt, I warrant thee.

[Exeunt Lear, Kent, and Attendants.]

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
 To the great love I bear you.

Gon. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald, ho!
 You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

[To the Fool.]

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry, and take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
 And such a daughter,
 Should sure to the slaughter,
 If my cap would buy a halter;
 So the fool follows after.

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far:

Let me still take away the harms I fear,
 Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart:
 What he hath utter'd, I have writ my sister;
 If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
 When I have shew'd the unfitness,—How now, Oswald?

Enter Steward.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

Stew. Ay, madam. [horse:]

Gon. Take you some company, and away to Inform her full of my particular fear:
 And thereto add such reasons of your own,
 As may compact it more². Get you gone;
 And hasten your return. No, no, my lord,

[Exit Steward.]

This milky gentleness, and course of yours,
 Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,
 You are much more at task³ for want of wisdom,
 Than prais'd for harmful mildness. [tell;

SCENE V.

A Court-yard before the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters: acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know than comes from her demand out of the letter: If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, 'till I have deliver'd your letter.

Fool. If a man's brains were in his heels, were't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then I pr'ythee be merry; thy wit shall not go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. Why, what canst thou tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' the middle of one's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes on either side one's nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong⁴:—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father!—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven,
 is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight.

Fool. Yes, indeed: Thou would'st make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perforce⁵!—Monster!
 ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou should'st not have been old before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven! Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!—

Enter a Gentleman.

How now? are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

A C T II.

S C E N E I.

A Castle belonging to the Earl of Gloster.

Enter Edmund and Curan, meeting.

Edm. SAVE thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father; and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his dutchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not: You have heard of the news abroad; I mean the whisper'd ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments¹?

Edm. Not I; Pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.]

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business! My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queazy² question, Which I must act:—Briefness, and fortune, work!—Brother, a word;—descend:—Brother, I say;

Enter Edgar.

My father watches:—O, sir, fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid; You have now the good advantage of the night:—Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall? He's coming hither, now, i' the night, i' the haste, And Regan with him; Have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany? Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on 't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming,—Pardon me:—In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you:—Draw: Seem to defend yourself: Now quit you well.

Yield:—Come before my father;—Light, ho, Fly, brother;—Torches! torches!—So, farewell.—

[Exit Edgar.]

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion

[Wounds his arm.]

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards Do more than this in sport.—Father! father! Stop, stop! No help?

Enter Gloster, and Servants with torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon To stand his auspicious mistress:—

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could— [means, what?]

The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture

I will send far and near, that all the kingdom

May have due note of him: and of my land,

Corn. How now, my noble friend? since I came hither,

It is too bad, too bad.—

Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill affected; 15

Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice¹; and receiv'd This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursu'd?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more 30

You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,

Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit you. 40

Reg. Thus out of season; threading dark-ey'd night.

SCENE II.

Enter Kent and Steward severally.

Stew. Good even to thee, friend: Art of this Kent. Ay. [house?

Stew. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I' th' mire.

Stew. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Stew. Why then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury⁴ pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Stew. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Stew. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited⁵, hundred-pound⁶, filthy worsted-stocking⁷ knave; a lily-liver'd⁸, action-taking knave; a whoreson, glass-gazing, super-serviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that would'st be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch; one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deny'st the least syllable of thy addition.

Stew. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, or knows thee?

Kent. What a brazen-fac'd varlet art thou, to deny thou know'st me? Is it two days ago, since I tript up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue: for though it be night, yet the moon shines; I'll make a sop o' the moon-shine of you¹⁰: Draw, you whoreson cullionly barber-monger¹¹, draw. [Drawing his sword.

Stew. Away; I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king; and take vanity the puppet's part, against the royalty of her father: Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks:—draw, 45 you rascal; come your ways.

Stew. Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand; you neat slave¹², strike. [Beating him.

Stew. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter Edmund, Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, and Servants.

Edm. How now? What's the matter? Part.

¹ i. e. discover, betray.—Practice is always used by Shakspeare for insidious mischief. ² Prize, or price, for value. ³ i. e. not at home, but at some other place. ⁴ Lipsbury pinfold may be a cant expression importing the same as Lob's Pound. ⁵ Three-suited knave might mean, in an age of ostentatious finery like that of Shakspeare, one who had no greater change of raiment than three suits would furnish him with. ⁶ A hundred-pound gentleman is a term of reproach. ⁷ A worsted-stocking knave is another term of reproach.—The stockings in England, in the reign of queen Elizabeth, were remarkably expensive, and scarcely any other kind than silk were worn, even by those who had not above forty shillings a year wages. ⁸ Lily-liver'd is cowardly; white-blooded and white-liver'd are still in vulgar use. ⁹ i. e. titles. ¹⁰ This is equivalent to our modern phrase of making the sun shine through any one. ¹¹ Barber-monger may mean dealer in the lower tradesmen: a slur upon the steward, as taking fees for a recommendation to the business of the family. ¹² You neat slave, means no more than you finical rascal, you who are an assemblage of foppery and poverty. Kent.

Kent. With you, goodman boy, if you please ;
come, I'll flesh you ; come on, young master.

Glo. Weapons ! arms ! What's the matter here ?

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives ;

He dies that strikes again : What is the matter ?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.

Corn. What is your difference ? Speak.

Stew. I am scarce in breath, my lord. [valour.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestir'd your
You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee ;
A tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow :
A tailor make a man ?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir : a stone-cutter, or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel ?

Stew. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spar'd
At suit of his grey beard,——

Kent. Thou whoreson zed¹ ! thou unnecessary letter !—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted² villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail ?

Corn. Peace, sirrah !

You beastly knave, you know no reverence ?

Kent. Yes, sir ; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry ?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword, [these,
Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as
Like rats, oft bite the holy cords³ in twain
Too intricate t' unloose : sooth ev'ry passion
That in the nature of their lords rebels ;
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods ;
Renegé, affirm, and turn their halcyon⁴ beaks
With every gale and vary of their masters ;
Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.—
A plague upon your epileptic⁵ visage !
Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool ?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I'd drive you cackling home to Camelot⁶.

Corn. What art thou mad, old fellow ?

Glo. How fell you out ? say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy
Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave ? What's his offence ?

Kent. His countenance likes⁷ me not. [or hers.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, or his,

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain ;

I have seen better faces in my time

Than stand on any shoulder that I see

Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow, [affect

Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth

A saucy roughness ; and constrains the garb,

Quite from his nature⁸ : He cannot flatter, he !

An they will take it, so ; if not, he's plain. [ness

These kind of knaves I know, which in this plain-

Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends,

Than twenty silly⁹ ducking observants,

That stretch their duties nicely¹⁰.

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, or in sincere verity,

Under the allowance of your grand aspect,

Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire

On flickering¹¹ Phœbus' front,——

Corn. What mean'st thou by this ?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you dis-commend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer : he that beguil'd you, in a plain accent, was a plain knave ; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to it.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him ?

Stew. I never gave him any :

30 It pleas'd the king his master, very late,

To strike at me, upon his misconstruction ;

When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,

Tript me behind ; being down, insulted, rail'd,

And put upon him such a deal of man, that

35 That worthy'd him, got praises of the king,

For him attempting who was self-subdu'd ;

And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,

Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues, and cowards,

40 But Ajax is their fool¹².

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks, ho ! [gart,

You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend brag-

We'll teach you——

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn :

45 Call not your stocks for me : I serve the king ;

On whose employment I was sent to you :

You shall do small respect, shew too bold malice

Against the grace and person of my master,

Stocking his messenger.

50 Corn. Fetch forth the stocks :——

¹ Mr. Steevens observes, that Zed is here probably used as a term of contempt, because it is the last letter in the English alphabet, and as its place may be supplied by S, and the Roman alphabet has it not, neither is it read in any word originally Teutonic. ² Unbolted mortar, according to Mr. Tollett, is mortar made of unsifted lime ; and therefore, to break the lumps, it is necessary to tread it by men in wooden shoes.—This unbolted villain is, therefore, this coarse rascal. ³ By these holy cords, the poet means the natural union between parents and children.—The metaphor is taken from the cords of the sanctuary ; and the fomenters of family-differences are compared to these sacrilegious rats. ⁴ The halcyon is the bird otherwise called the king-fisher.—The vulgar opinion was, that this bird, if hung up, would vary with the wind, and by that means shew from what point it blew. ⁵ The frightened countenance of a man ready to fall in a fit. ⁶ Camelot was the place where, the romances say, king Arthur kept his court in the West : so this alludes to some proverbial speech in those romances.—In Somersetshire, adds Hanmer, near Camelot, are many large moors, where are bred great quantities of geese, so that many other places are from hence supplied with quills and feathers. ⁷ i. e. pleases me not. ⁸ i. e. forces his outside or his appearance to something totally different from his natural disposition. ⁹ Silly here means only simple, or rustic. ¹⁰ i. e. foolishly. ¹¹ Dr. Johnson, in his Dictionary, says, this word means to flutter. ¹² Their fool means here, their butt, their laughing-stock.

As I have life and honour, there shall he sit 'till noon.

Regan. 'Till noon! 'till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog, 5 You should not use me so.

Regan. Sir, being his knave, I will.

[Stocks brought out.]

Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour 10 Our sister speaks of:—Come, bring away the stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so: His fault is much, and the good king his master Will check him for't: your purpos'd low cor- 15 rection

Is such, as basest and the meanest wretches, For pilferings and most common trespasses, Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill, That he, so slightly valu'd in his messenger, Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that. [worse,

Regan. My sister may receive it much more To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted, For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—

[Kent is put in the stocks.] 25

Come, my good lord; away.

[Exeunt Regan, and Cornwall.]

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,

Whose disposition, all the world well knows, [thee, 30 Will not be rubb'd, nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for

Kent. Pray, do not, sir: I have watch'd, and travell'd hard;

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels; 35 Give you good morrow!

Glo. The duke's to blame in this; 'twill be ill taken. [Exit.]

Kent. Good king, that must approve the com- mon saw!

Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st To the warm sun!¹

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,

[Looking up to the moon.]

That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter:—Nothing almost sees miracles, But misery;—I know, 'tis from Cordelia;

Fortune, good night; smile once more; turn thy wheel! [He sleeps.]

SCENE III.

A part of the Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd; And, by the happy hollow of a tree, Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place, That guard, and most unusual vigilance, Does not attend my taking. While I may 'scape, 15 I will preserve myself: and am bethought To take the basest and most poorest shape, That ever penury, in contempt of man, [filth; Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with Blanket my loins; elf all my hair in knots²;

20 And with presented nakedness out-face

The winds, and persecutions of the sky.

The country gives me proof and precedent Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices, Strike in their numb'd and mortify'd bare arms Pins, wooden pricks³, nails, sprigs of rosemary: And with this horrible object, from low farms, Poor pelting⁴ villages, sheep-cotes, and mills, Sometime with lunatic bans⁵, sometime with 25 prayers, [Tom!

Earl of Gloster's Castle.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange, that they should so depart from home,

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master! [time]

Fool. Ha, ha; look! he wears cruel⁶ garters! Horses are ty'd by the heads; dogs and bears by the neck; monkies by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man is over-lusty⁷ at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks⁸. [mistook

¹ That art now to exemplify the common proverb, that out of, &c.; that changest better for worse. Hanmer observes, that it is a proverbial saying, applied to those who are turned out of house and home to the open weather. It was perhaps first used of men dismissed from an hospital, or house of charity, such as was erected formerly in many places for travellers. Those houses had names properly enough alluded to by heaven's benediction.—The saw alluded to, is in Heywood's Dialogues on Proverbs, book ii. chap. 5.

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear ay.

Lear. They durst not do't: [murder

They could not, would not do't; 'tis worse than
To do upon respect such violent outrage¹:
Resolve me with all modest haste, which way
Thou might'st deserve, or they impose, this usage,
Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that shew'd
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post,
Stewed in his haste, half breathless, panting forth
From Goneril his mistress, salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission²,
Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon'd up their meiny³, straight took

And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine,

Display'd so saucily against your highness)
Having more man than wit about me, I drew;
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries:
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way⁴.

Fathers, that wear rags,
Do make their children blind;

But fathers, that bear bags,
Shall see their children kind.

Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.—

But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolours⁵ from thy dear daughters, as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this mother swells toward my heart!

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below!—Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not; stay here. [Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence than what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a train?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserv'd it.

Gent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring in the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty⁶ but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That, sir, which serves and seeks for gain,

And follows but for form,

Will pack, when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry: the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly:

The knave turns fool, that runs away;

The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool. Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter Lear, with Gloster.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick, they are weary?

They have travell'd hard to-night? Mere fetches;
The images of revolt and flying off!

Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord,

You know the fiery quality of the Duke;

How unremoveable and fixt he is

In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!
Fiery? what quality? Why, Gloster, Gloster,
I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall, and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them
so. [me, man?

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall;
the dear father [service:

Would with his daughter speak; commands her

Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum,
'Till it cry, Sleep to death.

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you.

[Exit.

Lear. O me, my heart, my rising heart!—but down.

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney¹ did to the eels, when she put them i' the paste alive; she rapt 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cry'd,
'Down, wantons, down:' 'Twas her brother, that, in pure kindness to his horse, butter'd his hay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, and Servants.

Lear. Good-morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your grace! [Kent is set at liberty.]

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason

I have to think so: if thou should'st not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
Sepulch'ring an adultress.—O, are you free?

[To Kent.

Some other time for that.—Beloved Regan,
Thy sister's naught; O Regan, she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here²,

[Points to his heart.

I can scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe,
Of how depraved a quality—O Regan!

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience; I have hope,
You less know how to value her desert,
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say? how is that?

Reg. I cannot think, my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation; If, sir, perchance,
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
'Tis on such ground; and to such wholesome end,
As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir, you are old;

Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine; you should be rul'd, and led
By some discretion, that discerns your state
Better than you yourself: Therefore, I pray you,
That to our sister you do make return;
Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?

Do you but mark how this becomes the house³:

'Dear daughter, I confess that I am old:

'Age is unnecessary⁴: on my knees I beg,

'That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.'

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly
Return you to my sister.

[tricks:

Lear. Never, Regan:

She hath abated me of half my train;
Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue
Most serpent-like, upon the very heart:—

All the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall
On her ungrateful top! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Fie, sir, fie!

[flames

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall⁵ and blast her pride!

Reg. O the blest gods!

[on.

So will you wish on me, when the rash mood is Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse;

Thy tender-hefted⁶ nature shall not give [thine
Thee o'er to harshness; her eyes are fierce, but
Do comfort, and not burn: 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes⁷,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' the kingdom thou hast not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose. [Trumpets within.

Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks?

Corn. What trumpet's that?

Enter Steward.

Reg. I know't, my sister's: this approves her letter,

30 That she would soon be here.—Is your lady come?

Lear. This is a slave, whose easy borrow'd pride
Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows:
Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?

35 Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou didst not know on't.—Who comes here?
O heavens,

Enter Goneril.

offended?

All's not offence, that indiscretion finds,
And dotage terms so.

50 Lear. O sides, you are too tough!

Will you yet hold?—How came my man i'
the stocks?

Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own disorders
Deserv'd much less advancement¹⁰.

55 Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so:
If, 'till the expiration of your month,

You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me;
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd?
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage¹ against the enmity o' the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,—
Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her?

Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took

To knee his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life afoot²;—Return with her?

Gon. At your choice, sir. [He mad;

Lear. Now I prythee, daughter, do not make
I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell:

We'll no more meet, no more see one another:—
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;

Or, rather, a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a bile,

A plague-sore, an embossed⁴ carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;

Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,

Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove:
Mend, when thou canst; be better, at thy leisure:

I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I, and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so, sir;

I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome: Give ear, sir, to my sister;

For those that mingle reason with your passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so—

But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken now?

Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: What, fifty followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?

Yea, or so many? sith that both charge and danger Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,

Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance

From those that she calls servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you,

We could controul them: If you will come to me,
(For now I spy a danger) I intreat you

To bring but five-and-twenty; to no more
Will I give place, or notice.

Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries;
But kept a reservation to be follow'd

With such a number: What, must I come to you
With five-and-twenty, Regan? said you so?

Reg. And speak it again, my lord; no more with me. [favour'd,

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-

When others are more wicked; not being the worst,
Stands in some rank of praise:—I'll go with thee;

[To Goneril.]

Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord;

What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many

Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?

Lear. O, reason not the need: our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:

Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's: thou art a lady;

If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,

Which scarcely keeps thee warm.—But, for true need,—

[need!]

You heavens, give me that patience, patience I
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,

As full of grief as age; wretched in both!

If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts

Against their father, fool me not so much

To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger!

O, let not women's weapons, water-drops,

Stain my man's cheeks!—No, you unnatural hags,

I will have such revenges on you both,

That all the world shall,—I will do such things,—

What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be

The terrors of the earth. You think, I'll weep;

No, I'll not weep:—

I have full cause of weeping; but this heart

Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,

Or ere I'll weep:—O fool, I shall go mad!

[Exeunt Lear, Gloster, Kent, and Fool.]

Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.

[Storm and tempest heard.]

Reg. This house is little; the old man and his people

Cannot be well bestow'd. [from rest,

Gon. 'Tis his own blame; he hath put himself
And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,
But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd.

Where is my lord of Gloster?

Re-enter Gloster.

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth:—He is re-

Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know not

Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and the bleak winds

Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about

There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O, sir, to wilful men,

S C E N E I.

A Heath.

A Storm is heard, with thunder and lightning.

Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. WHO's there, besides foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you: Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful element:
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main¹,
That things might change, or cease: tears his white hair;

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain. [couch,
This night, wherein the cub-drawn² bear would
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest
His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my note³,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
Although as yet the face of it be cover'd [wail;
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Corn-
Who have (as who have not, that their great stars Throne and set high?) servants, whose seem no less;
Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in snuffs and packings⁴ of the dukes;
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but furnishings⁵;—
But, true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd⁶ kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret fee
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To shew their open banner.—Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.

10 I am a gentleman of blood and breeding,
And from some knowledge and assurance, offer
This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not.

15 For confirmation that I am much more Than my out-wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains: If you shall see Cordelia,
(As fear not but you shall,) shew her this ring;
And she will tell you who your fellow is

I will go seek the king. [to say?

Gent. Give me your hand: Have you no more

S C E N E II.

Another Part of the Heath.

Storm still. Enter Lear, and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks!
rage! blow!

You cataracts, and hurricanoes, spout [cocks!
35 'Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers⁷ to oak-cleaving thunder-bolts,
Singemy white head! And thou all-shaking thunder,
Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world!
40 Crack nature's moulds; all germens spill at once,
That make ingrateful man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water⁸ in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters blessing; here's 45 a night pities neither wise men nor fools.

Lear. Rumble thy belly full! Spit, fire! spout, rain!

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;
50 I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription¹⁰; why then let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man:—
But yet I call you servile ministers,
55 That have with two pernicious daughters join'd
Your high-engender'd battles, 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!¹¹

¹ The main seems to signify here the main land, the continent. ² Cub-drawn means, whose dugs are drawn dry by its young. ³ My observation of your character. ⁴ Snuffs are dislikes, and packings underhand contrivances. ⁵ i. e. colours, external pretences. ⁶ i. e. divided, unsettled.

⁷ Avant-couriers, Fr. ⁸ That is, "Crack nature's mould, and spill (or destroy) all the seeds of matter that are hoarded within it." ⁹ Court holy-water is a proverbial expression, meaning fair words. ¹⁰ Subscription for obedience. ¹¹ i. e. shameful, dishonourable.

Fool. He that has a house to put's head in, has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house,

Before the head has any:

The head and he shall louse;—

So beggars marry many¹.

The man that makes his toe

What he his heart should make,

Shall of a corn cry, woe!

And turn his sleep to wake.

—For there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience,
I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace, and a cod-piece²;
that's a wise man, and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? things that love
night,

Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies
Gallow³ the very wanderers of the dark,

And make them keep their caves: Since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,

Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot

The affliction, nor the fear. [carry

Lear. Let the great gods,

That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unwhipt of justice: Hide thee, thou bloody hand;

Thou perjur'd, and thou simular man of virtue
That art incestuous: Caitiff, to pieces shake,

That, under covert and convenient seeming⁴,
Hast practis'd on man's life!—Close pent up guilts,

Rive your concealing continents⁵, and cry
These dreadful summoners⁶ grace.—I am a man,

More sinn'd against, than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed!

Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest;

Repose you there: while I to this hard house,
(More hard than is the stone whereof 'tis rais'd;

Which even but now, demanding after you,
Deny'd me to come in) return, and force

Their scant'd courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.—

Come on, my boy: How dost, my boy? Art cold?
I am cold myself.—Where is this straw, my fellow?

The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.—

Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has a little tiny wit,—

With heigh, ho, the wind and the rain,—

Must make content with his fortunes fit;

For the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy.—Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exit.

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtezan.
I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:

When priests are more in word than matter;

When brewers mar their malt with water;

When nobles are their tailors' tutors⁷;

No heretics burn'd⁸, but wenches' suitors:

Then comes the time, who lives to see't,

That going shall be us'd with feet.—

When every case in law is right;

No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;

When slanders do not live in tongues;

Nor cut-purses come not to throngs;

When usurers tell their gold i' the field;

And bawds, and whores, do churches build;

Then shall the realm of Albion

Come to great confusion.

This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.

SCENE III.

An Apartment in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Gloster, and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing: When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charg'd me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing: There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that:
I have received a letter this night;—'tis dangerous to be spoken.—I have lock'd the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed: we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him; go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threaten'd me, the king my old master must be relieved.
There is some strange thing toward, Edmund;
pray you, be careful. [Exit.

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke
Instantly know; and of that letter too:—
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses; no less than all;
The younger rises, when the old doth fall. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

A Part of the Heath, with a Hovel.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord,
enter:

¹ i. e. A beggar marries a wife and lice.

That there is no discretion below the girdle.

² Alluding perhaps to the saying of a contemporary wit,
³ Gallow, a west-country word, signifies to scare or frighten. ⁴ Convenient seeming is appearance such as may promote his purpose to destroy. ⁵ Con-continent stands for that which contains or incloses. ⁶ Summoners mean here the officers that summon offenders before a proper tribunal. ⁷ i. e. invent fashions for them. ⁸ The disease to which wenches' suitors are particularly exposed, was called in Shakspeare's time the brexning or burning.

Thy tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure. [Storm still.]

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I'd rather break mine own: Good my lord, enter. [tious storm]

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much, that this content-
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear;
But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea, Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free,

The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what beats there.—Filial ingratitude!—
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to 't?—But I will punish home!—
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shut me out!—Pour on; I will endure:—
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!—
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave you all,—

O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that,—

Kent. Good my lord, enter here. [ease;

Lear. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in:—
In, boy; go first.—[To the Fool.] You houseless poverty,—

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.—
[Fool goes in.]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel:
That thou may'st shake the superflux to them,
And shew the heavens more just.

Edg. [within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.
Help me, help me! [The Fool runs out from the hovel.]

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says, his name's poor
Tom. [the straw?]

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i'
Come forth.

Enter Edgar, disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—
Thro' the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.—
Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters?
And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives anything to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting horse over four-inch'd bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor:—Bless thy five wits!

—Tom's a-cold.—O, do de, do de, do de.—Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking!
Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes:—There could I have him now,—and there,—and there, and there again, and there.

[Storm still.]

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?—

Could'st thou save nothing? Didst thou give them

15 Fool. Nay, he reserv'd a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air

20 Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.—
Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers

25 Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican's daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on pillicock-hill;—

Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

30 Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend: Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array:—Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind;
that curl'd my hair, wore gloves in my cap¹, serv'd the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her: swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one that slept in the contriving of lust, and wak'd to do it: Wine lov'd I deeply; dice
dearly; and in woman, out-paramour'd the Turk:
45 False of heart, light of ear², bloody of hand; Hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to women: Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: Says sum,
mun, ha no nonny, dolphin my boy, boy, Sessy;
let him trot by. [Storm still.]

55 Lear. Why thou wert better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncover'd body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well: thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume:—
60 Ha! here's three of us are sophisticated!—Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.—Off, off, you lendings:—Come; unbutton here.—

[Tearing off his clothes.]

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, be contented; this is a naughty night to swim in.—Now a little fire in a wild field, were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, and all the rest of his body cold.—Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks 'till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin¹, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Saint Withold footed thrice the world²;
He met the night-mare, and her nine fold;

Bid her alight,

And her troth plight,

And, Aroynt thee, witch, aroynt thee³!

Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter Gloster, with a torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water-newt; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets; swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipt from tything to tything⁴, and stock'd, punish'd, and imprison'd; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

But mice, and rats, and such small deer⁵,

Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware my follower:—Peace, Smolkin; peace, thou fiend!

Glo. What, hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman; Mudo he's call'd, and Mahu. [vile, 40]

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer To obey in all your daughters' hard commands: 45 Though their injunctions be to bar my doors, And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you; Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out, And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher:— 50 What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. My good lord, take his offer;

Go into the house.

Lear. I'll take a word with this same learned

Theban:—

What is your study? [min.]

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill ver-

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord, His wits begin to unsettle.

Glo. Canst thou blame him? [Storm still.]

His daughters seek his death:—Ah, that good

Kent!—

He said it would be thus:—Poor banish'd man!—

Thou say'st, the king grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend,

15 I am almost mad myself; I had a son, Now out-law'd from my blood; he sought my life But lately, very late; I lov'd him, friend,—

No father his son dearer: true to tell thee, [this!]

The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's 20 I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. O, cry you mercy, sir:—

Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold. [warm.]

Glo. In, fellow, there, to the hovel: keep thee

25 Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;

I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, sooth him; let him take 30 the fellow.

Glo. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glo. No words, no words; hush.

35 Edg. Child⁶ Rowland to the dark tower came,

His word was still,—Fie, foh, and fum,

I smell the blood of a British man. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Gloster's Castle.

Enter Cornwall, and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart this house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censur'd, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears 45 me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a repro- 50 vable badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter which he spoke

They were of various kinds for various disorders. ⁴ A tything is a division of a place, a district; the same in the country, as a ward in the city. In the Saxon times, every hundred was divided into tythings. ⁵ Deer in old language is a general word for wild animals. ⁶ In the old times of chivalry, the noble youth who were candidates for knighthood, during the season of their probation, were called Infans, Varlets, Damoysels, Bacheliers; the most noble of the youth particularly, Infans. Here a story is told, in some old ballad, of the famous hero and giant-killer Roland, before he was knighted, who is, therefore, called Infans; which the ballad-maker translated, Child Roland.

of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the dutchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting¹ the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.—I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love [Exeunt. 15]

SCENE VI.

A Chamber in a Farm House.

Enter Gloster, Lear, Kent, Fool, and Edgar.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully: I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you. [Exit. 20]

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience:—The gods reward your kindness!

Edg. Frateretto calls me; and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to a son: for he's a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him. 30

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come hissing in upon them:—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath. 40

Lear. It shall be done, I will arraign them straight:—

Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer;— 45

[To Edgar.]

Thou, sapient sir, sit here. [To the Fool.]—Now, you she-foxes!—

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares!—

Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam? 50

“Come o'er the bourn², Bessy, to me:—”

Fool. “Her boat hath a leak,

“And she must not speak

“Why she dares not come over to thee.”

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herrings³. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee. 55

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd:

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first:—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou robed man of justice, take thy place:—

[To Edgar.]

And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the Fool.]

Bench by his side:—You are of the commission

[To Kent.]

Sit you too.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

“Sleepest, or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

“Thy sheep be in the corn;

“And for one blast of thy minikin⁴ mouth,

“Thy sheep shall take no harm.”

Purre! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kick'd the poor king her father. 20

Fool. Come hither, mistress; Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it. [stool⁵.]

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-

Lear. And here's another, whose warpt looks proclaim

What store her heart is made on.—Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape? 30

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now, That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. My tears begin to take his part so much, They'll mar my counterfeiting. [Aside. 35]

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them:—Avaunt, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black⁶ or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

Mastiff, grey-hound, mungril grim,

Hound, or spaniel, brache⁷, or lym⁸;

Or bobtail tike⁹, or trundle-tail;

Tom will make him weep and wail:

For, with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, de de. Sessy, come, march to wakes and fairs, [dry. 50]

And market towns:—Poor Tom, thy horn is Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan, see what breeds about her heart: Is there any cause in nature, that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garment: you will say, they are Persian attire; but let them be chang'd. [To Edgar. 55]

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest a while. [curtains:]

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the So, so, so: We'll go to supper i'the morning: So, so, so.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Glo. Come, come, away.

[Exeunt, bearing off the King. Manet Edgar.]

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes, We scarcely think our miseries our foes. Who alone suffers, suffers most i' the mind; Leaving free things¹, and happy shows behind: But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip, When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship. How light and portable my pain seems now, When that, which makes me bend, makes the king bow;

SCENE VII.

Gloster's Castle.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Edmund, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; shew him this letter:—the army of France is landed: Seek out the traitor Gloster.

[Exeunt servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.—Edmund, keep you our sister company; the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, when you are going, to a most festinate preparation; we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift, and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister;—farewell, my lord of Gloster.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the king?

Stew. My lord of Gloster hath convey'd him hence:

Some five or six and thirty of his knights,

Hot questrists² after him, met him at gate;

Who, with some other of the lord's dependents, Are gone with him towards Dover; where they boast

To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

[Exeunt Goneril, and Edmund.]

Corn. Edmund, farewell.—Go, seek the traitor Gloster,

Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us:—

I though well we may not pass upon his life

Without the form of justice; yet our power

Shall do a courtesy to our wrath³, which men

May blame, but not controul. Who's there?

The traitor?

Enter Gloster, brought in by servants.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky⁴ arms.

Glo. What mean your graces?—Good my friends, consider

You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say. [They bind him.]

Reg. Hard, hard:—O filthy traitor!

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none.

Corn. To this chair bind him:—Villain, thou shalt find— [Regan plucks his beard.]

Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glo. Naughty lady,

These hairs which thou dost ravish from my chin, Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your host; With robbers' hands, my hospitable favours⁵

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France? [truth.]

Reg. Be simple-answer'd⁶, for we know the

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatic Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down, Which came from one that's of a neutral heart, And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Corn. See it shalt thou never:—Fellows, hold the chair:——

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

Glo. He, that will think to live 'till he be old, Give me some help:—O cruel! O ye gods!

Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Corn. If you see vengeance,—

Serv. Hold your hand, my lord:

I have serv'd you ever since I was a child; But better service have I never done you, Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog?

Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin, I'd shake it on this quarrel: What do you mean?

Corn. My villain ³! [Draws, and runs at him.

Serv. Nay, then come on, and take the chance of anger. [Fight; Cornwall is wounded.

Reg. [To another servant.] Give me thy sword.— A peasant stand up thus!

Serv. O, I am slain!—My lord, yet you have one eye left

To see some mischief on him:—O! [Dies.

Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it:—Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now? [Treads the other out.

Glo. All dark and comfortless.—Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature, To quit this horrible act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!

Thou call'st on him that hates thee: it was he That made the overture of thy treasons to us; Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my follies!

Then Edgar was abus'd.—

Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!

Reg. Go, thrust him out at gates, and let him smell His way to Dover.—How is't, my lord? How look you?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt:—Follow me, lady.—

Turn out that eyeless villain;—throw this slave Upon the dunghill—Regan, I bleed apace:

Untimely comes this hurt: Give me your arm.

A C T IV.

S C E N E I.

An open Country.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. YET better thus, and known to be contemptu'd,

Than still contain'd and flatter'd. To be worst, The lowest, and most dejected thing of fortune, Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear:

The lamentable change is from the best;

The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then, Thou unsubstantial air, that I embrace!

The wretch, that thou hast blown unto the worst, Owes nothing to thy blasts.—But who comes here?

Enter Gloster, led by an old man.

My father, poorly led?—World, world, O world! But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee, Life would not yield to age ⁴.

¹ i. e. the running of the dogs upon me.

⁴ The sense of this obscure passage is, O world! so much are human minds captivated with thy pleasures, that were it not for those successive miseries, each worse than the other, which overload the scenes of life, we should never be willing to submit to death, though the infirmities of old age would teach us to choose it as a proper asylum. Besides, by uninterrupted prosperity, which leaves the mind at ease, the body would generally preserve such a state of vigour as to bear up long against the decays of time. These are the two reasons, it is supposed, why he said, "Life would not yield to age." And how much the pleasures of the body pervert the mind's judgement, and the perturbations of the mind disorder the body's frame, is known to all.

Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone: Thy comforts can do me no good at all; Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir, you cannot see your way.

Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes; I stumbled when I saw: Fall oft 'tis seen, Our mean¹ secures us; and our meer defects Prove our commodities.—O, dear son Edgar, The food of thy abused father's wrath! Might I but live to see thee in my touch, I'd say, I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now? Who's there?

Edg. [Aside.] O Gods! Who is't can say, I am at the worst?

I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: The worst is not,

So long as we can say, This is the worst.

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

I the last night's storm I such a fellow saw; Which made me think a man a worm: My son Came then into my mind; and yet my mind Was scarce then friends with him: I have heard more since:

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods; They kill us for their sport.

Edg. How should this be?—

Bad is the trade, that must play the fool to sorrow, Ang'ring itself and others. [Aside.]—Bless thee, master!

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord. [sake,

Glo. Then, pr'ythee, get thee gone: If, for my Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain, I the way to Dover, do it for ancient love; And bring some covering for this naked soul, Whom I'll intreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he is mad.

Glo. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind:

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure; Above the rest, be gone. [have,

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parrel' that I Come on 't what will. [Exit.

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.—I cannot daub² it further. [Aside.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.

—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path.—Poor Tom hath been scar'd out of his good wits: Bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once;—of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbididance, prince of dumbness; Malu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women³. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues

Have humbled to all strokes; that I am wretched, Makes thee the happier:—Heavens, deal so still!

Let the superfluous⁴ and lust-dieted man, That slaves your ordinance⁵, that will not see

Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly; So distribution should undo excess,

And each man have enough.—Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully on the confined deep:

Bring me but to the very brim of it,

And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear,

With something rich about me: from that place I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm;

Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.

¹ i. e. moderate, mediocre condition. ² i. e. disguise. ³ Shakspeare has made Edgar, in his feigned distraction, frequently allude to a vile imposture of some English jesuits, at that time much the subject of conversation; the history of it having been just then composed with great art and vigour of style and composition by Dr. S. Harsenet, afterwards archbishop of York, by order of the privy-council, in a work intitled, A Declaration of egregious Popish Impostures to withdraw her Majesty's Subjects from their Allegiance, &c. practised by Edmunds, alias Weston, a Jesuit, and divers Romish priests his wicked Associates: printed 1603.—The imposture was in substance this: While the Spaniards were preparing their armado against England, the jesuits were here busy at work to promote it, by making converts: one method they employed was to dispossess pretended demoniacs; by which artifice they made several hundred converts amongst the common people. The principal scene of this farce was laid in the family of one Mr. Edmund Peckham, a Roman-catholic, where Marwood, a servant of Anthony Babington's (who was afterwards executed for treason), Trayford, an attendant upon Mr. Peckham, and Sarah and Friswood Williams, and Anne Smith, three chamber-maids in that family, came into the priest's hands for cure. But the discipline of the patients was so long and severe, and the priests so elate and careless with their success, that the plot was discovered on the confession of the parties concerned, and the contrivers of it deservedly punished.—The five devils here mentioned, are the names of five of those who were made to act in this farce upon the chamber-maids and waiting-women; and they were generally so ridiculously nick-named, that Harsenet has one chapter on the strange names of their devils; lest, says he, meeting them otherwise by chance, you mistake them for the names of tapsters or jugglers. ⁴ Superfluous is here used for one living in abundance. ⁵ To slave an ordinance, is to treat it as a slave, to make it subject to us, instead of acting in obedience to it.

The Duke of Albany's Palace.Enter Goneril, and Edmund.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild husband¹ [master?] Not met us on the way:—Now, where's your

Enter Steward.

Stew. Madam; within; but never man so chang'd:

I told him of the army that was landed;
He smil'd at it: I told him you were coming;
His answer was, *The worse*² of Gloster's treachery,
And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot;
And told me, I had turn'd the wrong side out:—
What most he should dislike, seems pleasant to What like, offensive. [him;

Gon. Then shall you go no further. [To Edmund.
It is the cowish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake; he'll not feel wrongs,
Which tie him to an answer: Our wishes on the way, [ther;

May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my bro-
Hasten his musters, and conduct his powers;
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff
Into my husband's hands: This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to
If you dare venture in your own behalf, [hear,
A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech;
[Giving a javour.

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air:—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloster! [Exit Edmund.
O, the difference of man, and man!
To thee a woman's services are due;
My fool usurps my body.

Stew. Madam, here comes my lord.

Enter Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle³.

Alb. O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Blows in your face.—I fear your disposition:
That nature, which contemns its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain⁴ in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her maternal sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use⁵.

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:
Filt'ring savour but themselves. What have you done?
Tygers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man,

Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you mad-
Could my good brother suffer you to do it? [ded.
A man, a prince, by him so benefited?
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
'Twill come, humanity must perforce prey on
Itself, like monsters of the deep⁶.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!

10 That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st,
Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief: Where's thy 15 drum?

France spreads his banners in our noiseless land;
With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats;
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still and cry'st,
Alack! why does he so?

20 Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid as in woman⁷.

Gon. O vain fool! [shame,

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing⁸, for 25 Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones:—Howe'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

30 Gon. Marry, your manhood now!

Enter Messenger.

Alb. What news? [dead;

Mes. O, my good lord, the duke of Cornwall's
Slain by his servant, going to put out
35 The other eye of Gloster.

Alb. Gloster's eyes? [morse,

Mes. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with re-
Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, thereat enrag'd,
40 Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead;
But not without that harmful stroke, which since Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shews you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
45 So speedily can venge!—But, O poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye?

Mes. Both, both, my lord.—

This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister.

50 Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life: Another way,
The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer.
[Exit.

¹ It must be remembered that Albany, the husband of Goneril, disliked, in the end of the first act, the scheme of oppression and ingratitude. ² This expression is a proverbial one. ³ Certain, for within the bounds that nature prescribes. ⁴ Alluding to the use that witches and enchanters are said to make of wither'd branches in their charms: A fine insinuation in the speaker, that she was ready for the most unnatural mischief; and a preparative of the poet to her plotting with the bastard against her husband's life. ⁵ Fishes are the only animals that are known to prey upon their own species.

⁶ i. e. Diabolic qualities appear not so horrid in the devil to whom they belong, as in woman who unnaturally assumes them. ⁷ By self-cover'd, our author probably means, Thou that hast disguised nature by wickedness; thou that hast hid the woman under the fiend.

Alb. Where was his son; when they did take his eyes?

Mes. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mes. No, my good lord; I met him back again. 5

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mes. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him; [ment

And quit the house on purpose, that their punishment might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloster, I live

To thank thee for the love thou shew'dst the king, And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither, friend; Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exeunt.

S C E N E III.

The French Camp, near Dover.

Enter Kent, and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back, Know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, Which since his coming forth is thought of; which Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger, That his personal return was most requir'd and necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen To any demonstration of grief? [my presence; 30

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in And now and then an ample tear trill'd down Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen Over her passion; who, most rebel-like, Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove Who should express her goodliest. You have seen Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears Were like a better day¹. Those happy smiles, That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know What guestswere in her eyes: which parted thence, As pearls from diamonds dropt. In brief, sorrow Would be a rarity most belov'd, if all Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?

Gent. Yes; once, or twice, she heav'd the name of 'father'

Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart; Cry'd, 'Sisters! sisters!—Shame of ladies! sisters! 50

'Kent! father! sisters! What! i' the storm? i' the night?

'Let pity not be believed²!—There she shook The holy water from her heavenly eyes, [started And clamour moisten'd³ her: then away she To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars, The stars above us, govern our conditions;

Else one self mate and mate⁴ could not beget Such different issues. You spoke not with her Gent. No. [since?

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No, since. [town;

Kent. Well, sir; the poor distressed Lear is i' the Who sometimes, in his better tune, remembers What we are come about, and by no means Will yield to see his daughter.

10 Gent. Why, good sir? [own unkindness,

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things sting His mind so venomously, that burning shame⁵ Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

20 Gent. 'Tis so; they are afoot. [Lear,

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master And leave you to attend him: some dear cause Will in concealment wrap me up awhile; When I am known aright, you shall not grieve Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. [Exeunt.

S C E N E IV.

A Tent in the Camp at Dover.

Enter Cordelia, Physician, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he; why, he was met even now As mad as the vex'd sea; singing aloud; Crown'd with rank fumiter, and furrow weeds, 35 With harlocks, hemlocks, nettles, cuckoo-flowers, Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth; Search every acre in the high-grown field, And bring him to our eye.—What can man's wisdom do,

In the restoring his bereaved sense? He, that helps him, take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam:

Our foster nurse of nature is repose, The which he lacks; that to provoke in him, 45 Are many simples operative, whose power Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All blest secrets,

All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth, Spring with my tears! be aidant, and remediate, In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek for him; Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life That wants the means to lead it⁶.

Enter a Messenger.

55 Mes. News, madam; The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands In expectation of them.—O dear father,

¹ A better day is the best day, and the best day is a day most favourable to the productions of the earth.—Such are the days in which there is a due mixture of rain and sunshine. ² i. e. Let not such a thing as pity be supposed to exist!

⁴ The same husband and the same wife.

⁵ The metaphor is here preserved with great knowledge of nature; the venom of poisonous animals being a high caustic salt, that has all the effect of fire upon the part. ⁶ i. e. the reason which should guide it.

It is thy business that I go about;
Therefore great France
My mourning, and important¹ tears, hath pitied.
No blown ambition² doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right:
Soon may I hear, and see him! [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Regan's Palace.

Enter Regan, and Steward.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?
Stew. Ay, madam.
Reg. Himself in person there?
Stew. Madam, with much ado:
Your sister is the better soldier. [at home?
Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lady
Stew. No, madam. [him?
Reg. What might import my sister's letter to Stew. I know not, lady. [ter.
Reg. 'Faith, he is posted hence on serious mat-
It was great ignorance, Gloster's eyes being out,
To let him live; where he arrives, he moves
All hearts against us: Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life³; moreover, to descry
The strength o' the enemy.
Stew. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter. [us;
Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with
The ways are dangerous.
Stew. I may not, madam;
My lady charg'd my duty in this business.
Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you
Transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Something—I know not what—I'll love thee much,
Let me unseal the letter.
Stew. Madam, I had rather—— [band;
Reg. I know your lady does not love her hus-
I am sure of that: and, at her late being here,
She gave strange œiliads⁴, and most speaking looks
To noble Edmund: I know, you are of her bosom.
Stew. I, madam? [it:
Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I know
Therefore, I do advise you, take this note⁵:
My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd;
And more convenient is he for my hand,
Than for your lady's:—You may gather more⁶.
If you do find him, pray you, give him this;
And when your mistress hears thus much from you,
I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her.
So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.
Stew. 'Would I could meet him, madam! I would shew

What party I do follow.
Reg. Fare thee well. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

The Country near Dover.

Enter Gloster, and Edgar as a peasant.

Glo. When shall we come to the top of that same hill? [labour.
Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how we
Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.
Edg. Horrible steep:
Hark, do you hear the sea?
Glo. No, truly. [fect
Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imper-
By your eyes' anguish.
Glo. So may it be, indeed:
Methinks, thy voice is alter'd; and thou speak'st
In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.
Edg. You are much deceiv'd; in nothing am
I chang'd,
But in my garments.
Glo. Methinks, you are better spoken.
Edg. Come on, sir: here's the place:—stand still.—How fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low! [air,
The crows, and choughs, that wing the midway
Shew scarce so gross as beetles: Half way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire⁷; dreadful trade!
Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head:
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice; and yon' tall anchoring bark,
Diminish'd to her cock⁸; her cock, a buoy,
Almost too small for sight: The murmuring surge,
That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high:—I'll look no more;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple⁹ down headlong.
Glo. Set me where you stand. [a foot
Edg. Give me your hand: You are now within
Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright¹⁰.
Glo. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, is another purse; in it, a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking: Fairies, and gods,
Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off;
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.
Edg. Now fare ye well, good sir. [Seems to go.
Glo. With all my heart.
Edg. Why do I trifle thus with his despair?—
'Tis done to cure it.
Glo. O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce; and, in your sights,
Shake patiently my great affliction off;
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,
My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should

¹ Important for importunate. ² i. e. no inflated, no swelling pride. ³ i. e. his life made dark as night by the extinction of his eyes. ⁴ Œillade, Fr. a cast, or significant glance of the eye. ⁵ Note means in this place not a letter, but a remark. ⁶ i. e. You may infer more than I have directly told you. ⁷ "Samphire grows in great plenty on most of the sea-cliffs in this country: it is terrible to see how people gather it, hanging by a rope several fathom from the top of the impending rocks as it were in the air." Smith's History of Waterford. ⁸ i. e. her cock-boat. ⁹ To topple is to tumble. ¹⁰ Upright has the same sense as the Latin supinus.

Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!—
Now, fellow, fare thee well.

[He leaps, and falls along.

Edg. Gone, sir? far well.
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself
Yields to the theft: Had he been where he thought,
By this, had thought been past.—Alive, or dead?
Ho, you, sir! friend!—Hear you, sir?—speak!
Thus might he pass¹, indeed:—Yet he revives.
What are you, sir?

Glo. Away, and let me die. [feathers, air,

Edg. Hadst thou been aught but Gossomer²,
So many fathom down precipitating, [breathe;
Thou hadst shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost
Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st; art sound.

Ten masts³ at each make not the altitude,
Which thou hast perpendicularly fallen;
Thy life's a miracle; Speak yet again.

Glo. But have I fallen, or no? [bourn⁴:

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky
Look up a-height;—the shrill-gorg'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard; do but look up,

Glo. Alack, I have no eyes.—
Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,
To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will,

Edg. Give me your arm; [stand.
Up:—So:—How is't? Feel you your legs? You

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar.

Edg. As I stood here below, methought, his eyes
Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,
Horns welk'd, and wav'd like the enridged sea;
It was some fiend: Therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest⁵ gods, who make them
honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear
Affliction, 'till it do cry out itself,
Enough, enough, and die. That thing you speak of,
I took it for a man, often 'twould say,

The fiend, the fiend: he led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.—But who comes here?

Enter Lear, fantast cally drest up with flowers,

5 The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear, No, they cannot touch me for coining;
I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

10 Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.—There's your press money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper⁶: draw me a clothier's yard.—
Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace;—this piece of toasted cheese will do't.—There's my gauntlet;
15 I'll prove it on a giant.—Bring up the brown bills.—O, well flown, bird!—i' the clout, i' the clout: hewgh!—Give the word⁷,

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

20 Glo. I know that voice.

Lear, Ha! Goneril!—with a white beard!—
They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me, I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say ay, and no, to every thing I said!—

25 Ay and no too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found them, there I smelt them out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie; I am not ague-proof. [ber:

Glo. The trick⁸ of that voice I do well remem-
Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:

35 When I do stare, see, how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life: What was the cause?—
Adultery.—

Thou shalt not die: Die for adultery! No:
The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

40 Let copulation thrive, for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury¹⁰, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.—

45 Behold yon' simpering dame,
Whose face between her forks¹¹ presageth snow;
That minces virtue, and does shake the head

¹ i. e. when life is willing to be destroyed.

² Thus he might die in reality.—We still use the word passing-bell. ³ Gossomore, the white and cobweb-like exhalations that fly about in hot sunny weather.—Skinner says, it signifies the down of the sow-thistle, which is driven to and fro by the wind.

⁴ In Mr. Rowe's edition it is, Ten masts at least. ⁵ Dr. Johnson says, "Bourn seems here to signify a hill. Its common signification is a brook.—Milton, in Comus, uses bosky bourn, in the same sense perhaps with Shakspeare: But in both authors it may mean only a boundary. ⁶ i. e. the purest, the most free from evil.

¹¹ That is, according to Dr. Warburton, her hand held before her face in sign of modesty, with the fingers spread out, forky.—Dr. Johnson believes, that the forks were two prominences of the ruff rising on each side of the face.

To hear of pleasure's name;
 The fitchew¹, nor the soyled horse², goes to't
 With a more riotous appetite.
 Down from the waist they are centaurs,
 Though women all above:
 But to the girdle do the gods inherit, [ness,
 Beneath is all the fiends'; there's hell, there's dark-
 There is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—Fie, fie, fie! pah! pah!
 Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary,
 To sweeten my imagination! there's money for
Glo. O, let me kiss that hand! [thee.
Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.
Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! this great world
 Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know me?
Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge;
 mark but the penning of it.
Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.
Edg. I would not take this from report;—it is,
 And my heart breaks at it.
Lear. Read.
Glo. What, with the case³ of eyes?
Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light:
 Yet you see how this world goes.
Glo. I see it feelingly.
Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yon' justice rails upon yon' simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: Change places; and handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?
Glo. Ay, sir.
Lear. And the creature run from the cur?
 There thou might'st behold the great image of authority: a dog's obey'd in office.—
 Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand:
 Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;
 Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind
 For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozen⁴.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
 Robes, and furr'd gowns, hide all. Plate sin with gold,
 And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks:
 5 Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.
 None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able⁵ 'em;
 Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
 To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;
 And, like a scurvy politician, seem [now, now:
 10 To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now,
 Pull off my boots;—harder, harder; so.
Edg. O, matter and impertinency mixt;
 Reason in madness!
Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.
 15 I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloster:
 Thou must be patient; we came crying hither.
 Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air,
 We wawle, and cry:—I will preach to thee; mark
Glo. Alack, alack the day! [me.
Lear. When we are born, we cry, that we are come [block⁶?—
 To this great stage of fools;—This a good
 It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe
 A troop of horse with felt: I'll put it in proof;
 25 And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law,
 Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.
Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.
Gent. O, here he is; lay hand upon him.—Sir,
 Your most dear daughter—
 30 Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am even
 The natural fool of fortune.—Use me well;
 You shall have ransom. Let me have a surgeon,
 I am cut to the brains.
Gent. You shall have any thing.
Lear. No seconds? All myself?
 Why, this would make a man, a man of salt⁷,
 To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
 Ay, and laying autumn's dust.—
Gent. Good sir,—
 40 Lear. I will die bravely, like a bridegroom; what?
 I will be jovial; come, come, I am a king,
 My masters, know you that?
Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.
Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, come, an you get it,
 45 You shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa. [Exit.

¹ A polecat. ² Soyled horse is a term used for a horse that has been fed with hay and corn in the stable during the winter, and is turned out in the spring to take the first flush of grass, or has it cut and carried in to him. This at once cleanses the animal, and fills him with blood. ³ The case of eyes is the socket of either eye. ⁴ This is an old phrase, signifying to qualify, or uphold them.

⁵ Dr. Johnson proposes to read, a good flock.—"Flocks (he adds) are wool-moulded together. It is very common for madmen to catch an accidental hint, and strain it to the purpose predominant in their minds. Lear picks up a flock, and immediately thinks to surprize his enemies by a troop of horse shod with flocks or felt. Yet block may stand, if we suppose that the sight of a block put him in mind of mounting his horse."—Mr. Steevens thinks Dr. Johnson's explanation is very ingenious; but believes there is no occasion to adopt it, as the speech itself, or at least the action that should accompany it, will furnish all the connection which he has sought for from an extraneous circumstance. Upon the king's saying, I will preach to thee, the poet seems to have meant him to pull off his hat, and keep turning it and feeling it, in the attitude of one of the preachers of those times (whom Mr. Steevens has seen so represented in ancient prints), till the idea of felt, which the good hat or block was made of, raises the stratagem in his brain of shoeing a troop of horse with a substance soft as that which he held and moulded between his hands. This makes him start from his preachment.—Block anciently signified the head-part of the hat, or the thing on which a hat is formed, and sometimes the hat itself. ⁶ Mr. Malone believes a man of salt is a man made up of tears.

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch;
Past speaking of in a king!—Thou hast one
daughter,

Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: What's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears
Which can distinguish sound. [that,

Edg. But, by your favour,
How near's the other army?

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main descry,
Stands on the hourly thought¹.

Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all. [here,

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent.

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;

Let not my worse spirit tempt me again
To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glo. Now, good sir, what are you? [blows;

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's²
Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,
Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,
I'll lead you to some bidding.

Glo. Hearty thanks:

The bounty and the benizon of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh
To raise my fortunes.—Thou old unhappy traitor,
Briefly thyself remember³:—The sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to it. [Edgar opposes.

Stew. Wherefore, bold peasant,
Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence;
Lest that the infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Chill not let go, zir, without vurther' casion.

Stew. Let go, slave, or thou dy'st.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait⁴, and let poor volk pass. And ch'ud ha' been zwagger'd out of my life, 'twould not ha' been zo long as 'tis by a vortnight. Nay, come not near the old man; keep out, che vor' ye⁵, or ise try whether your costard⁶ or my bat⁷ be the harder: Ch'll be plain with you.

Stew. Out, dunghill!

Edg. Ch'll pick your teeth, zir: Come; no matter for your foyns⁸. [Edgar knocks him down.]

Stew. Slave, thou hast slain me:—Villain, take my purse;

If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body:

And give the letters, which thou find'st about me,

To Edmund earl of Gloster; seek him out

Upon the English party:—O, untimely death, death!— [Dies.

Edg. I know thee well: A serviceable villain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress,

As badness would desire.

Glo. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.— [of,

Let's see his pockets: these letters, that he speaks

May be my friends.—He's dead; I am only sorry

He had no other death's-man.—Let us see:—

O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!—

A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;

And the exchange, my brother!—Here, in the sands,

I hee I'll rake up⁹, the most unsanctified

Of murderous lechers: and, in the mature time,

With this ungracious paper strike the sight

Of the death-practis'd¹⁰ duke: For him 'tis well,

That of thy death and business I can tell.

[Exit Edgar, removing the body.

Glo. The king is mad: How stiff is my vile
sense,

That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling¹¹

Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract:

So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs;

And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose

The knowledge of themselves.

Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Give me your hand:

Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum,

Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

SCENE VII.

A Tent in the French Camp.

Enter Cordelia, Kent, and Physician.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work,

¹ The main body is expected to be descry'd every hour. ² i. e. sorrows past and present. ³ i. e. quickly recollect the past offences of thy life, and recommend thyself to heaven. ⁴ Gang your gate is a common expression in the North. ⁵ i. e. I warn you. ⁶ Edgar counterfeits the western dialect. ⁷ i. e. head. ⁸ i. e. club. ⁹ To foyn is to make what we call a thrust in fencing. ¹⁰ i. e. I'll cover.—In Staffordshire, to rake the fire, is to cover it with fuel for the night. ¹¹ Ingenious feeling signifies a feeling from an understanding not disturbed or disordered, but which, representing things as they are, makes the sense of pain the more exquisite.

To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me¹.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'erpay'd.
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipt, but so.

Cor. Be better suited²:
These weeds are memories³ of those worser hours;
I pr'ythee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
Yet to be known, shortens my made intent⁴:
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be it so, my good lord.—
How does the king? [To the Physician.]

Phys. Madam, sleeps still.
Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untun'd and jarring senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed⁵ father!

Phys. So please your majesty,
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed

I' the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?
Lear is brought in in a chair.

Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep,
We put fresh garments on him. [him;

I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well. [sic there!]

Phys. Please you, draw near.—Louder the mu-

Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess! [flakes

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white
Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring winds?

To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke

Of quick, cross lightning? to watch (poor perdu!)
With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,

Though he had bit me, should have stood that night

Against my fire; And wast thou fain, poor father,
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,

In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once

Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to him.

Phys. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty? [grave:—

Lear. You do me wrong, to take me out o' the

Lear. You are a spirit, I know: When did you

Cor. Still, still, far wide!

Phys. He's scarce awake; let him alone awhile,

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I?—

Fair day-light?—

I am mightily abus'd⁷.—I should even die with pity,

To see another thus.—I know not what to say.—

I will not swear, these are my hands;—let's see;

I feel this pin prick. 'Would I were assur'd

Of my condition!

Cor. O, look upon me, sir,

And hold your hands in benediction o'er me:—

No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray do not mock me;

I am a very foolish fond old man,

Fourscore and upward;

Not an hour more, nor less; and, to deal plainly,

I fear, I am not in my perfect mind.

Methinks, I should know you, and know this man;

Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant,

What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not

Where I did lodge last night: Do not laugh at me;

For, as I am a man, I think this lady

To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am! [weep not:

Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, 'faith, I pray,

If you have poison for me, I will drink it.

I know, you do not love me; for your sisters

Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:

You have some cause, they have not,

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me. [rage,

Phys. Be comforted, good madam: the great

You see, is cur'd in him: and yet it is danger

To make him even o'er the time he has lost⁸,

Desire him to go in; trouble him no more,

'Till further settling.

Cor. Will't please your highness walk?

Lear. You must bear with me:

Pray you now, forget and forgive; I am old and foolish.

[Exeunt Lear, Cordelia, Physician, and Attendants,

Gent. Holds it true, sir,

That the duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As it is said, the bastard son of Gloster,

Gent. They say, Edgar,

His banish'd son, is with the earl of Kent

In Germany.

So we say in common language, to make a design, and to make a resolution. ⁵ i. e. changed to a child by his years and wrongs. ⁶ Restoration is recovery personified. ⁷ The allusion, Dr. Warburton says, is to the forlorn-hope in an army, which are put upon desperate adventures, and called, in French, enfants perdus; she therefore calls her father, poor perdu. ⁸ I am strangely imposed on by appearances; I am in a strange mist of uncertainty. ⁹ i. e. to reconcile it to his apprehension.

A C T V.

S C E N E I.

The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.
Enter, with drums and colours, Edmund, Regan,
Gentlemen, and Soldiers.

Edm. K NOW of the duke, if his last purpose hold;

Or whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course: He's full of alteration,
And self-reproving:—bring his constant pleasure¹.

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarry'd.

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you:
Tell me,—but truly,—but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love. [way

Reg. But have you never found my brother's
To the fore-fended² place?

Edm. That thought abuses you. [junct

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been con-
And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her: Dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not:—

She, and the duke her husband,—

Enter Albany, Goneril, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that sister
Should loosen him and me. [Aside.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be met.—

³ Sir, this I hear, The king is come to his daugh-
With others, whom the rigour of our state [ter,

Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant: for this business,

It toucheth us as France invades our land,
Not bolds the king⁴; with others, whom, I fear,

Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy:
For these domestic and particular broils

Are not to question here.

Alb. Let us then determine

With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon. No. [us.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with

Gon. [Aside.] O, ho, I know the riddle: I will go.

As they are going out, enter Edgar disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor,

Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak.

[Exeunt Edm. Reg. Gon. and Attendants.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound

For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,

I can produce a champion, that will prove

What is avouched there: If you miscarry,

Your business of the world hath so an end,

And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay 'till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,

And I'll appear again. [Exit.

Alb. Why, fare thee well; I will o'erlook thy paper.

Re-enter Edmund.

Edm. The enemy's in view, draw up your powers.

Here is the guess of their true strength and forces
By diligent discovery; but your haste

Is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my
love;

Each jealous of the other, as the sting

Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?

Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,

If both remain alive: To take the widow,

Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril;

And hardly shall I carry out my side⁵,

Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use

¹ His settled resolution. ² fore-fended means prohibited, forbidden. ³ The meaning of this speech is, The king and others whom we have opposed, are come to Cordelia. I could never be valiant but in a just quarrel. We must distinguish; it is just in one sense and unjust in another. As France invades our land, I am concerned to repel him; but as he holds, entertains, and supports the king, and others whom I fear many just and heavy causes make, or compel, as it were, to oppose us, I esteem it unjust to engage against them. ⁴ This business (says Albany) touches us, as France invades our land, not as it bolds the king, &c. i. e. emboldens him to assert his former title. ⁵ i. e. bring my purpose to a successful issue, to completion.—Side seems here to have the sense of the French word partie, in prendre partie, to take his resolution.

His countenance for the battle; which being done,
Let her, who would be rid of him, devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,—
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon: for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate¹. [Exit.]

S C E N E II.

A Field between the two Camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with drum and colours, Lear, Cordelia, and Soldiers over the stage; and exeunt.

Enter Edgar, and Gloster.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive:
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

Glo. Grace go with you, sir! [Exit Edgar.]

[Alarum, and retreat within.]

Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Away, old man, give me thy hand, away;
King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en:
Give me thy hand, come on.

Glo. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.

Edg. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither;
Ripeness² is all: Come on.

Glo. And that's true too.

[Exeunt.]

S C E N E III.

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours, Edmund; Lear, and Cordelia, as prisoners; Soldiers, Captain. [guard;

Edm. Some officers take them away: good
Until their greater pleasures first be known,
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incurr'd the worst.
For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown.—
Shall we not see these daughters, and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:

We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
And ask of thee forgiveness: So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
Talk of courtnews; and we'll talk with them too,— Wholoses, and who wins; who's in, who's out;—
And take upon us the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies: And we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects³ of great ones,
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?

5 He, that parts us, shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence, like foxes⁴. Wipe thine eyes;
The gougiers⁵ shall devour them, flesh, and fell⁶,
Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see them starve first.

10 Come. [Exeunt Lear, and Cordelia, guarded.]

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.

Take thou this note; go, follow them to prison:
One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes: Know thou this,—that men
Are as the time is: to be tender-minded [ment
Does not become a sword:—Thy great employ-
Will not bear question⁷; either say, thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other means.

20 Capt. I'll do't, my lord.

Edm. About it; and write happy, when thou hast done.

Mark,—I say, instantly; and carry it so,
As I have set it down.

25 Capt. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dry'd oats;
If it be man's work, I will do it. [Exit Capt.]

Flourish. Enter Albany, Goneril, Regan and Soldiers.

Alb. Sir, you have shewn to-day your valiant strain,

30 And fortune led you well: You have the captives
Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
We do require them of you; so to use them,
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

35 Edm. Sir, I thought it fit

To send the old and miserable king
To some retention, and appointed guard;

Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,

40 And turn our imprest⁸ lances in our eyes Which do command them. With him I sent the queen;

My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at a further space, to appear

45 Where you shall hold your session. At this time,
We sweat, and bleed: the friend hath lost his friend;

And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness:—

50 The question of Cordelia, and her father,
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,

I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

55 Reg. That's as we list to grace him.

¹ Dr. Johnson thinks that for does not stand in this place as a word of inference or causality. The meaning is rather: Such is my determination concerning Lear; as for my state, it requires now, not deliberation, but defence and support. ² i. e. To be ready, prepared, is all. ³ Packs is used for combinations or collection, as is a pack of cards. For sects, sets might be more commodiously read. Thus we say, affairs are now managed by a new set. ⁴ It is usual to smoke foxes out of their holes. ⁵ i. e. Morbus Gallicus.—Gouge, Fr. signifies one of the common women attending a camp: and as that disease was first dispersed over Europe by the French army, and the women who followed it, the first name it obtained among us was the gougeries, i. e. the disease of the gouges. ⁶ Flesh and skin. ⁷ The meaning is, that the important business he now had in hand, did not admit of debate; he must instantly resolve to do it, or not. ⁸ i. e. turn the launce-men which are press'd into our service, against us. Methinks,

Methinks, our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers;
Bore the commission¹ of my place and person;
The which immediacy² may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace³ he doth exalt himself,
More than in your advancement.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Alb. That were the most, if he should husband

Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets. [you.

Gon. Holla, holla!

That eye, that told you so, look'd but a-squint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer

From a full-flowing stomach.—General,

Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony,

Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine⁴:

Witness the world, that I create thee here

My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let alone lies not in your good will⁵.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine. [thee

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason:—Edmund, I arrest

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,

[Pointing to Goneril.

This gilded serpent:—for your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife;

'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,

And I, her husband, contradict your banns.

If you will marry, make your love to me,

My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster:—Let the trumpet sound:—

If none appear to prove upon thy person

Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,

There is my pledge; I'll prove it on thy heart,

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less

Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick, O, sick!

Gon. If not, I'll ne'er trust poison. [Aside.

Edm. There's my exchange: what in the world

he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies:

Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach,

On him, on you, (who not?) I will maintain

My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

Edm. A herald, ho, a herald!

Enter a Herald.

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. This sickness grows upon me.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent.

[Exit Regan, led.

Come hither, herald;—Let the trumpet sound,—

And read out this.

10 Capt. Sound trumpet. [A trumpet sounds.

Herald reads.

"If any man of quality, or degree, within the

"lists of the army, will maintain upon Edmund,

"supposed earl of Gloster, that he is a manifold 15 "traitor, let him appear by the third sound of "the trumpet: He is bold in his defence."

Edm. Sound. [1 trumpet.

Her. Again. [2 trumpet.

Her. Again. [3 trumpet.

20 [Trumpet answers, within.

Enter Edgar, armed.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears

Upon this call o' the trumpet.

Her. What are you?

25 Your name, your quality? and why you answer

This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost;

By treason's tooth bare-gnawn, and canker-bit;

Yet am I noble, as the adversary

30 I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary? [of Gloster?

Edg. What's he, that speaks for Edmund earl

Edm. Himself;—What say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword;

35 That, if my speech offend a noble heart,

Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine.

Behold, it is the privilege⁶ of mine honours,

My oath, and my profession:—I protest,—

40 Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despight thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune,

Thy valour, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor;

False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;

Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince;

And, from the extremest upward of thy head,

45 To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,

A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, No,

This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,

Thou liest.

50 Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name;

But, since thy out-side looks so fair and warlike,

And that thy tongue some say⁷ of breeding breathes,

What safe and nicely I might well delay

² Immediacy implies supremacy, in opposition to subordination.

³ Grace here means accomplishments, or honours. ⁴ A metaphorical phrase taken from the camp, and signifying, to surrender at discretion. ⁵ Whether he shall not or shall, depends not on your choice.

⁶ The charge he is here going to bring against the Bastard, he calls the privilege, &c.; to understand which phraseology, we must consider that the old rites of knighthood are here alluded to; whose oath and profession required him to discover all treasons, and whose privilege it was to have his challenge accepted, or otherwise to have his charge taken pro confesso. For if one who was no knight, accused another who was, that other was under no obligation to accept the challenge. On this account it was necessary, as Edgar came disguised, to tell the Bastard he was a knight. ⁷ Say, for essay, some shew or probability.

By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn :
Back do I toss these treasons to thy head ;
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart ;
Which, (for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise)
This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets speak.

[Alarum. Fight. Edmund falls.]

Alb. Save him, save him !

Gon. This is mere practice, Gloster : [swear]
By the law of arms, thou wast not bound to an-
An unknown opposite ; thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,
Or with this paper shall I stop it :—Hold, sir :—
Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil :—
No tearing, lady ; I perceive, you know it.

[Gives the letter to Edmund.]

Gon. Say, if I do ; the laws are mine, not thine :
Who shall arraign me for 't ?

Alb. Monster, know'st thou this paper ?

Gon. Ask me not what I know. [Exit Gon.]

Alb. Go after her ; she's desperate ; govern her.

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that I have done ;

And more, much more : the time will bring it out ;
'Tis past, and so am I : But what art thou,
That hast this fortune on me ? If thou art noble,
I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let us exchange charity.
I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund ;
If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to scourge us :
The dark and vicious place where thee he got,
Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true ;
The wheel is come full circle ; I am here.

Alb. Methought, thy very gait did prophesy
A royal nobleness :—I must embrace thee :
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee, or thy father !

Edg. Worthy prince, I know it.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself ? [ther ?]
How have you known the miseries of your fa-

Edg. By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale ;— [burst !—

And, when 'tis told, O, that my heart would
The bloody proclamation to escape,
That follow'd me so near, (O our lives' sweetness !
That we the pain of death would hourly bear,
Rather than die at once !) taught me to shift
Into a mad-man's rags ; to assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd : and in this habit
Met I my father, with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost ; became his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair ;
Never (O fault !) reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half-hour past, when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last

Told him my pilgrimage : But his flaw'd heart, (Alack, too weak the conflict to support !)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy, and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good : but speak you on,
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in :
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.

Edg. — This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow ; but, another¹ ;—
To amplify too-much, would make much more,
And top extremity :—

Whilst I was big in clamour, came there in a man
Who having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhorr'd society ; but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven ; threw him on my father ;
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd : which in recounting,
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack : Twice then the trumpet sounded,
And there I left him tranc'd.

Alb. But who was this ?

Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent ; who in dis-Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help ! help ! Oh ! help !

Edg. What kind of help ?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means this bloody knife ?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smoaks ;
It came even from the heart of—O ! she's dead !

Alb. Who, man ? speak.

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady : and her sister
By her is poison'd ; she hath confess'd it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both ; all three
Now marry in an instant.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead !
[Goneril and Regan's bodies brought out.]

This judgement of the heavens, that makes us
tremble,

Touches us not with pity.—

Edg. Here comes Kent, sir.

Alb. O ! is this he ? The time will not allow
The compliment which very manners urge.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good night ;
Is he not here ?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot !—
Speak, Edmund, where's the king ? and where's Cordelia ?—

See'st thou this object, Kent ?

Kent. Alack, why thus ?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd :
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

¹ The sense may probably be this : This would have seemed a period to such as love not sorrow ; but,—another, i. e. but I must add another, i. e. another period, another kind of conclusion to my story, such as will increase the horrors of what has been already told.

Alb. Even so.—Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life:—Some good I mean to do,
Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—
Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia:—
Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O, run—— [send

Edg. To whom, my lord?—Who has the office?
Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on; take my sword,
Give it the captain.

Edg. Haste thee for thy life. [Exit Messenger.

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and [me
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid¹ herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile. [Edmund is borne off.

Enter Lear, with Cordelia dead in his arms.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O, you are men of stones;
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so That heaven's vault should crack:—O, she is gone for ever!—

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth:—Lend me a looking-glass;
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall, and cease²!

Lear. 'This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,
It is a chance that does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. O my good master! [Kneeling.

Lear. Pr'ythee, away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all! I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for ever!—Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha!
What is't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low; an excellent thing in woman:—
I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Gent. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow? [chion
I have seen the day, with my good biting fault-
I would have made them skip: I am old now,
And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you?
Mine eyes are none o' the best:—I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight: Are you not Kent?

Kent. The same; your servant Kent:
Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;
He'll strike, and quickly too:—He's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man;—

Lear. I'll see that straight. [decay³,

Kent. That, from your first of difference and
Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hither. [and deadly.

Kent. Nor no man else; all's cheerless, dark,
Your eldest daughters have fore-doom'd⁴ them-
And desperately are dead. [selves,

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says; and vain it is That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle here.—
You lords, and noble friends, know our intent.
What comfort to this great decay⁵ may come,
Shall be apply'd: For us, we will resign,
During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power:—You, to your rights; [To Edgar.

With boot⁶, and such addition as your honours
Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deservings.—O, see, see! [life.

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd⁷! No, no, no
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat have life, [more,
And thou no breath at all? O, thou wilt come no
Never, never, never, never, never!—

Pray you, undo this button⁸: Thank you, sir.—
Do you see this? Look on her, look on her lips,
Look there, look there!— [He dies.

Edg. He faints;—My lord, my lord,—

Kent. Break, heart; I pr'ythee, break!

Edg. Look up, my lord. [hates him,

Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he
That would upon the rack of this tough⁹ world
Stretch him out longer.

Edg. O, he is gone, indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long:
He but usurp'd his life. [siness

Alb. Bear them from hence.—Our present bu-
Is general woe. Friends of my soul, you twain
[To Kent and Edgar.

Rule in this realm, and the gor'd state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;

Alb. My master calls, and I must not say, no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey;
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.

The oldest hath borne most; we that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a dead march.

¹ To fordo signifies to destroy. ² Mr. Steevens affixes the following meaning to this exclamation of Albany: "He is looking with attention on the pains employed by Lear to recover his child, and knows to what miseries he must survive, when he finds them to be ineffectual. Having these images present to his eyes and imagination, he cries out, Rather fall, and cease to be, at once, than continue in existence only to be wretched." ³ Decay for misfortunes. ⁴ That is, have anticipated their own doom. ⁵ i. e. to this piece of decay'd royalty, this ruin'd majesty. ⁶ With advantage, with increase. ⁷ Mr. Steevens remarks, that this is an expression of tenderness for his dead Cordelia, (not his fool, as some have thought,) on whose lips he is still intent, and dies away while he is searching for life there. ⁸ The Rev. Dr. J. Warton judiciously observes, that the swelling and heaving of the heart is described by this most expressive circumstance. ⁹ i. e. this obdurate, rigid world.

The SCENE, in the beginning of the fifth Act, is in Mantua; during all the rest of the Play, at Verona

PROLOGUE.

TWO households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-crossed lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

A STREET.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, two servants of Capulet.

Sam. GREGORY, o' my word, we'll not carry coals².

Greg. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Greg. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being mov'd.

Greg. But thou art not quickly mov'd to strike.

15 Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Greg. To move, is—to stir; and to be valiant, is—to stand to it: therefore, if thou art mov'd, thou runn'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Greg. That shews thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:—therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

¹ The story on which this play is founded, is related as a true one in Girolamo de la Corte's History of Verona, and was well known to the English poets before the time of Shakespeare. ² Dr. Warburton observes, that this was a phrase formerly in use to signify the bearing injuries.

Greg. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will shew myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Greg. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Greg. They must take it in sense, that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand: and, 'tis known, I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Greg. 'Tis well, thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been Poor John.—Draw thy tool; here comes of the house of the Montagues.

Enter Abram, and Balthasar.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.

Greg. How? turn thy back and run?

Sam. Fear me not.

Greg. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Greg. I will frown, as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. Is the law on our side, if I say—ay?

Greg. No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Greg. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you; I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Enter Benvolio.

Greg. Say—better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lye.

Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy swashing¹ blow. [They fight.]

Ben. Part, fools; put up your swords; You know not what you do.

Enter Tybalt.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword, Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word,

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee: Have at thee, coward.

Enter three or four Citizens, with clubs.

Cit. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter old Capulet, in his gown; and Lady Capulet.

Cap. What noise is this?—Give me my long sword², ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say!—old Montague is come, And flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter old Montague, and Lady Montague.

Mon. Thou villain, Capulet,—Hold me not, let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stain'd steel,—Will they not hear?—What ho! you men, you beasts,—

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins,—On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mis-temper'd³ weapons to the ground, And hear the sentence of your moved prince.—

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word, By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets; And made Verona's ancient citizens

Cast by their grave beseeching ornaments, To wield old partisans, in hands as old,

Cankred with peace, to part your cankred hate: If ever you disturb our streets again,

Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time, all the rest depart away:

You, Capulet, shall go along with me; And, Montague, come you this afternoon,

To know our further pleasure in this case, To old Free-town, our common judgement-place.

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart. [Exit Prince, Capulet, &c.]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach? Speak, nephew, were you by, when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary, And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:

I drew to part them; in the instant came The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;

Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears, He swung about his head, and cut the winds,

Who nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn: While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,

Came more and more, and fought on part and part, 'Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo!—saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,

A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad; Where—underneath the grove of sycamore,

That westward rooteth from the city's side— So early walking did I see your son:

¹ To swash seems to have meant to be a bully, to be noisily valiant. was the sword used in war, which was sometimes wielded with both hands.

² The long sword ³ Mis-temper'd weapons are weapons used in anger.

Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring his affections by my own,—
That most are busied when they are most alone,— Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his,—
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:
But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself;
Shuts up his windows, locks fair day-light out,
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must his humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn it of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself, and many other friends:

But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself—I will not say, how true—

But to himself so secret and so close,

So far from sounding and discovery,

As is the bud bit with an envious worm,

Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,

Or dedicate his beauty to the same.

Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter Romeo, at a distance.

Ben. See, where he comes: So please you, step
aside;

I'll know his grievance, or be much deny'd.

Mon. I would, thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt.]

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ay me! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was:—What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours? [them short.]

Rom. Not having that, which, having, makes

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should, without eyes, see path-ways to his will!

Where shall we dine?—O me!—What fray was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love:—

Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!

O any thing, of nothing first created!

O heavy lightness! serious vanity!

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!

Feather of lead, bright smoky, cold fire, sick health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!—

This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

5 Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.—

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast;

10 Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest

With more of thine: this love that thou hast shown,

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lover's eyes;

15 Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:

What is it else? a madness most discreet,

A choaking gall, and a preserving sweet.

Farewell, my coz.

[Going.]

Ben. Soft, I will go along;

20 An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here;

This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness¹, who she is you love?

Rom. What, shall I groan, and tell thee?

25 Ben. Groan? why, no;

But sadly tell me, who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will:—

O word ill urg'd to one that is so ill!—

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

30 Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good marks-man!—And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit, you miss: she'll not be hit

35 With Cupid's arrow, she hath Dian's wit;

And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,

From love's weak childish bow she lives unharm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,

40 Nor bid the encounter of assailing eyes,

Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:

O, she is rich in beauty; only poor,

That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store².

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste? [waste;]

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge

For beauty, starv'd with her severity,

Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,

50 To merit bliss by making me despair:

She hath forsworn to love; and, in that vow,

Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.

55 Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way

To call hers, exquisite, in question more:

These happy masks³, that kiss fair ladies' brows,

60 Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair;

He, that is stricken blind, cannot forget

The precious treasure of his eye-sight lost.

¹ That is, tell me in seriousness.

³ i. e. the masks worn by female spectators of the play.

Shew me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
Where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell; thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. And Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis, you liv'd at odds so long.

But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before:
My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.

The earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:¹
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.
This night I hold an old accusom'd feast,
Whereto I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love; and you among the store, [more.
One more, most welcome, makes my number
At my poor house, look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven light:
Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparel'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house; hear all, all see,
And like her most, whose merits most shall be:
Such, amongst view of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me:—Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona, find those persons out,
Whose names are written there; and to them say,
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt Capulet and Paris.]

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here? It is written—that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned:—In good time.

Enter Benvolio, and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man! one fire burns out another's burning.

One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;
Turn giddy, and be help by backward turning;
One desperate grief cures with another's languish:
Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad? [is;

10 Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a mad-man
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipt, and tormented, and—Good-e'en, good fellow. [read?

Serv. God gi' good e'en.—I pray, sir, can you

15 Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.

Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book:

But I pray, can you read any thing you see?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly; Rest you merry!

20 Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read.

[He reads the list.]

"Signior Martino, and his wife, and daughters;

"County Anselm, and his beauteous sisters; The "lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio, and 25 "his lovely nieces; Mercutio, and his brother

"Valentine; Mine uncle Capulet, his wife and

"daughters; My fair niece Rosaline; Livia;

"Signior Valentio, and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio,

"and the lively Helena."

30 A fair assembly; Whither should they come?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither to supper?

Serv. To our house.

Rom. Whose house?

35 Serv. My master's. [fore.

Rom. Indeed, I should have ask'd you that be-

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and 40 crush a cup of wine². Rest you merry.

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
Supps the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st;
With all the admired beauties of Verona:

Go thither; and, with untainted eye,

45 Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye

Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!

And these,—who, often drown'd, could never die,—

50 Transparent hereticks, be burnt for liars!

One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun

Ne'er saw her match, since first the world begun.

Ben. Tut! tut! you saw her fair, none else being

Herself pois'd with herself in either eye: [by,

55 But in those crystal scales, let there be weigh'd

Your lady's love³ against some other maid

That I will shew you, shining at this feast,

And she shall scant shew well, that now shews best.

Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shewn,

60 But to rejoice in splendour of mine own. [Exeunt.]

¹ This is a Gallicism: Fille de terre is the French phrase for an heiress. ² A cant expression which seems to have been once common among low people. We still say—to crack a bottle.
³ Your lady's love is the love you bear to your lady, which in our language is commonly used for the lady herself.

S C E N E III.

A Room in Capulet's House.Enter Lady Capulet, and Nurse.La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead,—at twelve year old,—I bade her come.—What, lamb! what, lady-bird! God forbid!—where's this girl?—what, Juliet!Enter Juliet.Jul. How now, who calls?Nurse. Your mother.Jul. Madam, I am here; what is your will?La. Cap. This is the matter: Nurse, give leave awhile,We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again; I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our counsel. Thou know'st, my daughter's of a pretty age.Nurse. 'Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.La. Cap. She's not fourteen.Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,— [four, And yet, to my teen¹ be it spoken, I have but She's not fourteen: How long is't now to Lammas-tide?La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, Come Lammas-eve at night, shall she be fourteen. SCENE IV.

A Street.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six Maskers, Torch-bearers, and others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?

Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity¹: We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf, Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper²; Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke After the prompter, for our entrance: But, let them measure us by what they will, We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch³,—I am not for this ambling;

Being but heavy, I will bear the light. [dance.]

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing-shoes,

With nimble soles; I have a soul of lead, So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings, And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpeared with his shaft, To soar with his light feathers; and so bound, I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe: Under love's heavy burthen do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden love? Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough, Too rude, too boist'rous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down. Give me a case to put my visage in;

[Putting on a mask.]

A visor for a visor!—what care I, What curious eye doth quote⁴ deformities?

Here are the beetle-brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter; and no sooner in, But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me; let wantons, light of heart,

'Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels⁵; For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase,—

I'll be a candle-holder, and look on⁶, The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut! dun's the mouse⁷, the constable's own word:

5 If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire⁸, Or (save your reverence) love, wherein thou stick'st Up to the ears.—Come, we burn day-light⁹, ho.

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay

10 We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day, Take our good meaning; for our judgement sits Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well, in going to this mask; But 'tis no wit to go.

15 Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lye.

20 Rom. In bed asleep; while they do dream things true. [you.]

Mer. O, then, I see, queen Mab hath been with

She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes

In shape no bigger than an agat stone

25 On the fore-finger of an alderman,

Drawn with a team of little atomies¹⁰

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;

30 The traces, of the smallest spider's web;

The collars, of the moonshine's watry beams;

Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film;

Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,

Not half so big as a round little worm

35 Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid:

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,

Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,

Time out of mind the fairies' coach-makers.

And in this state she gallops night by night

40 Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love: [straight:]

On courtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees:

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream;

45 Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,

Because their breaths with sweet-meats tainted are,

Sometimes she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,

And then dreams he of smelling out a suit:

And sometime comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,

50 Tickle a parson's nose as a' lies asleep,

Then dreams he of another benefice:

Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,

And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,

⁴ To quote is to observe. ⁵ We have already observed, that it was anciently the custom to strew rooms with rushes, before carpets were in use. The stage was also anciently strewn with rushes.

⁶ The proverb which Romeo means, is contained in the line immediately following: To hold the candle, is a very common proverbial expression, for being an idle spectator. ⁷ Dun's the mouse, is a proverbial expression, the precise meaning of which cannot be determined. ⁸ Draw dun out of the mire, seems to have been a game. ⁹ To burn day-light is a proverbial expression, used when candles, &c. are lighted in the day-time. ¹⁰ Atomy is no more than an obsolete substitute for atom.

Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear; at which he starts, and wakes;
And, being thus frightened, swears a prayer or two,
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab,
That plats the manes of horses in the night;
And cakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs¹,
Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.
This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage.
This is she——

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace;
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams;
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain phantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air;
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind, you talk of, blows us from ourselves;

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind misgives,
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels; and expire the term
Of a despised life, clos'd in my breast,
By some vile forfeit of untimely death:
But He, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail!—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

A Hall in Capulet's House.

Enter Servants.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher²! he scrape a trencher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwash'd too, 'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard³, look to the plate:—good thou, save me a piece of march-pane⁴; and, as thou lov'st me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell.—Antony! and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy: ready.

1 Serv. You are look'd for, and call'd for, ask'd for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—
Cheerly, boys; be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all. [Exeunt.]

Enter Capulet, &c. with the Guests, and the Maskers.

1 Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! ladies, that have their feet

Unplagu'd with corns, will have about with you:—

5 Ah ha, my mistresses! which of you all [she,
Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty,
I'll swear, hath corns; Am I come near you now?
You are welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day,
That I have worn a visor; and could tell

10 A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear, [gone:
Such as would please;—'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis
You are welcome, gentlemen.—Come, musicians, play.

A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it, girls.

15 [Musick plays, and they dance.

More light, ye knaves; and turn the tables up,

And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.—

Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet;

20 For you and I are past our dancing days:

How long is't now, since last yourself and I

Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By'r lady, thirty years. [much:]

1 Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so

25 'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,

Come pentecost as quickly as it will,

Some five-and-twenty years; and then we mask'd.

2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder, sir;
His son is thirty.

30 1 Cap. Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago. [hand

Rom. What lady's that, which doth enrich the
Of yonder knight?

Serv. I know not, sir. [bright!]

35 Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn

Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night

Like a rich jewel in an Æthiop's ear:

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!

So shews a snowy dove trooping with crows,

40 As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.

The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand,

And, touching hers, make happy my rude hand.

Did my heart love 'till now? forswear it, sight!

For I ne'er saw true beauty 'till this night.

45 Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague:—

Fetch me my rapier, boy:—What, dares the slave

Come hither, cover'd with an antick face,

To flier and scorn at our solemnity?

Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,

50 To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

1 Cap. Why, how now, kinsman? wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;

A villain, that is hither come in spite,

55 To scorn at our solemnity this night.

1 Cap. Young Romeo, is't?

¹ This was a common superstition, and seems to have had its rise from the horrid disease called the Plica Polonica. ² Trenchers were still used by persons of good fashion in our author's time. They continued common much longer in many public societies, particularly in colleges and inns of court; and are still retained at Lincoln's-Inn. ³ Meaning, perhaps, what we call at present the side-board.

⁴ March-pane was a confection made of pistachio-nuts, almonds, and sugar, &c. and in high esteem in Shakspeare's time. It was a constant article in the desserts of our ancestors. ⁵ This exclamation occurs frequently in the old comedies, and signifies, make room.

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.
1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone,
 He bears him like a portly gentleman;
 And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
 To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth:
 I would not for the wealth of all this town,
 Here in my house, do him disparagement:
 Therefore be patient, take no note of him,
 It is my will; the which if thou respect,
 Shew a fair presence, and put off these frowns,
 An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.
Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest;
 I'll not endure him.

1 Cap. He shall be endur'd;
 What, Goodman boy!—I say, he shall:—Go to;—
 Am I the master here, or you? go to.
 You'll not endure him!—God shall mend my soul—
 You'll make a mutiny among my guests!
 You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.
1 Cap. Go to, go to,
 You are a saucy boy:—Is't so, indeed?—
 This trick may chance to scathe you¹;—I know what.—

You must contrary me! marry, 'tis time—
 Well said, my hearts:—You are a princex²; go:—
 Be quiet, or—More light, more light, for shame!—
 I'll make you quiet; What!—Cheerly, my hearts.

Tyb. Patience perforce, with wilful choler meeting, [ing.
 Makes my flesh tremble in their different greet-
 I will withdraw: but this intrusion shall,
 Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall. [Exit.

Rom. If I profane with my unworthy hand
 [To Juliet.

This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this—
 My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
 To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,

Which mannerly devotion shews in this;
 For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,
 And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?
Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O then, dear saints, let lips do what hands do;
 They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake. [I take.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's effect
 Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg'd.

[Kissing her.
Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!
 Give me my sin again.

Jul. You kiss by the book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with
Rom. What is her mother? [you.

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,
 Her mother is the lady of the house,
 5 And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous:
 I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;
 I tell you—he, that can lay hold of her,
 Shall have the chink.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?
 10 O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, begone; the sport is at the best.
Rom. Ay so I fear; the more is my unrest.

1 Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;
 We have a trifling foolish banquet towards³.—

15 Is it e'en so? Why, then I thank you all;
 I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night:—
 More torches here!—Come on, then let's to bed.

Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late:
 I'll to my rest. [Excunt.

20 Jul. Come hither, nurse: What is yon gentleman?
Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he that now is going out of door?
Nurse. That, as I think, is young Petruchio.

Jul. What's he that follows there, that would 25 Nurse. I know not. [not dance?

Jul. Go, ask his name:—if he be married,
 My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
 The only son of your great enemy.

30 Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!
 Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
 Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
 That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this? what's this?
 35 Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now
 Of one I danc'd withal. [One calls within, Juliet.

Nurse. Anon, anon:—
 Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone. [Excunt.

40 En'et CHORUS.
 Now old desire doth on his death-bed lie,
 And young affection gapes to be his heir;
 That fair, for which love groan'd sore, and would die,
 With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.

45 Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again,
 Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;
 But to his foe suppos'd he must complain, [hook:
 And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful
 Being held a foe, he may not have access

50 To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
 And she as much in love, her means much less
 To meet her new-beloved any where:
 But passion lends them power, time means to meet,
 Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet.

The Street.Enter Romeo alone.

Rom. CAN I go forward, when my heart is here?

Turn back, dull earth, and find thy center out.

[Exit.]

Enter Benvolio, with Mercutio.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. He is wise;

And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard

Call, good Mercutio. [wall:]

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.— [lover:]

Why, Romeo! humours! madman! passion!

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh,

Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;

Cry but—Ay me! couple but—love and dove;

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,

One nick-name to her purblind son and heir,

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,

When king Cophetua lov'd the beggar maid¹.—

He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not;

The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.—

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,

By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,

By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,

That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle

Of some strange nature, letting it there stand

'Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;

That were some spight: my invocation

Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name,

I conjure only but to raise up him. [trees,]

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among those

To be consorted with the humourous² night:

Blind is his love, and best befits the dark. [mark.]

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,

And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit,

As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.—

Romeo, good night;—I'll to my truckle-bed;

This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep:

Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain

To seek him here, that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.]

Capulet's Garden.Enter Romeo.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—

But soft! what light through yonder window
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!— [breaks?]

[Juliet appears above at a window.]

Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,

Who is already sick and pale with grief,

That thou her maid art far more fair than she:

Be not her maid, since she is envious;

Her vestal livery is but sick and green,

And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.—

10 It is my lady: O, it is my love:

O, that she knew she were!—

She speaks, yet she says nothing; What of that?

Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—

I am too bold, 'tis not to me it speaks:

15 Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,

Having some business, do intreat her eyes

To twinkle in their spheres 'till they return.

What if her eyes were there, they in her head?

The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,

20 As day-light doth a lamp: her eye in heaven

Would through the airy region stream so bright,

That birds would sing, and think it were not night.

See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!

O, that I were a glove upon that hand,

25 That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ay me!

Rom. She speaks:

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art

As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,

30 As is the winged messenger of heaven

Unto the white up-turned wond'ring eyes

Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,

When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,

And sails upon the bosom of the air.

35 Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou

Romeo?

Deny thy father, and refuse thy name;

Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,

And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

40 Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

[Aside.]

Jul. 'Tis but thy name, that is my enemy;

Thou art thyself, though not a Montague³.

What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,

45 Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part:

What's in a name? That which we call a rose,

By any other name would smell as sweet;

So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,

Retain that dear perfection which he owes,

50 Without that title:—Romeo, doff thy name;

And for that name, which is no part of thee,

Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:

Call me but love, and I'll be new-baptiz'd;

55 Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

¹ Alluding to an old ballad preserved in Dr. Percy's Reliques of ancient English Poetry. ² Shakespeare means humid, the moist dewy night. ³ The sense is, Thou art thyself (i. e. a being of distinguished excellence), though thou art not what thou appearest to others, akin to thy family in malice.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,

So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name

I know not how to tell thee who I am:

My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,

Because it is an enemy to thee;

Had I it written, I would tear the word. [words

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred
Of that tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound; 10
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me; and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb; 15
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch
these walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out:

And what love can do, that dares love attempt;

Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.

Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye,
Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet, 25
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world, they saw thee
here. [sight:

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their
And, but thou love me, let them find me here; 30
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogu'd¹, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place? [quire;

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to en- 35
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.

I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far

As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandize.

Jul. Thou know'st, the mask of night is on 40
my face;

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek,
For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain fain deny

What I have spoke; But farewell compliment! 45

Dost thou love me? I know, thou wilt say—Ay;

And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swear'st,

Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjuries,

They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo,

If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:

Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,

I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,

So thou wilt woo; but, else, not for the world.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond;

And therefore thou may'st think my' haviour light;

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true, 55

Than those that have more cunning to be strange.

I should have been more strange, I must confess,

But that thou over-heardst, ere I was ware,

My true love's passion: therefore pardon me;

And not impute this yielding to light love,

Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I vow
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

5 That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;

Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,

Which is the god of my idolatry;

And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—

Jul. Well, do not swear; although I joy in thee,
I have no joy of this contract to-night:

15 It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;

Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be,

Ere one can say—It lightens. Sweet, good night!

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,

May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet

20 Good night, good night! as sweet repose and rest

Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine. [it:

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request
And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Would'st thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again:

And yet I wish but for the thing I have:

My bounty is as boundless as the sea,

My love as deep; the more I give to thee,

The more I have, for both are infinite.

35 I hear some noise within; Dear love, adieu!

[Nurse calls within.

Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true,

Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.

Rom. O blessed blessed night! I am afeard,

Being in night, all this is but a dream,

Too flattering sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter Juliet, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night,
indeed.

45 If that thy bent of love be honourable,

Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,

By one that I'll procure to come to thee, [rite;

Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the

And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,

50 And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

[Within: Madam.

I come anon.—But if thou mean'st not well,

I do beseech thee, [Within: Madam.] By-and-by,

I come:—

To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:

55 To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—

Jul. A thousand times good night! [Exit.

Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.— [books;

60 Love goes toward love, as school-boys from their

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

Re-enter

Re-enter Juliet again, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O, for a falconer's voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle¹ back again!
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I tear the cave where echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine
With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name:
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest musick to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My sweet?

Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. By the hour of nine.

Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years 'till then.
I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here 'till thou remember it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Rememb'ring how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other home but this. [gone;

Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee
And yet no further than a wanton's bird;
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would, I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I;
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,

That I shall say—good night, 'till it be morrow. 35
[Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!—

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell;
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. [Exit.

SCENE III.

A MONASTERY.

Enter Friar Lawrence, with a basket.

Fri. The grey-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night, [light;

Checkering the eastern clouds with streaks of
And flecked² darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path-way, made by Titan's wheels:
Now ere the sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up-fill this osier cage of ours

With baleful weeds, and precious-juiced flowers.
The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;

What is her burying grave, that is her womb:
And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find;
Many for many virtues excellent,

None but for some, and yet all different.

O, mickle is the powerful grace³, that lies
In plants, herbs, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor aught so good, but, strain'd from that fair use,
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;
And vice sometime 's by action dignify'd.
Within the infant rind of this small flower
Poison hath residence, and med'cine power:
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart. [part;
Two such opposed foes encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace, and rude will:
And, where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Good morrow, father!

Fri. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?—
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure, [reign:
Thou art up-rous'd by some distemp'rature;
Or if not so, then here I hit it right—

Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That's my good son: But where hast thou been then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.

I have been feasting with mine enemy;

Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,

That's by me wounded; both our remedies

Within thy help and holy physick lies:

I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,

My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:

As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;

And all combin'd, save what thou must combine

By holy marriage: When, and where, and how,

We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,

I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,

That thou consent to marry us this day.

Fri. Holy saint Francis! what a change is here!

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,

So soon forsaken? Young men's love then lies

Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.

Holy Saint Francis! what a deal of brine

Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline!

¹ The tassel or tiercel (for so it should be spelt) is the male of the goshawk; so called, because it is a tierce or third less than the female. This is equally true of all birds of prey. ² Flecked is spotted, dappled, streak'd, or variegated. ³ i. e. efficacious virtue.

How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear, that is not wash'd off yet:
If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline;
And art thou chang'd? Pronounce this sentence
then—— [men.]

Women may fall, when there's no strength in
Rom. Thou chidd'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doating, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave,

To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I love
now,

Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. O, she knew well,

Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.

But come, young waverer, come go with me,

In one respect I'll thy assistant be;

For this alliance may so happy prove,

To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. Wisely, and slow; They stumble, that run fast. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The STREET.

Enter Benvolio, and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?—
Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why, that same pale hard-hearted wench,
that Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man, that can write, may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dar'd.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead!
stabb'd with a white wench's black eye, shot thro-rough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft;
And is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats¹, I can tell you.
O, he is the courageous captain of compliments:
he fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; he rests his minim, one, 5 two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house;—of the first and second cause²:—Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay³!—

10 Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antick, lispings, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accent!—
By—a very good blade!—a very tall man!—
a very good whore!—Why, is not this a lamen-15 table thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these Pardonnez-moy's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bon's, their bon's!

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring:—O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in: Laura, to 25 his lady, was but a kitchen-wench;—marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her: Dido, a dowdy;
Cleopatra, a gypsy; Helen and Hero, hildings and harlots; Thisbé, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose.——Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's 30 a French salutation to your French slop⁴. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good-morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you? [ceive?]

35 Mer. The slip, sir, the slip⁵; Can you not con-

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and, in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say—such a case as 40 yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning—to curt'sy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

45 Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flower'd?

Mer. Well said: follow me this jest now, 'till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the 50 single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-sol'd jest, solely singular for the singleness!

¹ Tybert, the name given to the Cat, in the story-book of Reynard the Fox. ² That is, a gentleman of the first rank, of the first eminence among these duellists; and one who understands the whole science of quarrelling, and will tell you of the first cause, and the second cause, for which a man is to fight. ³ The hay is the word hai, you have it, used when a thrust reaches the antagonist. ⁴ i. e. How ridiculous they make themselves in crying out good, and being in ecstasies with every trifle. ⁵ Slops are large loose breeches or trowsers, worn at present only by sailors. ⁶ To understand this play upon the words counterfeit and slip, it should be observed, that in our author's time there was a counterfeit piece of money distinguished by the name of a slip. ⁷ Dr. Johnson says, Here is a vein of wit too thin to be easily found. The fundamental idea is, that Romeo wore pinked pumps, that is, punched with holes in figures.

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wit faints.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, I am done; for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting¹; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well serv'd in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here's a wit of cheverel², that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word—broad, which, added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now thou art sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this driveling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole³.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair⁴. [large.]

Ben. Thou would'st else have made thy tale

Mer. O, thou art deceiv'd, I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my tale; and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly geer!

Enter Nurse, and Peter.

Mer. A sail, a sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt, and a smock.

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon?

Nurse. My fan⁵, Peter.

Mer. Do, good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer of the two.

Nurse. God ye good-morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den⁶, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you!

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said;—For himself to mar, quoth'a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? very well took, i' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pye, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

An old hare hoar⁷,

And an old hare hoar,

Is very good meat in lent:

But a hare that is hoar,

Is too much for a score,

When it hoars ere it be spent.—

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, lady, lady, lady⁸.

[Exeunt Mercutio, and Benvolio.]

Nurse. I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant⁹ was this, that was so full of his ropery¹⁰?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute, than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An'a speak any thing against me, I'll take him down an'a were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates¹¹:—And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

¹ A bitter sweeting is an apple of that name. ² Cheverel is soft leather for gloves; from chevreau, a kid, Fr. ³ It has been already observed, in a note on All's Well, &c., that a bauble was one of the accoutrements of a licensed fool or jester. ⁴ An expression equivalent to one which we now use—"against the grain." ⁵ The business of Peter carrying the Nurse's fan seems ridiculous according to modern manners; but such was formerly the practice. ⁶ i. e. God give you a good even. ⁷ Hoar, or hoary, is often used for mouldy, as things grow white from moulding. ⁸ The burthen of an old song. ⁹ Mr. Steevens observes, that the term merchant, which was, and even now is, frequently applied to the lowest sort of dealers, seems anciently to have been used on these familiar occasions in contradistinction to gentleman; signifying that the person shewed by his behaviour he was a low fellow.—The term chap, i. e. chapman, a word of the same import with merchant in its less respectable sense, is still in common use among the vulgar, as a general denomination for any person of whom they mean to speak with freedom or disrespect. ¹⁰ i. e. roguery. ¹¹ A skein or skain was either a knife or a short dagger.—By skains-mates the nurse means, none of his loose companions who frequent the fencing-school with him, where we may suppose the exercise of this weapon was taught.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vext, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word: and, as I told you, my young lady bade me enquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,— Nurse. Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentleman-like offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift

This afternoon;

And there she shall at friar Lawrence's cell
Be shriv'd, and marry'd. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey
Within this hour my man shall be with thee;
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair,¹
Which to the high top-gallant² of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell!—Be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.

Farewell!—Commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee!—Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say—

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee; my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, lord!—when 'twas a little prating thing,—O,—there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lieve see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the varsal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for the dog. No; I know it begins with some other letter: and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady. [Exit.]

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter!

Pet. Anon?

Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Capulet's Garden.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promis'd to return. [so.—Perchance, she cannot meet him:—that's not O, she is lame! love's heralds should be thoughts, Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams, Driving back shadows over lowring hills:

Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love, And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings. Now is the sun upon the highmost hill Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve Is three long hours,—yet she is not come.

Had she affections, and warm youthful blood, She'd be as swift in motion as a ball; My words would bandy her to my sweet love, And his to me:

But old folks, many feign as they were dead: Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse, with Peter.

O God, she comes!—O honey nurse, what news? Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Peter.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O lord! why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily; If good, thou sham'st the musick of sweet news By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am aweary, give me leave a while;—Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunt have I had!

Jul. I would, thou hadst my bones, and I thy Nay, come, I pray thee, speak;—good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. What haste? can you not stay a while? Do you not see, that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath

To say to me—that thou art out of breath? The excuse, that thou dost make in this delay, Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that; Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:

Let me be satisfied; Is't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talk'd on, yet they are past compare: He is not the flower of courtesy, but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways, wench; serve God:—What, have you din'd at home?

Jul. No, no: But all this I did know before; What says he of our marriage? what of that?

¹ Like stairs of rope in the tackle of a ship, mast of a ship.

² The top-gallant is the highest extremity of the Nurse. Lord, how my head akes! what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back o' the other side,—O, my back, my back!

Beshrew your heart, for sending me about, To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well: Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me what says my love?

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman, And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, and I warrant, a virtuous:—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother?—why, she is within; Where should she be? How oddly thou reply'st? Your love says like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother?

Nurse. O, God's lady dear! Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow; Is this the poultice for my aking bones? Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil;—Come, what says Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?

Jul. I have. [cell, 25

Nurse. Then hie you hence to friar Lawrence! There stays a husband to make you a wife: Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks, They'll be in scarlet straight at any news. Hie you to church; I must another way, To fetch a ladder, by the which your love Must climb a bird's nest soon, when it is dark: I am the drudge, and toil in your delight; But you shall bear the burthen soon at night. Go, I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune!—honest nurse, farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.

Friar Lawrence's Cell.

Enter Friar Lawrence, and Romeo.

Friar. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,

That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can, It cannot countervail the exchange of joy That one short minute gives me in her sight: Do thou but close our hands with holy words, Then love-devouring death do what he dare, It is enough I may but call her mine.

Friar. These violent delights have violent ends, And in their triumph die; like fire, and powder, Which, as they kiss, consume: The sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness, And in the taste confounds the appetite: Therefore, love moderately; long love doth so; Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow;

Enter Juliet.

Here comes the lady:—O, so light a foot Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint; A lover may bestride the gossamour¹ That idles in the wanton summer air, And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Friar. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both. [much.

Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too
Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath This neighbour air, and let rich musick's tongue Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words, Brags of his substance, not of ornament: They are but beggars that can count their worth; But my true love is grown to such excess, I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Friar. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone, Till holy church incorporate two in one. [Exeunt.

A C T III.

SCENE I.

A Street.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I PRAY thee, good Mercutio, let's retire; The day is hot, the Capulets abroad, And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl; For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows, that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says, God send me no need of thee! and, by the operation of the second cup, draws it on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

50 Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon mov'd to be moody, and as soon moody to be mov'd.

Ben. And what to?

55 Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes; what eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg, for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrell'd with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath waken'd thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a taylor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old ribband? and yet thou wilt tutor me for quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple? O simple!

Enter Tybalt, and others.

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not. [them.—

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to Gentlemen, good den; a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, if you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo,—

Mer. Consort! what, dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men: Either withdraw into some private place, Or reason coldly of your grievances, Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter Romeo.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir! here comes my man. [livery:

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your Marry, go first to field, he'll be your follower; Your worship, in that sense, may call him—man.

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee, can afford No better term than this—Thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee Doth much excuse the appertaining rage To such a greeting:—Villain I am none; Therefore farewell; I see thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me; therefore turn and

Rom. I do protest, I never injur'd thee; [draw But love thee better than thou canst devise, 'Till thou shalt know the reason of my love: And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender As dearly as my own, be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission! *A la stoccata*¹ carries it away.—

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What would'st thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher² by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Drawing.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.

Rom. Draw, Benvolio;

Bear down their weapons:—Gentlemen, for shame Forbear this outrage;—Tybalt—Mercutio—The prince expressly hath forbid this bandying In Verona streets:—hold, Tybalt;—good Mercutio. [Exit Tybalt.

Mer. I am hurt;—

A plague o' both the houses!—I am sped:—Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt? [enough.—

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door; but 'tis enough; 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am pepper'd, I warrant, for this world.—A plague o' both your houses! What! a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetick!—Why, the devil, came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint.—A plague o' both your houses They have made worm's meat of me: I have it, and soundly too:—Your houses! [Exit Mercutio, and Benvolio.

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally, My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my kinsman:—O sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper soften'd valour's steel.

Re-enter Benvolio.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead; That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds, Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend;

This but begins the woe, others must end.

Re-enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain! Away to heaven, respective lenity,

And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now!—

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again, That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul Is but a little way above our heads,

Staying for thine to keep him company;

¹ Stoccata is the Italian term for a thrust or stab with a rapier. ² Dr. Warburton says, we should read pilche, which signifies a cloke or coat of skins, meaning the scabbard. ³ i. e. This day's unhappy destiny hangs over the days yet to come. There will yet be more mischief.

Or thou, or I, or both shall follow him. [here,]

Tyb. Thou wretched boy, that didst consort him
Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight. Tybalt falls.]

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone!

The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:— [death,
Stand not amaz'd: the prince will doom thee
If thou art taken:—hence!—be gone!—away!

Rom. O! I am fortune's fool!¹

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit Romeo.]

Enter Citizens, &c.

Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

Cit. Up, sir, go with me;

I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, Montague, Capulet, their Wives, &c.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O, noble prince, I can discover all
The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl:

There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin!—O my brother's child!—

O prince!—O husband!—O, the blood is spill'd
Of my dear kinsman!—Prince, as thou art true²,
For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.—
O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;

Romeo that spoke him fair, bid him bethink
How nice³ the quarrel was, and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure: all this—utter'd
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,—

Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast;
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity

Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud, Hold, friends! friends, part! and, swifter than his tongue,

His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled:

But by-and-by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to't they go like lightning; for, ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain;
And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly;

This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

La. Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague,
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life:

I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give;
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

La. Mon. Not Romeo, prince; he was Mercutio's friend;

His fault concludes but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And, for that offence,

15 Immediately we do exile him hence:

I have an interest in your hates' proceeding, [ing;
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleed—
But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine:

20 I will be deaf to pleading and excuses;

Nor tears, nor prayers, shall purchase out abuses,
Therefore use none: let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last.

Bear hence this body, and attend our will:

25 Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

An Apartment in Capulet's House.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phœbus' mansion; such a waggoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
35 And bring in cloudy night immediately.—

Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night!
That run-away's eyes may wink⁴; and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk'd of, and unseen!—
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites

40 By their own beauties: or, if love be blind,
It best agrees with night.—Come, civil⁵ night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match,
Play'd for a pair of stainless maiden-hoods:

45 Hood my unmann'd blood baiting in my cheeks,
With thy black mantle; 'till strange love grown bold,

Thinks true love acted, simple modesty. [night!
Come, night!—Come, Romeo! come, thou day in 50 For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.—

Come, gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd
night,

Give me my Romeo: and when he shall die,

55 Take him and cut him out in little stars,

And he will make the face of heaven so fine,

¹ I am always running in the way of evil fortune, like the fool in the play. ² i. e. as thou art just and upright. ³ how slight, how unimportant, how petty. ⁴ Juliet would have night's darkness obscure the great eye of the day, the sun; whom considering in a poetical light as Phæbus, drawn in his car with fiery-footed steeds, and posting through the heavens, she very properly calls him, with regard to the swiftness of his course, the run-away. ⁵ Civil is grave, decently solemn. ⁶ These are terms of falconry. An unmanned hawk is one that is not brought to endure company.—Bating is fluttering with the wings as striving to fly away.

That all the world shall be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish¹ sun.—
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it; and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd: So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child, that hath new robes,
And may not wear them. O, here comes my nurse,

Enter Nurse, with cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue, that speaks
But Romeo's name, speaks heavenly eloquence.—
Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there?
the cords,

That Romeo bid thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords.

Jul. Ay me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands? [dead!]

Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's
We are undone, lady, we are undone!—
Alack the day!—he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot:—O Romeo! Romeo!—
Who ever would have thought it?—Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,
And that bare vowel *I*² shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer, I.
If he be slain, say—I; or if not, no:
Brief sounds determine of my weal, or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,—

God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
All in gore blood:—I sowned at the sight.

Jul. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes! ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd? and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-lov'd cousin, and my dearer lord?—
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!
For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banish'd;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banish'd;

Jul. O God!—did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave? [face!]

Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven! wolvis-ravens lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
5 A damned saint, an honourable villain!—
O, nature! what hadst thou to do in hell,
When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?—
Was ever book, containing such vile matter,
10 So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,
All forsworn, all nought, all dissemblers.—
15 Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua vitae:—
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.

Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue,
20 For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth.
O, what a beast was I to chide at him!

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy
name,

30 When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?—
But wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband;
Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
35 Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.

My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
And Tybalt dead, that would have slain my husband:
All this is comfort; Wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was worser than Tybalt's death,
40 That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;

But, O! it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;

That—banished, that one word—banished,
45 Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts³. Tybalt's death
Was woe enough, if it had ended there:

Or,—if sour woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,—
Why follow'd not, when she said—Tybalt's dead,
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,
Romeo is banished,—to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
55 All slain, all dead:—Romeo is banished,—
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe
sound.—

Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse:
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

¹ Garish is gaudy, showy. ² In our author's time, the affirmative adverb ay was generally written I: and by this means it both becomes a vowel, and answers in sound to eye, upon which the conceit turns in the second line. ³ Hath put Tybalt out of my mind, as if out of being.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears? mine shall be spent,

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.

Take up those cords:—Poor ropes, you are be-
Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd: [guil'd,

He made you for a highway to my bed;
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed. [bed;

Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-
And death, not Romeo, take my maiden-head!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo
To comfort you;—I wot well where he is.

Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;
I'll to him; he is hid at Lawrence's cell.

Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true knight,

And bid him come to take his last farewell.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Friar Lawrence's Cell.

Enter Friar Lawrence, and Romeo.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity. [doom?

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's
What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,

That I yet know not?

Friar. Too familiar

Is my dear son with such sour company:

I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom?

Fri. A gentler judgement vanish'd from his lips,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—death;
For exile hath more terror in his look,

Much more than death: do not say—banishment.

Fri. Here from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death; then banishment

Is death mis-term'd; calling death—banishment,
Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,

And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment:

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is
here,

Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,

Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not.—More validity,

More honourable state, more courtship¹ lives
In carrion flies, than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,

And steal immortal blessings from her lips;

Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,

Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin:

Flies may do this, when I from this must fly;

They are free men, but I am banished.

And say'st thou yet, that exile is not death?

But Romeo may not; he is banished. [knife,

Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground

No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,

But—banished—to kill me?—banished?

O friar, the damned use that word in hell;

Howlings attend it: How hast thou the heart,

Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,

A sin-absolver, and my friend profest,

To mangle me with that word—banishment?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,

To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy!

Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,

Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom;

It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.

Fri. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel:

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,

An hour but marry'd, Tybalt murdered,

Doating like me, and like me banished,

Then might'st thou speak, then might'st thou tear
thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now,

Taking the measure of an unmade grave.

Fri. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself. [Knock within.

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans,

Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes.

[Knock.
Fri. Hark, how they knock!—Who's there?

Romeo, arise;
Thou wilt be taken:—Stay a while:—stand up:

[Knock.
Run to my study:—By-and-by:—God's will!

What wilfulness is this?—I come, I come.

[Knock.
Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

Nurse. [within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;

I come from lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O tell me, holy friar,

Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

Fri. There, on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

¹ Validity seems here to mean worth or dignity; and courtship the state of a courtier permitted to approach the highest presence.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!—

Fri. O woeful sympathy!
Piteous predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she, [ing: 5
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubber—
Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir!—death is the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
Doth she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman.—O tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out, thou art;
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:
Unseemly woman, in a seeming man!
Or ill-beseeming beast, in seeming both!¹
Thou hast amaz'd me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady too that lives in thee,
By doing damned hate upon thyself? [earth? 40
Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet

In thee at once; which thou at once would'st lose.
Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit; 45
Which, like an usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man:
Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish.
Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in the skill-less soldier's flask²,
Is set on fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence³.
What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,

For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there too art thou happy:
The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy friend,
And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:

A pack of blessings light upon thy back;
Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a mis'hav'd and a sullen wench,
Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love:
10 Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;
But, look, thou stay not 'till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;
15 Where thou shalt live, 'till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.—

20 Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:
Romeo is coming. [night,

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here all the 25 To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!—
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir:—

30 Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!

Fri. Go hence. Good night:—and here stands
all your state⁴,—

Either be gone before the watch be set,
35 Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you, that chances here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; good night.

40 Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief, so brief to part with thee:
Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter:
Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
50 And so did I;—Well, we were born to die.—
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo:
55 Madam, good night: commend me to your daughter. [morrow;

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-
To-night she's mew'd⁵ up to her heaviness.

¹ That is, Thou art a beast of ill qualities, under the appearance both of a woman and a man.

² To understand the force of this allusion, it should be remembered that the ancient English soldiers, using match-locks, instead of locks with flints as at present, were obliged to carry a lighted match hanging at their belts, very near to the wooden flask in which they kept their powder. ³ That is, And thou torn to pieces with thy own weapons.

⁴ A mew was a place of confinement for hawks.

⁵ The whole of your fortune depends on this.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate¹ tender
Of my child's love: I think, she will be rul'd
In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it not.—
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here with my son Paris' love;
And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—
But, soft; What day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord. [soon,

Cap. Monday? ha! ha! Well, Wednesday is too
O' Thursday let it be;—o' Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl:—
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
We'll keep no great ado;—a friend, or two:—
For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much:

Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday? [morrow.

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-

Cap. Well, get you gone:—o' Thursday be it then:—

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed;
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.—
Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber, ho!
'Fore me, it is so very late, that we
May call it early by-and-by: Goodnight. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.

Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Romeo, and Juliet.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountains' tops;
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yon light is not day-light, I know it, I;
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death;
I am content, if thou wilt have it so.
I'll say, yon grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex² of Cynthia's brow;
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care to stay, than will to go;—

Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.—
How is 't, my soul? let's talk, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is, hie hence, be gone, away;
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and displeasing sharps.
Some say, the lark makes sweet division³;
This doth not so, for she divideth us:
Some say, the lark and loathed toad change eyes⁴;
O, now I would they had chang'd voices too⁵!
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunts-up⁶ to the day.
O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.
Rom. More light and light?—more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam!

Jul. Nurse?

[chamber:

Nurse. Your lady mother's coming to your
The day is broke; be wary, look about.

[Exit Nurse.

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend. [Romeo descends.

Jul. Art thou gone so? Love! lord! ah, husband! friend!

I must hear from thee every day i' the hour,
For in a minute there are many days:
O! by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell! I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O, think'st thou, we shall ever meet again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve

For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul;
Methinks, I see thee, now thou art so low,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb:

Either my eye-sight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!

[Exit Romeo.

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle:
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back.

La. Cap. [within.] Ho, daughter! are you up?

Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady mother?
Is she not down so late, or up so early?
What unaccustom'd cause procures⁷ her hither?

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet?

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

² The appearance of a cloud opposed to the moon.

³ Division seems to have been the technical term for the pauses or parts of a musical composition.

⁴ The toad having very fine eyes, and the lark very ugly ones, was the occasion of a common saying amongst the people, that the toad and lark had changed eyes. To this the speaker alludes.

⁵ The meaning is this: The lark, they say, has lost her eyes to the toad, and now I would the toad had her voice too, since she uses it to the disturbance of lovers.

⁶ The huntsup was the name of the tune anciently played to wake the hunters, and collect them together.

⁷ Procures for brings.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?
 What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears? [live;
 An if thou could'st, thou could'st not make him 5
 Therefore, have done: Some grief shews much of love;
 But much of grief shews still some want of wit.
Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.
La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the 10
 Which you weep for. [friend
Jul. Feeling so the loss,
 I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.
La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much 15
 for his death,
 As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Jul. What villain, madam?
La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo.
Jul. Villain and he are many miles asunder.
 God pardon him! I do with all my heart;
 And yet no man, like he, doth grieve my heart.
La. Cap. That is, because the traitor murderer 20 lives. [hands:
Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my
 'Would, none but I might venge my cousin's 25
 death! [not:
La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou
 Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,
 Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,—
 That shall bestow on him so sure a draught,
 That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:
 And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.
Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied
 With Romeo, 'till I behold him—dead—
 Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vext:—
 Madam, if you could find out but a man 30
 To bear a poison, I would temper it;
 That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
 Soon sleep in quiet.—O, how my heart abhors
 To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to him;— 40
 To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt,
 Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!
La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.
 But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.
Jul. And joy comes well in such a needful time:
 What are they, I beseech your ladyship?
La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;
 One, who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
 Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,
 That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.
Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?
La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn,
 The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
 The county Paris¹, at Saint Peter's church,
 Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride. [too,
Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter

He shall not make me there a joyful bride.
 I wonder at this haste; that I must wed
 Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo.
 I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,
 I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear
 It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
 Rather than Paris:—These are news indeed!
La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,
 And see how he will take it at your hands.
Enter Capulet, and Nurse.
Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;
 But for the sun-set of my brother's son,
 It rains downright.— 15
 How now? a conduit, girl? what, still in tears?
 Evermore showering? In one little body
 Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind:
 For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
 Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
 Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs;
 Who,—raging with thy tears, and they with them,
 Without a sudden calm, will overset
 Thy tempest-tossed body.—How now, wife?
 Have you deliver'd to her our decree? 25
La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks:
 I would, the fool were married to her grave!
Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you, wife. 30
 How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks?
 Is she not proud? doth she not count her blest,
 Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
 So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?
 35 Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have:
 Proud can I never be of what I hate;
 But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.
Cap. How now! how now! chop logick?—
 What is this?
 Proud—and, I thank you—and, I thank you not—
 And yet not proud—Mistress minion, you,
 Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no pouds,
 But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
 45 To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church,
 Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. [gag!
 Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you bag-
 You tallow-face!
La. Cap. Fie! fie! what, are you mad?
 50 Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
 Hear me with patience but to speak a word.
Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!
 I tell thee what,—get thee to church o' Thursday,
 55 Or never after look me in the face:
 Speak not, reply not, do not answer me; [blest,
 My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us
 That God hath sent us but this only child;
 But now I see this one is one too much,

¹ It is remarked, that "Paris, though in one place called Earl, is most commonly styled the Countie in this play. Shakspeare seems to have preferred, for some reason or other, the Italian comte to our count; perhaps he took it from the old English novel, from which he is said to have taken his plot." He certainly did so: Paris is there first styled a young earle, and afterwards counte, countee, and county; according to the unsettled orthography of the time.

And that we have a curse in having her:

Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!—

You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,

Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O, God ye good den!

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!

Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad: Day, 15 night, late, early,

At home, abroad, alone, in company,

Waking, or sleeping, still my care hath been

To have her match'd: and having now provided

A gentleman of princely parentage,

Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,

Stuff'd (as they say) with honourable parts,

Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a man,—

And then to have a wretched puling fool,

A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,

To answer—'I'll not wed,—I cannot love,—

'I am too young,—I pray you, pardon me;—'

But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you: [me;

Graze where you will, you shall not house with

Look to 't, think on 't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:

An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;

An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i' the streets,

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,

Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:

Trust to 't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn.

[Exit.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,

That sees into the bottom of my grief?—

O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!

Delay this marriage for a month, a week;

Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed

In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word;

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

[Exit.

Jul. O God!—O nurse!—how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;

How shall that faith return again to earth,

Unless that husband send it me from heaven

By leaving earth?—comfort me, counsel me.—

Alack, alack, that heaven should practise strata-

10 Upon so soft a subject as myself!— [gems

What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?

Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. 'Faith, here 'tis: Romeo

Is banished; and all the world to nothing,

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.

Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,

I think it best you married with the county.

Oh! he's a lovely gentleman!

20 Romeo's a dish-clout to him; an eagle, madam,

Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye

As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,

I think you are happy in this second match,

For it excels your first; or if it did not,

25 Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,

As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. And from my soul too;

Or else beshrew them both.

30 Jul. Amen!

Nurse. What?

[much.

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,

Having displeas'd my father, to Lawrence' cell,

35 To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.

[Exit.

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!

Is it more sin—to wish me thus forsworn,

40 Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue

Which she hath prais'd him with above compare

So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor;

Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.—

I'll to the friar, to know his remedy:

45 If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.

A C T IV.

SCENE I.

Friar Lawrence's Cell.

Enter Friar Lawrence, and Paris.

Fri. O N Thursday, sir? the time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;

And I am nothing slow, to slack his haste.

Fri. You say, you do not know the lady's mind;

Uneven is the course, I like it not. [death,

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's

And therefore little have I talk'd of love;

For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.

Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous,

55 That she do give her sorrow so much sway;

And, in his wisdom, hastes our marriage,

To stop the inundation of her tears;

Which, too much minded by herself alone,

May be put from her by society:

60 Now do you know the reason of this haste?

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd. [Aside.

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter Juliet.

65 Par. Happily met, my lady, and my wife!

Jul.

Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.
Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thurs-
Jul. What must be, shall be. [day next.
Fri. That's a certain text. [ther?
Par. Come you to make confession to this fa- 5
Jul. To answer that, were to confess to you.
Par. Do not deny to him, that you love me.
Jul. I will confess to you, that I love him.
Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love me.
Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price,
 Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.
Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.
Jul. The tears have got small victory by that;
 For it was bad enough, before their spite.
Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.
Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth;
 And what I spake, I spake it to my face. [it.
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd 20
Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—
 Are you at leisure, holy father, now;
 Or shall I come to you at evening mass?
Fri. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter,
 now:—
 My lord, we must intreat the time alone.
Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion!—
 Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:
 'Till then, adieu! and keep this holy kiss.
 [Exit Paris.
Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so, [help!
 Come weep with me; Past hope, past cure, past
Fri. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief;
 It strains me past the compass of my wits:
 I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it,
 On Thursday next be married to this county.
Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,
 Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
 If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,
 Do thou but call my resolution wise,
 And with this knife I'll help it presently.
 God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;
 And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,
 Shall be the label to another deed,
 Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
 Turn to another, this shall slay them both:
 Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time,
 Give me some present counsel; or, behold,
 'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
 Shall play the umpire, arbitrating that
 Which the commission¹ of thy years and art
 Could to no issue of true honour bring.
 Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
 If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.
Fri. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope,
 Which craves as desperate an execution
 As that is desperate which we would prevent.
 If, rather than to marry county Paris,
 Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself;
 Then is it likely, thou wilt undertake
 A thing like death to chide away this shame,

That cop'st with death himself to 'scape from it:
 And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
 From off the battlements of yonder tower;
 Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
 Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears;
 Or hide me nightly in a charnel house,
 O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,
 With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;
 Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
 And hide me with a dead man in his shroud,
 Things that, to hear them told, have made me
 tremble;
 And I will do it without fear or doubt,
 To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.
Fri. Hold, then; go home; be merry, give consent

To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow;
 To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
 Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
 Take thou this phial, being then in bed,
 And this distilled liquor drink thou off:
 When, presently, through all thy veins shall run
 A cold and drowsy humour, which shall seize Each vital spirit; for no pulse shall keep
 His natural progress, but surcease to beat:
 No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;
 The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
 To paly ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
 Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
 Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
 Shall stiff, and stark, and cold appear like death:
 And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
 Thou shalt remain full two-and-forty hours,
 And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
 Now, when the bridegroom in the morning comes
 To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
 Then (as the manner of our country is)
 In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
 Thou shalt be borne to the same ancient vault,
 Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
 In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
 Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;
 And hither shall he come; and he and I
 Will watch thy waking, and that very night
 Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
 And this shall free thee from this present shame;
 If no unconstant toy², nor womanish fear,
 Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, O give me! tell me not of fear.

Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed
 To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father! [Exeunt.

S C E N E II.

Capulet's House.

60 Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, Nurse, and Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.—
 Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

 hinder the performance.

² If no fickle freak, no light caprice, no change of fancy,

Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he, that cannot lick his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.— [Exit Servant.]
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.—

What, is my daughter gone to friar Lawrence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth. [her:] 10

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter Juliet.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shrift¹ with merry look. [been gadding?] 15

Cap. How now, my head-strong? where have you

Jul. Where I have learnt me to repent the sin Of disobedient opposition

To you, and your behests; and am enjoin'd By holy Lawrence to fall prostrate here, And beg your pardon:—Pardon, I beseech you! Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you. 20

Cap. Send for the county; go, tell him of this; I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Lawrence's cell; And gave him what becomed love I might, Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty. [up:] 25

Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well, stand This is as't should be.—Let me see the county; Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.— 30

Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar, All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet, To help me sort such needful ornaments As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow? 35

La. Cap. No, not 'till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her:—we'll to church to-morrow. [Exit Juliet, and Nurse.]

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision; 'Tis now near night. 40

Cap. Tush! I will stir about, And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife: Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;

I'll not to bed to-night;—let me alone: [ho!]— 45
I'll play the housewife for this once.—What, They are all forth: Well, I will walk myself

To county Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow: my heart is wondrous light, Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. 50

[Exit Capulet, and Lady Capulet.]

SCENE III.

Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Juliet, and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—But, gentle nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night; For I have need of many orisons

To move the heavens to smile upon my state, 60

Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. What, are you busy? do you need my help? [ries]

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries As are behoveful for our state to-morrow:

So please you, let me now be left alone, And let the nurse this night sit up with you; For, I am sure, you have your hands full all, In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good night! Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need. [Exit Lady, and Nurse.]

Jul. Farewell!—God knows, when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins, That almost freezes up the heat of life:

I'll call them back again to comfort me;—

Nurse!—What should she do here? My dismal scene I needs must act alone.

Come, phial.—

What if this mixture do not work at all?

Shall I of force be married to the count?—

No, no;—this shall forbid it:—lie thou there.— [Laying down a dagger².]

What if it be a poison, which the friar Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead;

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd, Because he married me before to Romeo?

I fear, it is: and yet, methinks, it should not, For he hath still been tried a holy man:

I will not entertain so bad a thought.—

How if, when I am laid into the tomb, I wake before the time that Romeo

Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!

Shall I not then be stifled in the vault, [in, To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes

And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes? Or, if I live, is it not very like

The horrible conceit of death and night, Together with the terror of the place,—

As in a vault, an ancient receptacle, Where, for these many hundred years, the bones

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth³, Lies fest'ring⁴ in his shroud; where, as they say, At some hours in the night spirits resort;—

Alack, alack! is it not like, that I, So early waking,—what with loathsome smells;

And shrieks like mandrakes torn out of the earth, That living mortals, hearing them, run mad—

O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught⁵, Environed with all these hideous fears?

And madly play with my forefathers' joints?

And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud? And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,

As with a club, dash out my desperate brains? O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost

Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body Upon a rapier's point:—Stay, Tybalt, stay!—

¹ i. e. from confession. ² This stage-direction has been supplied by the modern editors. The quarto, 1597, reads: "Knife, lie thou there."—It appears from several passages in our old plays, that knives were formerly part of the accoutrements of a bride. ³ i. e. fresh in earth, newly buried.

⁴ To fester is to corrupt. ⁵ Distraught is distracted.

Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[She throws herself on the bed.]

Capulet's Hall.

Enter Lady Capulet, and Nurse.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse. [pastry.]

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the Enter Capulet.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
The curfeu-bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock:—
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica:
Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, you cot-quean, go,
Get you to bed; 'faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit; What! I have watch'd ere now

All night for a less cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt Lady Capulet, and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now, fellow,
What's there?

Enter three or four, with spits, and logs, and baskets.

Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what. [drier logs!]

Cap. Make haste, make haste. Sirrah, fetch Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.

Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs, And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.]

Cap. Mass, and well said; A merry whoreson! ha, Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith, 'tis day:
The county will be here with musick straight,
[Musick within.]

For so he said he would. I hear him near:—

Nurse!—Wife!—what, ho!—what, Nurse, I say!

Enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up;
I'll go and chat with Paris:—Hie, make haste,
Make haste! the bridegroom he is come already:
Make haste, I say! [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Juliet's Chamber; Juliet on the Bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!—fast, I warrant her:—

Why, lamb!—why, lady!—fie, you slug-a-bed!—

Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—why, bride!—

What, not a word?—you take your penny-worths now;

Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
The county Paris hath set up his rest,¹

That you shall rest but little.—God forgive me,

(Marry, and amen!) how sound is she asleep!
I must needs wake her:—Madam! madam! ma-
Ay, let the county take you in your bed; [dam!
He'll fright you up, i' faith.—Will it not be?
5 What, drest! and in your clothes! and down again!
I must needs wake you:—Lady! lady! lady!
Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
Some aqua-vitæ, ho!—My lord!—my lady!

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. What's the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

15 La. Cap. O me, O me!—my child, my only life!
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—
Help, help!—call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come. [the day!]

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead; alack!

La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead. [cold;]

Cap. Ha! let me see her:—Out, alas! she's

25 Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Accursed time! unfortunate old man!

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. O woeful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

35 Enter Friar Lawrence, and Paris, with Musicians.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:—
O son, the night before thy wedding-day [lies,
Hath death lain with thy bride:—See, there she 40 Flower as she was, deflowered now by him.

Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded! I will die,
And leave him all: life leaving, all is death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face, 45 And doth it give me such a sight as this?

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful!
Most miserable hour, that time e'er saw [day!
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!

50 But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight!

Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day!
Most lamentable day! most woeful day,

55 That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain!
60 Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,

¹ This expression, which is frequently employed by the old dramatic writers, Mr. Steevens says, is taken from the manner of firing the harquebuss: This was so heavy a gun, that the soldiers were obliged to carry a supporter called a rest, which they fixed in the ground before they levelled to take aim.

By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!—

O love! O life!—not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!—

Uncomfortable time! why cam'st thou now

To murder murder our solemnity?—

O child! O child!—my soul, and not my child!—

Dead art thou!—alack! my child is dead;

And, with my child, my joys are buried!

Fri. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid:

Your part in her you could not keep from death;
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.

The most you sought was—her promotion;

For 'twas your heaven, she should be advanc'd:

And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd,

Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?

O, in this love, you love your child so ill,

That you run mad, seeing that she is well:

She's not well married, that lives marry'd long;

But she's best marry'd, that dies marry'd young.

Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary

On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,

In all her best array bear her to church:

For though fond nature bids us all lament,

Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,

Turn from their office to black funeral:

Our instruments, to melancholy bells;

Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial feast;

Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;

Our bridal flowers serve for a bury'd corse,

And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go with him;—

And go, sir Paris;—every one prepare

To follow this fair corse unto her grave:

The heavens do lour upon you, for some ill;

Move them no more, by crossing their high will.

[Exeunt Capulet, Lady Capulet, Paris, and Friar.]

Mus. 'Faith we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put up;

For, well you know, this is a pitiful case.

[Exit Nurse.]

Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, Heart's ease, heart's ease;

O, an you will have me live, play—heart's ease.

Mus. Why heart's ease?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays—

My heart is full of woe: O, play me some merry dump, to comfort me. [now.]

Mus. Not a dump¹ we; 'tis no time to play

Pet. You will not then?

Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith; but the glee²:

I will give you the minstrel.

Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets: I'll re you, I'll fa you; Do you note me?

Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit; I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron-dagger:—Answer me like men:

When griping grief the heart doth wound,

And doleful dumps the mind oppress,

Then musick, with her silver sound, [sound?

Why silver sound? why musick with her silver

What say you, Simon Catling? [sound.

1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

2 Mus. I say—silver sound, because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too!—What say you, James Sound-post?

3 Mus. 'Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy! you are the singer: I will say for you. It is—musick with her silver sound, because such fellows as you have no gold for sounding:—

Then musick with her silver sound,

With speedy help doth lend redress.

[Exit, singing.]

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same?

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here;
tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exeunt.]

A C T V.

SCENE I.

MANTUA.

A Street.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. IF I may trust the flattering truth of sleep³,

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:

My bosom's lord sits lightly on his throne;

And, all this day, an unaccustom'd spirit

Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.

I dreamt, my lady came and found me dead;

(Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think)

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,

That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.

¹ A dump anciently signified some kind of dance, as well as sorrow: On this occasion it means a mournful song.

² To gleek is to scoff.

³ A catling was a small lute string made of catgut.

⁴ The fiddler is so called from an instrument with three strings, mentioned by several of the old writers, Rebec, rebecquin.

⁵ The sense is, If I may only trust the honesty of sleep, which I know however not to be so nice as not often to practise flattery.—The oldest copy reads—the flattering eye of sleep.

Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy?

Enter Balthasar.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Balth. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill;
Her body sleeps in Capulet's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives;
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!—
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,
And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Balth. Pardon me, sir, I dare not leave you thus:
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Balth. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter; get thee gone,
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight.
[Exit Balthasar.]

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means:—O, mischief! thou art swift
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!
I do remember an apothecary,—

And hereabouts he dwells,—whom late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones;
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said—

An if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
O, this same thought did but fore-run my need;
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.—
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Apo. Who calls so loud? [poor;

Rom. Come hither, man.—I see, that thou art Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding geer
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead;
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently, as hasty powder fir'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb. [law

Apo. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's

Is death, to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness,
And fear'st to die? Famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Upon thy back hangs ragged misery,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law:
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Apo. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.

Apo. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold; worse poison to men's souls,

Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou may'st not
I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none. [sell:
Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
Come, cordial, and not poison; go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

Friar Lawrence's Cell.

Enter Friar John.

John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar Lawrence.

Law. This same should be the voice of friar John.—
Welcome from Mantua: What says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

John. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Law. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?

John. I could not send it,—here it is again,—
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Law. Unhappy fortune! By my brotherhood,
The letter was not nice¹, but full of charge
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. [Exit.]

Law. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within these three hours will fair Juliet wake;
She will beshrew me much, that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb! [Exit.]

SCENE III.

A Church-yard; in it, a Monument belonging to the Capulets.

Enter Paris, and his Page with a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: Hence, and stand aloof;—

¹ i. e. was not written on a trivial or foolish subject.

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the church-yard tread,
(Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves)
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the church-yard; yet I will adventure.

[Exit.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers I strew thy bridal bed: [Strewing flowers.

Sweet tomb, that in thy circuit dost contain
The perfect model of eternity;
Fair Juliet, that with angels dost remain,
Accept this latest favour at my hands;
That living honour'd thee, and, being dead,
With funeral praises do adorn thy tomb!

[The boy whistles.

The boy gives warning; something doth approach.
What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies, and true love's rites?
What, with a torch!—Muffle me, night, a while.

Enter Romeo, and Balthasar with a torch, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light: Upon thy life I charge thee,
Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.

Why I descend into this bed of death
Is, partly, to behold my lady's face:
But, chiefly, to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring; a ring, that I must use
In dear employment¹: therefore hence, be gone:—

But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
On what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint, [limbs:
And strew this hungry church-yard with thy
The time and my intents are savage-wild;
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tygers, or the roaring sea.

Balth. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou shew me friendship.—Take thou that:

Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow.

Balth. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout;
His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.

[Exit Balthasar.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Breaking up the monument.

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,
That murder'd my love's cousin;—with which
It is supposed, the fair creature dy'd,— [grief,
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.—
Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague;
Can vengeance be pursu'd further than death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.—

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Fly hence and leave me;—think upon these gone;
Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth,

15 Pull not another sin upon my head,
By urging me to fury:—O, be gone!
By heaven, I love thee better than myself;
For I come hither arm'd against myself:
Stay not, be gone;—live, and hereafter say—
A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjuration²,
And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee,
boy. [They fight, Paris falls.

Page. O lord! they fight: I will go call the watch.

Par. O, I am slain!—If thou be merciful,
Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.

Rom. In faith, I will:—Let me peruse this face;—

30 Mercutio's kinsman, noble county Paris:—
What said my man, when my betossed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think,
He told me, Paris should have marry'd Juliet:
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?

35 Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To think it was so?—O, give me thy hand,
One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!
I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,—

40 A grave? O, no; a lanthorn, slaughter'd youth,
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a feasting presence³ full of light.
Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying Paris in the monument.

How oft when men are at the point of death
Have they been merry? which their keepers call
A lightning before death: O, how may I
Call this a lightning?—O, my love! my wife!
Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:

45 Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
Tybalt, ly'st thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O, what more favour can I do to thee,

55 Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin!—Ah, dear Juliet,

¹ That is, action of importance.—Gems were supposed to have great powers and virtues. ² Paris conceived Romeo to have burst open the monument for no other purpose than to do some villainous shame on the dead bodies, such as witches are reported to have practised; and therefore tells him he defies him, and the magic arts which he suspects he is preparing to use.—To defy, also anciently meant to refuse or deny; therefore Paris may mean—I refuse to do as thou conjurest me to do, i. e. to depart.

³ A presence is a public room.

Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe—
 I will believe (come lie thou in my arms)
 That unsubstantial death is amorous;
 And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
 Thee here in dark to be his paramour.
 For fear of that, I will stay with thee;
 And never from this palace of dim night
 Depart again: here, here will I remain
 With worms that are thy chambermaids; O, here
 Will I set up my everlasting rest¹;
 And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars [last!
 From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you
 The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
 A dateless bargain to engrossing death!—
 Come, bitter conduct², come, unsavoury guide!
 Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
 The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
 Here's to thy health, where'er thou tumblest in:
 Here's to my love!—[Drinks;] O, true apothecary!
 Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die. [Dies.
Enter Friar Lawrence, with a lanthorn, crow and spade, [night

Law. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to—Have my old feet stumbled at graves³!—Who's there?

Enter Balthasar.

Balth. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well. [friend,

Law. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my
 What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light
 To grubs and eyeless skulls? As I discern,
 It burneth in the Capulets' monument.

Balth. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,
 One that you love.

Law. Who is it?

Balth. Romeo.

Law. How long hath he been there?

Balth. Full half an hour.

Law. Go with me to the vault.

Balth. I dare not, sir:

My master knows not but I am gone hence;
 And fearfully did menace me with death,
 If I did stay to look on his intents. [me;

Law. Stay then, I'll go alone.—Fear comes upon
 O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Balth. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
 I dreamt my master and another fought,
 And that my master slew him.

Law. Romeo?—

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains
 The stony entrance of this sepulchre?

What mean these masterless and gory swords
 To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?—

Romeo! O, pale!—Who else? what, Paris too?
 And steep'd in blood?—Ah, what an unkind hour
 Is guilty of this lamentable chance!—

The lady stirs.

Jul. [waking.] O, comfortable friar, where is
 my lord?

I do remember well where I should be,
 And there I am:—Where is my Romeo?

[Noise within.

Law. I hear some noise.—Lady, come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural⁴ sleep;
 A greater power than we can contradict

Hath thwarted our intents; come, come away;
 Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;

10 And Paris too; come, I'll dispose of thee
 Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:
 Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;

Come, go, good Juliet,—[noise again;] I dare stay
 no longer. [Exit.

15 Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.—
 What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's hand?

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end:—
 O churl! drink all; and leave no friendly drop,
 To help me after?—I will kiss thy lips;

20 Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,
 To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him.
 Thy lips are warm!

Watch. [within.] Lead, boy:—Which way?

Jul. Yea, noise?—then I'll be brief.—O happy dagger! [Snatching Romeo's dagger.

25 This is thy sheath; [stabs herself;] there rust, and let me die.

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

Watch. The ground is bloody; Search about the church-yard;

Go, some of you, whome'er you find, attach.
 [Exeunt some

35 Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain;—
 And Juliet bleeding; warm, and newly dead,
 Who here hath lain these two days buried.—

Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,— Raise up the Montagues,—some others search:—

40 We see the ground whereon these woes do lie;
 But the true ground of all these piteous woes
 We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the Watch, with Balthasar.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the church-yard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, 'till the prince come hither.

Enter another Watchman, with Friar Lawrence.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs,
 and weeps:

We took this mattock and this spade from him,
 As he was coming from this church-yard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion; Stay the friar too.
Enter the Prince, and Attendants.

55 Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
 That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter Capulet, and Lady Capulet, &c.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?
La. Cap. The people in the street cry—Romeo,
 60 Some—Juliet, and some—Paris; and all run,

¹ See a note on scene 5th of the preceding act.—To set up one's rest, is to be determined to any certain purpose, to rest in perfect confidence and resolution, to make up one's mind. ² Conduct for conductor. ³ This accident was reckoned ominous. ⁴ Shakspeare alludes to the sleep of Juliet, which was unnatural, being brought on by drugs.

With open out-cry, toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this, which startles in our ears?

Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county Paris slain;
And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before,
Warm, and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man;

With instruments upon them, fit to open
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O, heaven!—O, wife! look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en, for, lo! his house
Lies empty on the back¹ of Montague,
And it mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom,

La. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter Montague, and others.

Prince. Come, Montague, for thou art early up,
To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night;
Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath:
What further woe conspires against my age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in this,
To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while,
'Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death: Mean time forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience.—
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Law. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Law. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:
I married them, and their stolen marriage-day
Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city;

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.
You—to remove that siege of grief from her—

Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,
To county Paris:—Then comes she to me;

And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means
To rid her from this second marriage,

Or, in my cell, there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,

A sleeping potion; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her

The form of death: mean time I writ to Rome,
That he should hither come as this dire night,

To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease.

But he, which bore my letter, friar John,
Was stay'd by accident; and yesternight

Return'd my letter back: Then all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,

Came I to take her from her kindred's vault;
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,

'Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:

But, when I came, (some minute ere the time
Of her awaking) here untimely lay

The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth,

And bear this work of heaven with patience:

But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,

But (as it seems) did violence on herself.
All this I know: and to the marriage

Her nurse is privy: And, if aught in this Miscarry'd by my fault, let my old life

Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.

Where's Romeo's man? what can he say to this?

Balth. I brought my master news of Juliet's death;

And then in post he came from Mantua,
To this same place, to this same monument.

This letter he early bid me give his father;
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,

If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.
Where is the county's page that rais'd the watch?—

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:
Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb;

And, by-and-by, my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes, that he did buy a poison

Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.—

Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!—
See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,

That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!
And I, for winking at your discords too,

Have lost a brace of kinsmen:—all are punish'd.

Cap. O, brother Montague, give me thy hand:
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more

Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more
For I will raise her statue in pure gold;

That, while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set,

As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

¹ It appears that the dagger was anciently worn behind the back.

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;
The sun, for sorrow, will not shew his head:
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;

Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
For never was a story of more woe,
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo.
[Exeunt omnes.]

¹ Mr. Steevens says, that this line has reference to the novel from which the fable is taken. Here we read that Juliet's female attendant was banished for concealing her marriage; Romeo's servant set at liberty, because he had only acted in obedience to his master's orders; the apothecary taken, tortured, condemned, and hanged; while friar Lawrence was permitted to retire to a hermitage in the neighbourhood of Verona, where he ended his life in penitence and peace.

SCENE I.

Elsinour.

A Platform before the Palace.

Francisco on his post. Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. WHO's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me²: stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief, much thanks: 'tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,

The rivals of my watch³, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio, and Marcellus.

Fran. I think, I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier;

Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo hath my place.

Give you good night.

[Exit Francisco.]

Mar. Holla! Bernardo?

Ber. Say,

What, is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.

[night?]

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to-

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says, 'tis but our phantasy;

And will not let belief take hold of him,

Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us:

Therefore I have entreated him, along

With us to watch the minutes of this night;

That, if again this apparition come,

¹ The original story on which this play is built, may be found in Saxo Grammaticus, the Danish historian.

² i. e. me who am already on the watch, and have a right to demand the watch-word.

³ Rivals for partners, according to Warburton.—Hanmer says, that by rivals of the watch are meant those who were to watch on the next adjoining ground.—Rivals, in the original sense of the word, were proprietors of neighbouring lands, parted only by a brook, which belonged equally to both.

He may approve our eyes¹, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush! tush! 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down a while;

And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all, [pole,
When yon same star, that's westward from the
Had made his course to illumine that part of heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself,
The bell then beating one,—

Mar. Peace, break thee off; look where it comes again!

Enter Ghost.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar, speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio. [wonder.

Hor. Most like: it harrows² me with fear and

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Speak to it, Horatio. [night,

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of Together with that fair and warlike form

In which the majesty of bury'd Denmark [speak.
Did sometime march? By heaven I charge thee,

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. Sec! it stalks away.

Hor. Stay; speak; I charge thee, speak.

[Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio? you tremble, and look pale:

Is not this something more than phantasy?

What think you of it?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself;

Such was the very armour he had on,
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sledded Polack³ on the ice.

'Tis strange.

[hour,

Mar. Thus, twice before, and just at this dead
With martial stalk he hath gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work⁴, I know not;

But, in the gross and scope⁵ of mine opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch

So nightly toils the subject of the land?

And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,

And foreign mart for implements of war?

Why such impress of ship-wrights, whose sore task

Does not divide the Sunday from the week?

What might be toward, that this sweaty haste

Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day;

Who is't that can inform me?

Hor. That can I;

At least the whisper goes so. Our last king,

Whose image even but now appear'd to us,

Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,

Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,

Dar'd to the combat; in which, our valiant Hamlet

(For so this side of our known world esteem'd him)

Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,

Well ratify'd by law, and heraldry,

Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands,

Which he stood seis'd of, to the conqueror:

Against the which, a moiety competent

Was gaged by our king; which had return'd

To the inheritance of Fortinbras,

Had he been vanquisher; as, by that covenant,

And carriage of the articles design'd⁶,

His fell to Hamlet: Now, sir, young Fortinbras,

Of unimproved⁷ mettle hot and full,

Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,

Shark'd up⁸ a list of landless resolute,

For food and diet, to some enterprise

That hath a stomach⁹ in't; which is no other

(As it doth well appear unto our state)

But to recover of us, by strong hand,

And terms compulsory, those foresaid lands

So by his father lost: And this, I take it,

Is the main motive of our preparations;

The source of this our watch; and the chief head

Of this post-haste and romage¹⁰ in the land.

Ber. I think, it be no other, but even so:

Well may it sort, that this portentous figure

Comes armed through our watch; so like the king

That was, and is the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is, to trouble the mind's eye.

In the most high and palmy¹¹ state of Rome,

A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,

The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead

Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets;

Stars shone with trains of fire; dews of blood fell;

Disasters¹² veil'd the sun; and the moist star,

Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands,

Was sick almost to dooms-day with eclipse.

And even the like precursor of fierce¹³ events,—

As harbingers preceding still the fates,

And prologue to the omen¹⁴ coming on,—

Have heaven and earth together demonstrated

Unto our climatures and countrymen.—

¹ i. e. add a new testimony to that of our eyes. The word is of Saxon origin.

² To harrow is to conquer, to subdue. The word is of Saxon origin. ³ He speaks of a prince in Poland whom he slew in battle. Polack was, in that age, the term for an inhabitant of Poland: Polaque, French. A sled, or sledge, is a carriage made use of in the cold countries.

⁴ i. e. what particular train of thinking to follow. ⁵ i. e. general thoughts, and tendency at large. ⁶ Carriage is import: design'd, is formed, drawn up between them.

⁷ Unimproved, for unrefined. ⁸ To shark up may mean to pick up without distinction, as the shark fish collects his prey. ⁹ Stomach, in the time of our author, was used for constancy, resolution.

¹⁰ i. e. tumultuous hurry. ¹¹ Palmy for victorious, flourishing. ¹² Disasters is here finely used in its original signification of evil conjunction of stars. ¹³ Fierce, for conspicuous, glaring. ¹⁴ Omen, for fate.

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft; behold! lo, where it comes again!
I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:

If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease, and grace to me,
Speak to me:

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which, haply, foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak!

Or, if thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death,

[Cock crows.]

Speak of it:—stay, and speak.—Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partizan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'Tis here!

Hor. 'Tis here!

Mar. 'Tis gone!

[Exit Ghost.]

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air¹,
The extravagant² and erring spirit hies
To his confine³: and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock⁴.
Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then, they say, no spirit dares stir abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes⁵, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill:
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him:
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning
know

Where we shall find him most convenient. [Exeunt.]

S C E N E II.

A Room of State.

Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes
Voltimeand, Cornelius, Lords and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death

The memory be green; and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole king-
To be contracted in one brow of woe; [dom
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.

Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious, and one dropping eye;
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole,—
Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair so long:—For all, our thanks.

Now follows, that you know, young Fortin-
Holding a weak supposal of our worth; [bras,—
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death,
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,—
Colleagu'd with this dream of his advantage⁶,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message
Importing the surrender of those lands

Lost by his father, with all bands of law,
To our most valiant brother.—So much for him.

Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting:
Thus much the business is: We have here writ

To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His further gait⁷ herein; in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject:—and we here dispatch

You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimeand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles⁸ allows.

Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.

Vol. In that and all things will we shew our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing; heartily farewell.

[Exeunt Voltimeand, and Cornelius.]

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; What is't, Laertes?

You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice: What would'st thou beg,
Laertes,

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?

⁴ This is a very ancient superstition. ⁵ No fairy strikes with lameness or diseases. ⁶ The meaning is, He goes to war so indiscreetly, and unprepared, that he has no allies to support him but a dream, with which he is colleagu'd or confederated. ⁷ Gate or gait is here used in the northern sense, for proceeding, passage. ⁸ i. e. the articles when dilated.

The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father¹.
What would'st thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France: [mark,
From whence though willingly I came to Den-
To shew my duty in your coronation;
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius? [slow leave,

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my
By laboursome petition: and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,

And thy best graces spend it at thy will.—

But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind².

[Aside.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you? [sun³.

Ham. Not so, my lord, I am too much i' the Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,

And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not, for ever, with thy veiled⁴ lids

Seek for thy noble father in the dust: [die,

Thou know'st, 'tis common: all, that live, must Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee? [seems.

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,

Nor customary suits of solemn black,

Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,

No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,

Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,

Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,

That can denote me truly: These, indeed, seem,

For they are actions that a man might play:

But I have that within, which passeth show;

These, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give those mourning duties to your father:

But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his⁵; and the survivor
In filial obligation, for some term [bound,

To do obsequious⁶ sorrow: but to persevere

5 In obstinate condolence⁷, is a course

Of impious stubbornness: 'tis unmanly grief:

It shews a will most incorrect⁸ to heaven;

A heart unfortify'd, or mind impatient;

An understanding simple and unschool'd:

10 For what, we know, must be, and is as common

As any the most vulgar thing to sense,

Why should we, in our peevish opposition,

Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,

A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,

15 To reason most absurd, whose common theme

Is death of fathers, and who still hath cry'd,

From the first corse, 'till he that died to-day,

This must be so. We pray you throw to earth

This unprevailing woe; and think of us

20 As of a father: for, let the world take note,

You are the most immediate to our throne;

And, with no less nobility⁹ of love

Than that which dearest father bears his son,

Do I impart¹⁰ toward you. For your intent

25 In going back to school in Wittenberg,

It is most retrograde to our desire:

And, we beseech you, bend you to remain

Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,

Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

30 Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,

Hamlet;

I pray thee, stay with us, go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply;

35 Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;

This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet

Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,

No jocund health, that Denmark drinks to-day,

But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;

40 And the king's rouse the heaven shall bruit again,

Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come, away.

[Exeunt.

Manet Hamlet.

Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,

45 Thaw, and resolve¹¹ itself into a dew!

Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd [God!

His canon¹² 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O

How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable

Seem to me all the uses of this world!

50 Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,

¹ The sense is, The head is not formed to be more useful to the heart, the hand is not more at the service of the mouth, than my power is at your father's service. ² Hammer observes, It is not unreasonable to suppose that this was a proverbial expression, known in former times for a relation so confused and blended, that it was hard to define it.—Dr. Johnson asserts kind to be the Teutonic word for child: Hamlet therefore, he adds, answers with propriety, to the titles of cousin, and son, which the king had given him, that he was somewhat more than cousin, and less than son.—Mr. Steevens says that a jingle of the same sort is found in another old play, and seems to have been proverbial, as he has met with it more than once. ³ Mr. Farmer questions whether a quibble between sun and son be not here intended. ⁴ With lowering eyes, cast-down eyes. ⁵ That is, Your father lost a father, i. e. your grandfather, which lost grandfather also lost his father. ⁶ Obsequious is here from obsequies or funeral ceremonies. ⁷ Condolence, for sorrow. ⁸ Incorrect, for untutor'd. ⁹ Nobility here means generosity. ¹⁰ i. e. communicate whatever I can bestow. ¹¹ Resolve means the same as dissolve. ¹² i. e. that he had not restrained suicide by his express law and peremptory prohibition.

That grows to seed; things rank, and gross in nature,
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead!—Nay, not so much, not
So excellent a king; that was to this, [two: 5
Hyperion to a satyr¹: so loving to my mother,
That he might not let e'en the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? Why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: And yet, within a month,— Let me not think on't:—Frailty, thy name is woman!—

A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body, 15
Like Niobé, all tears:—why she, even she,—
O heaven! a beast, that wants discourse of reason
Would have mourn'd longer,—marry'd with my uncle,

My father's brother; but no more like my father, 20
Than I to Hercules: Within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She marry'd.—O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to good:
But break, my heart; for I must hold my tongue!

Enter Horatio, Bernardo, and Marcellus.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well:

Horatio,—or do I forget myself? [ever.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant

Ham. Sir, my good friend: I'll change that name with you².

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?— 35 Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,— [sir.—

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even,
But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinour?

We'll teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral. [student;

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow—
I think it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! The funeral bak'd meats³

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

'Would I had met my dearest⁴ foe in heaven,
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!—

My father,—Methinks, I see my father.

Hor. O where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,

I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw! who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father!

Hor. Season⁵ your admiration for a while
With an attent ear; 'till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For heaven's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead waste and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,
Arm'd at all points, exactly cap-à-pé,
Appears before them, and, with solemn march,
Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd
By their oppress and fear-surprized eyes, [till'd
Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, dis-
Almost to jelly, with the act of fear,
Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did:
And I with them, the third night, kept the watch;
Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and good,
The apparition comes: I knew your father;
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this? [watch'd.

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did;

But answer made it none: yet once, methought,
It lifted up its head, and did address
Itself to motion, like as it would speak:
But, even then, the morning cock crew loud;
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true;
And we did think it writ down in our duty,
To let you know of it. [me.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles
45 Hold you the watch to-night?

All. We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

All. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not his face?

Hor. O, yes, my lord; he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What, look'd he frowningly?

Hor. A countenance more

55 In sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale, or red?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?

Hor. Most constantly.

¹ By the Satyr is meant Pan; as by Hyperion, Apollo.—Pan and Apollo were brothers; and the allusion is to the contention between those gods for the preference in music. ² i. e. I'll be your servant, you shall be my friend.

³ It was anciently the general custom to give a cold entertainment to mourners at a funeral. In distant counties, this practice is continued among the yeomanry.

⁴ Dearest is most immediate, consequential, important.

⁵ Eye is certainly more worthy of Shakespeare. ⁶ That is, temper it.

Ham.

Ham. I would I had been there.
Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.
Ham. Very like,
 Very like: Stay'd it long?

Hor. While one with moderate haste
 Might tell a hundred.

Both. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw it.

Ham. His beard was grizzl'd? no?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
 A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night;
 Perchance, 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant, it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
 I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
 And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
 If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
 Let it be tenable in your silence still;
 And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
 Give it an understanding, but no tongue;
 I will requite your loves: So, fare you well:
 Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
 I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: Farewell.

[Exeunt.]

My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
 I doubt some foul play: 'would, the night were come!

'Till then sit still, my soul: Foul deeds will rise (Though all the earth o'erwhelm them) to men's eyes. [Exit.]

S C E N E III.

An Apartment in Polonius' House.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd; farewell:
 And, sister, as the winds give benefit,
 And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
 But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that? [vour,

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his fa-
 Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood;
 A violet in the youth of primy nature,
 Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
 The perfume and suppliance¹ of a minute;
 No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more:

For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
 In thews², and bulk: but, as this temple waxes,
 The inward service of the mind and soul
 Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now;
 And now no soil, nor cautel³, doth besmirch
 The virtue⁴ of his will: but, you must fear,

His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
 For he himself is subject to his birth:
 He may not, as unvalued persons do,
 Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
 5 The safety and the health of the whole state;
 And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
 Unto the voice and yielding of that body, Whereof he is the head: Then if he says, he loves you,

10 It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,
 As he in his particular act and place
 May give his saying deed; which is no further,
 Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
 Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
 15 If with too credent ear you list his songs;
 Or lose your heart; or your chaste treasure open
 To his unmaster'd⁵ importunity.
 Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
 And keep you in the rear of your affection,
 20 Out of the shot and danger of desire.

The chariest⁶ maid is prodigal enough,
 If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
 Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes:
 The canker galls the infants of the spring
 25 Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd;
 And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
 Contagious blastments are most imminent.
 Be wary then: best safety lies in fear;
 Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

30 Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
 As watchman to my heart: but, good my brother,
 Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
 Shew me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
 Whilst, like a puft and reckless libertine,
 35 Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
 And recks not his own read⁷.

Laer. O, fear me not.

I stay too long;—But here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.

40 A double blessing is a double grace;
 Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame;

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,

45 And you are staid for: There,—my blessings with you; [Laying his hand on Laertes' head.]

And these few precepts in thy memory
 Look thou character: Give thy thoughts no tongue,
 Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.

50 Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.

The friends thou hast, and their adoption try'd,
 Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;

But do not dull thy palm with entertainment

Of each new-hatch'd unfledg'd comrade⁸. Be-

55 Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in, [ware
 Bear it that the opposer may beware of thee.

Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice:

¹ i. e. what is supplied to us for a minute. The idea seems to be taken from the short duration of vegetable perfumes. ² i. e. in sinews, muscular strength. ³ i. e. no fraud, deceit. ⁴ Virtue seems here to comprise both excellence and power, and may be explained the pure effect. ⁵ i. e. li-centious. ⁶ Chary is cautious. ⁷ That is, heeds not his own lessons. ⁸ The literal sense is,

Do not make thy palm callous by shaking every man by the hand. The figurative meaning may be,
 Do not by promiscuous conversation make thy mind insensible to the difference of characters.

Take each man's censure¹, but reserve thy judgement.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France, of the best rank and station,
Are most select, and generous chief² in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—To thine ownself be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season³ this in thee!

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord. [tend⁴.

Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key⁵ of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit Laertes.

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:

'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and boun-
If it be so, (as so 'tis put on me, [teous: 30
And that in way of caution,) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly,
As it behoves my daughter, and your honour:
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many 35
Of his affection to me. [tenders

Pol. Affection? puh! you speak like a green girl,

Unsifted⁶ in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them? 40

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think. [baby;

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more 45
dearly;

Or (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase)
Wronging it thus⁷, you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love,
In honourable fashion. 50

Pol. Ay, fashion⁸ you may call it: go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech,
my lord,

With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

5 Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks⁹. I do know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: These blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,

10 Even in their promise, as it is a making,—
You must not take for fire. From this time,
Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence;
Set your entreatments¹⁰ at a higher rate,
Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet,

15 Believe so much in him, That he is young;
And with a larger tether¹¹ may he walk,
Than may be given you: In few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows: for they are brokers;
Not of that dye which their investments shew,

20 But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
The better to beguile¹². This is for all,—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,

25 Have you so slander any moment's leisure,
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.
Look to't, I charge you; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exit.

S C E N E IV.

The Platform.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: it then draws near the season,

40 Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[Noise of music within.

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse¹³, [reels:

45 Keeps wassel¹⁴, and the swaggering up-spring¹⁵
And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum, and trumpet, thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

50 Ham. Ay, marry, is't:

¹ Censure is opinion. ² Chief is an adjective used adverbially; a practice common to our author: Chiefly generous. ³ That is, infix it in such a manner as that it never may wear out. ⁴ i. e. your servants are waiting for you. ⁵ The meaning is, that your counsels are as sure of remaining locked up in my memory, as if you yourself carried the key of it. ⁶ Unsifted, for untried.—Untried signifies either not tempted, or not refined; unsifted, signifies the latter only, though the sense requires the former. ⁷ That is, if you continue to go on thus wrong. ⁸ She uses fashion for manner, and he for a transient practice. ⁹ A proverbial saying. ¹⁰ Entreatments here means company, conversation; from the French entrétien. ¹¹ Tether is that string by which an animal, set to graze in grounds uninclosed, is confined within the proper limits. ¹² Do not believe (says Polonius to his daughter) Hamlet's amorous vows made to you; which pretend religion in them (the better to beguile) like those sanctified and pious vows [or bonds] made to Heaven. ¹³ A rouse is a large dose of liquor, a debauch. ¹⁴ See Macbeth, Act I. ¹⁵ That is, the blustering upstart, according to Dr. Johnson: but Mr. Steevens says, that up-spring was a German dance; and that the spring was also anciently the name of a tune.

But, to my mind,—though I am native here,
 And to the manner born,—it is a custom
 More honour'd in the breach, than the observance.
 This heavy-headed revel, east and west,
 Makes us traduc'd, and tax'd of other nations:
 They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase
 Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes
 From our achievements, tho' perform'd at height,
 The pith and marrow of our attribute.
 So, oft it chances in particular men,
 That, for some vicious mole of nature in them,
 As, in their birth (wherein they are not guilty,
 Since nature cannot choose his origin),
 By the o'er-growth of some complexion¹,
 Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason;
 Or by some habit, that too much o'er-leavens
 The form of plausible manners;—that these men,
 Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect;
 Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,—
 Their virtues else (be they as pure as grace,
 As infinite as man may undergo)
 Shall in the general censure take corruption
 From that particular fault: The dram of base
 Doth all the noble substance of worth out²,
 To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
 Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn'd; [hell;
 Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from
 Be thy intents wicked, or charitable,
 Thou com'st in such a questionable shape³,
 That I will speak to thee; I'll call thee, Hamlet,
 King, father, royal Dane: O, answer me!
 Let me not burst in ignorance! but tell,
 Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,
 Have burst their cearments? why the sepulchre,
 Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn'd,
 Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
 To cast thee up again? What may this mean,—
 That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel⁴,
 Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
 Making night hideous; and we fools of nature⁵
 So horridly to shake our disposition⁶,
 With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
 Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
 As if it some impartment did desire
 To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action
 It waves you to a more removed ground:
 But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then I will follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
 I do not set my life at a pin's fee⁷;

And for my soul, what can it do to that,
 Being a thing immortal as itself?

It waves me forth again;—I'll follow it.

Hor. What, if it tempt you toward the flood,
 my lord?

Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff,
 That beetles o'er his base into the sea?
 And there assume some other horrible form,
 Which might deprive⁸ your sovereignty of reason,
 And draw you into madness? think of it:
 The very place puts toys⁹ of desperation,
 Without more motive, into every brain,
 That looks so many fathoms to the sea,
 And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still:—

Go on, I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. Be rul'd, you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out,
 And makes each petty artery in this body
 As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.—
 Still am I call'd—unhand me, gentlemen;—
 [Breaking from them.]

By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets¹⁰ me:
 I say, away:—Go on;—I'll follow thee.

[Exeunt Ghost, and Hamlet.]

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Hor. Have after:—To what issue will this come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Den-

Hor. Heaven will direct it. mark.

Mar. Nay, let's follow him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

A more remote Part of the Platform.

Re-enter Ghost, and Hamlet.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak, I'll go no further.

Ghost. Mark me.

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,
 When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
 Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost!

Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
 To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak, I am bound to hear. [hear.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;
 Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night;
 And, for the day, confin'd to fast in fires,
 'Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature,
 Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid
 To tell the secrets of my prison-house,

¹ i. e. humour; as sanguine, melancholy, phlegmatic, &c. ² The dram of base means the least alloy of baseness or vice: To do a thing out, is to extinguish it, or to efface or obliterate any thing painted or written. ³ i. e. in a shape or form capable of being conversed with.—To question, certainly, in our author's time signified to converse.

⁶ Disposition, for frame. ⁷ i. e. the value of a pin. ⁸ i. e. take away. ⁹ Toys for whims. ¹⁰ i. e. hinders or prevents me.

I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young blood;
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres;

Thy knotty and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand on end
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine :
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood :—List, list, O list !—
If thou didst ever thy dear father love,——

Ham. O heaven !

[murder.

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural

Ham. Murder ?

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is ;
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Haste me to know it; that I, with wings
as swift

As meditation¹, or the thoughts of love,
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt ;

And duller should'st thou be than the fat weed
That rots itself in ease on Lethè's wharf, Would'st thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear :
'Tis given out, that, sleeping in my orchard,
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Den-
Is by a forged process of my death [mark
Rankly abus'd : but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent, that did sting thy father's life,
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O, my prophetic soul ! my uncle ?

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,
(O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce !) won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen :
O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there !
From me, whose love was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine !

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heav'n ;
So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
And prey on garbage.

But soft ! methinks, I scent the morning air—
Brief let me be :—Sleeping within mine orchard²,
My custom always of the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebenon³ in a vial,
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leperous distilment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man,

That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body ;
And, with a sudden vigour, it doth posset
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood : so did it mine ;
And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd⁴ :
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousell'd⁵, disappointed⁶, unaneal'd⁷ ;
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head :

15 O horrible ! O horrible ! most horrible !

If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not ;

Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury⁸ and damned incest.

But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act,

20 Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught ; leave her to heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once !
The glow-worm shews the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire⁹ :

Adieu, adieu, adieu ! remember me. [Exit.

Ham. O all you host of heaven ! O earth ! What else ? [heart :

And shall I couple hell ?—O fie !—Hold, hold, my

30 And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,

But bear me stiffly up !—Remember thee ?

Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe¹⁰. Remember thee ?

Yea, from the table of my memory

35 I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,

All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,

That youth and observation copied there ;

And thy commandment all alone shall live

Within the book and volume of my brain,

40 Unmix'd with baser matter : yes, by heaven.

O most pernicious woman !

O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain !

My tables,—meet it is, I set it down,

That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain :

45 At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark :

[Writing.

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word¹¹ ;

It is, Adieu, adieu ! remember me.

I have sworn it.

50 Hor. My lord, my lord,——

[Within.

Mar. Lord Hamlet,——

[Within.

Hor. Heavens secure him !

[Within.

Ham. So be it !

Mar. Illo, ho, ho, my lord !

[Within.

¹ This similitude is extremely beautiful. The word meditation is consecrated, by the mystics, to signify that stretch and flight of mind which aspires to the enjoyment of the supreme good : So that Hamlet, considering with what to compare the swiftness of his revenge, chooses two of the most rapid things in nature, the ardency of divine and human passion, in an enthusiast and a lover. ² Orchard for garden. ³ That is, henbane. ⁴ Dispatch'd for bereft. ⁵ i. e. without the sacrament taken; from the old Saxon word for the sacrament, housel. ⁶ Disappointed is the same as unappointed; and may be properly explained unprepared. ⁷ i. e. unanointed, not having the extreme unction. ⁸ i. e. for lewdness. ⁹ i. e. fire that is no longer seen when the light of morning approaches. ¹⁰ i. e. in this head confused with thought. ¹¹ Hamlet alludes to the watch-word given every day in the military service, which at this time he says is, Adieu, adieu, remember me.

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come!¹
Enter Horatio, and Marcellus.
Mar. How is't, my noble lord?
Hor. What news, my lord?
Ham. O wonderful!
Hor. Good my lord, tell it.
Ham. No; you will reveal it.
Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.
Mar. Nor I, my lord.
Ham. How say you then; would heart of man once think it?—
 But you'll be secret,—
Both. Ay, by heaven, my lord. [mark,
Ham. There'sne'era villain, dwelling in all Den-
 But he's an arrant knave.
Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave,
 To tell us this.
Ham. Why, right; you are in the right;
 And so, without more circumstance at all,
 I hold it fit, that we shake hands, and part:
 You, as your business and desire, shall point you;
 For every man hath business and desire,
 Such as it is,—and, for my own poor part,
 Look you, I will go pray.
Hor. These are but wild and whirling words,
 my lord.
Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily;
 Yes'faith, heartily.
Hor. There's no offence, my lord.
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,
 And much offence too. Touching this vision here,—
 It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you:
 For your desire to know what is between us,
 O'er-master it as you may. And now, good friends,
 As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
 Give me one poor request.
Hor. What is't, my lord? we will.
Ham. Never make known what you have seen
 to-night.
Both. My lord, we will not.
Ham. Nay, but swear it.
Hor. In faith, my lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.
Ham. Upon my sword.
Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.
Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.
Ghost. [beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, true-penny?
 Come on,—you hear this fellow in the celleridge,—
 Consent to swear.
Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.
Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
 Swear by my sword².
Ghost. [beneath.] Swear. [ground:—
Ham. Hic & ubique? then we'll shift our Come hither, gentlemen,
 And lay your hands again upon my sword:
 Swear by my sword,
 Never to speak of this that you have heard.
Ghost. [beneath.] Swear by his sword.
Ham. Well said, old mole! can'st work i' the earth so fast? [friends.
 A worthy pioneer!—Once more remove, good
Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange! [come!
Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it wel-
 There are more things in heaven and earth, Hora-
 Than are dreamt of in your philosophy. [tio,
 But come;—
 Here, as before, never, so help you mercy!
 How strange or odd soe'er I bear myself,—
 As I, perchance, hereafter shall think meet
 To put an antick disposition on,—
 That you, at such times seeing me, never shall (With arms encumber'd thus; or this head-shake;
 Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
 As, Well, well, we know;—or, We could, an if we would;—or, If we list to speak;—or, There be, an if they might;—
 Or such ambiguous giving out;) denote
 That you know aught of me: This do ye swear,
 So grace and mercy at your most need help you!
 Swear.
Ghost. [beneath.] Swear. [men,
Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!—So, gentle-
 With all my love I do commend me to you:
 And what so poor a man as Hamlet is
 May do, to express his love and friending to you,
 God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;
 And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.
 The time is out of joint;—O cursed spight!
 That ever I was born to set it right!—
 Nay, come, let's go together. [Exeunt.

S C E N E I.

An Apartment in Polonius' House.Enter Polonius, and Reynaldo.Pol. GIVE him this money, and these notes, Reynaldo.Rey. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Rey-
 Before you visit him, to make enquiry [naldo,
 Of his behaviour.
Rey. My lord, I did intend it. [sir,
Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look you,
 Enquire me first what Danskers⁴ are in Paris;

¹ This is the call which falconers use to their hawk in the air when they would have him come down to them. ² It was common to swear upon the sword, that is, upon the cross which the old swords always had upon the hilt. ³ i. e. receive it to yourself; take it under your own roof; as much as to say, Keep it secret;—alluding to the laws of hospitality. ⁴ Danske is the ancient name of Denmark. And

And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expence; and finding, By this encompassment and drift of question, That they do know my son, come you more nearer; 5 Then your particular demands will touch it: [him; Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of As thus,—I know his father, and his friends, And, in part, him, Do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord. [not well: 10

Pol. And, in part, him;—but, you may say,— But, if 't be he I mean, he's very wild; Addicted so and so;—and there put on him What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank As may dishonour him; take heed of that; But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips, As are companions noted and most known To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, Quarrelling, drabbing:—You may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge. You must not put another scandal on him, That he is open to incontinency; [quaintly, 25 That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults so That they may seem the taints of liberty; The flash and out-break of a fiery mind; A savageness¹ in unreclaimed blood, Of general assault².

Rey. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Rey. Ay, my lord,

I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;

And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:

You laying these slight sullies on my son,

As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,

Mark you, Your party in converse, him you would sound,

Having ever seen, in the prenominate³ crimes,

The youth, you breathe of, guilty, be assur'd,

He closes with you in this consequence;

Good sir, or so⁴; or friend, or gentleman,—

According to the phrase, or the addition,

Of man, and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord. [What was I

Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—He does—

About to say? I was about to say

Something: Where did I leave?

Pol. At, closes in the consequence.

Rey. At, closes in the consequence,—Ay, marry;

He closes with you thus:—I know the gentleman;

I saw him yesterday, or t' other day, [say, 55

Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you

There was he gaming; there o'ertook in his rouse;

There falling out at tennis: or, perchance,

I saw him enter such a house of sale,

(Videlicet, a brothel) or so forth.—See you now; Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth: And thus do we of wisdom and of reach, With windlances, and with assays of bias, By indirections find directions out; So, by my former lecture and advice, Shall you my son: You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord,—

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself⁵.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his musick.

Rey. Well, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Pol. Farewell.—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter? [frighted!

Oph. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so af-

Pol. With what, in the name of heaven?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet, Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd; No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd, Ungarter'd, and down-gyved⁶ to his ancle; Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other; And with a look so piteous in purport, As if he had been loosed out of hell, To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;

But, truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he? [hard;

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me Then goes he to the length of all his arm; And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow, He falls to such perusal of my face, As he would draw it. Long staid he so; At last,—a little shaking of mine arm, And thrice his head thus waving up and down,— He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,

As it did seem to shatter all his bulk, And end his being: That done, he lets me go:

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,

He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;

For out o' doors he went without their helps,

And, to the last, bended their light on me. [king. 45

Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the

This is the very ecstasy of love;

Whose violent property foredoes⁷ itself,

And leads the will to desperate undertakings,

As oft as any passion under heaven,

That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—

What, have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did com-

I did repel his letters, and deny'd [mand, 55

His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.

I am sorry, that with better heed, and judgement,

I had not quoted⁸ him: I fear'd, he did but trifle,

 It seems, it is as proper to our age [lousy!
 To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions,
 As it is common for the younger sort
 To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:
 This must be known; which, being kept close,
 might move
 More grief to hide, than hate to utter love¹.
 Come. [Exeunt.]

S C E N E II.

The Palace.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
 The need, we have to use you, did provoke
 Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
 Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it,
 Since nor the exterior nor the inward man
 Resembles that it was: What it should be, [him
 More than his father's death, that thus hath put
 So much from the understanding of himself,
 I cannot dream of: I entreat you both, [him;
 That,—being of so young days brought up with
 And, since, so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,—

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
 Some little time: so by your companies
 To draw him on to pleasures; and to gather,
 So much as from occasion you may glean,
 Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,
 That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;

And, sure I am, two men there are not living,
 To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
 To shew us so much gentry², and good will,
 As to expend your time with us a while,
 For the supply and profit of our hope,
 Your visitation shall receive such thanks
 As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties
 Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
 Put your dread pleasures more into command
 Than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey;
 And here give up ourselves, in the full bent³,
 To lay our service freely at your feet,
 To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosencrantz:
 And I beseech you instantly to visit
 My too much changed son.—Go, some of you,
 And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence, and our practices,

Pleasant and helpful to him!

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Queen. Ay, amen!

Enter Polonius.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
 Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news. [liege]

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good lord,
 I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
 Both to my God, and to my gracious king:
 And I do think (or else this brain of mine
 Hunts not the trail⁴ of policy so sure
 As it hath us'd to do) that I have found
 The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that; that I do long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;
 My news shall be the fruit⁵ to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit Polonius.]

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found
 The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main;
 His father's death, and our o'er-hasty marriage.

Re-enter Polonius, with Voltimand, and Cornelius.

King. Well, we shall sift him.—Welcome, my good friends!

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings, and desires.
 Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
 His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd
 To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;

But, better look'd into, he truly found
 It was against your highness: Whereat griev'd,—

That so his sickness, age, and impotence,
 Was falsely borne in hand⁶,—sends out arrests
 On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys;

Receives rebuke from Norway; and, in fine,
 Makes vow before his uncle, never more

To give the assay of arms against your majesty.
 Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,

Gives him threescore thousand crowns in annual fee⁷;

And his commission, to employ those soldiers,
 So levied as before, against the Polack:

With an entreaty, herein further shewn,
 That it might please you to give quiet pass

Through your dominions for this enterprize;
 On such regards of safety, and allowance,

As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;
 And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read,

Answer, and think upon this business. [hour:
 Mean time, we thank you for your well-took labour:
 Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:

Most welcome home! [Exeunt Volt. and Cor.
Pol. This business is well ended.

¹ i. e. This must be made known to the king, for (being kept secret) the hiding Hamlet's love might occasion more mischief to us from him and the queen, than the uttering or revealing of it will occasion hate and resentment from Hamlet. ² Gentry, for complaisance. ³ Bent, for endeavour, application. ⁴ The trail is the course of an animal pursued by the scent. ⁵ The dessert after the meat. ⁶ i. e. deceived, imposed on. ⁷ Fee in this place, signifies reward, recompence.

My liege, and madam, to expostulate¹
 What majesty should be, what duty is,
 Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
 Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
 Therefore,—since brevity is the soul of wit,
 And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,—
 I will be brief: Your noble son is mad:
 Mad call I it; for, to define true madness,
 What is 't, but to be nothing else but mad?
 But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all.—
 That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true, 'tis pity;
 And pity 'tis, 'tis true: a foolish figure;
 But farewell it, for I will use no art.
 Mad let us grant him, then: and now remains,
 That we find out the cause of this effect;
 Or, rather say, the cause of this defect;
 For this effect, defective, comes by cause:
 Thus it remains, and the remainder thus perpend.
 I have a daughter;—have, whilst she is mine;
 Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
 Hath given me this: Now gather, and surmise.

To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia—

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; beautify'd
 Is a vile phrase; but you shall hear:

These in her excellent white bosom, these, &c.—

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay a while; I will be faithful.—

Doubt thou, the stars are fire; [Reading.

Doubt, that the sun doth move;

Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt, I love.

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers; I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best, O, most best, believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet.

This, in obedience, hath my daughter shewn me:
 And, more above², hath his solicitings
 As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
 All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Receiv'd his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man, faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
 (As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that,
 Before my daughter told me) what might you,
 Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
 If I had play'd the desk, or table-book;
 Or given my heart a working, mute and dumb;
 Or look'd upon this love with idle sight?

What might you think? No, I went round to work,

And my young mistress thus I did bespeak;
Lord Hamlet is a prince:—out of thy sphere;

5 This must not be: and then I precepts gave her,
 That she should lock herself from his resort,
 Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.

Which done, she took the fruits of my advice:
 And he, repulsed, (a short tale to make)

10 Fell into a sadness; then into a fast;
 Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
 Thence to a lightness; and, by this declension,
 Into the madness wherein now he raves,
 And all we mourn for.

15 King. Do you think, 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, (I'd fain know that)

That I have positively said, 'Tis so,

20 When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise:
 [Pointing to his head and shoulder.

If circumstances lead me, I will find

25 Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
 Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours together,

30 Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does, indeed.

[him:

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to
 Be you and I behind an arras then:

Mark the encounter: if he love her not,

35 And be not from his reason fallen thereon,

Let me be no assistant for a state,

But keep a farm, and carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet, reading.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away;

I'll board him presently:—O, give me leave.—

45 [Exit King, and Queen.

How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a'-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well;

50 You are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord?

[goes,

55 Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world is to be one man pick'd out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breeds maggots in a dead dog,

¹ To expostulate, for to enquire or discuss. ² i.e. moreover, besides. ³ i.e. if either I had conveyed intelligence between them, and been the confident of their amours, [play'd the desk or table-book] or had connived at it, only observed them in secret, without acquainting my daughter with my discovery [given my heart a mute and dumb working]; or, lastly, had been negligent in observing the intrigue, and overlooked it [looked upon this love with idle sight]; what would you have thought of me?

Being a god, kissing carrion¹,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing; but not as your daughter may conceive²: friend, look to 't.

Pol. How say you by that? [Aside.] still harping on my daughter:—yet he knew me not at first; he said, I was a fishmonger: He is far gone, far gone: and, truly, in my youth I suffer'd much extremity for love; very near this.—I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words!

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue³ says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: All which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, shall be as old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madness, yet there's method in 't. [Aside.]

Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air.—How pregnant⁴ sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be deliver'd of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

Pol. You go to seek lord Hamlet; there he is. [Exit.]

Ros. God save you, sir!

Guil. Mine honour'd lord!

Ros. My most dear lord!—

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not over-happy; On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. 'Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of fortune? O, most true; she is a strumpet. What news?

Ros. None, my lord; but that the world's grown honest.

Ham. Then is doom's-day near: But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons; Denmark being one of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so; to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one; 'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreams.

¹ Dr. Warburton's comment (which Dr. Johnson says almost sets the critic on a level with the author) on this passage is as follows: "The illative particle [for] shews the speaker to be reasoning from something he had said before: what that was we learn in these words, To be honest, as this world goes, is to be one picked out of ten thousand. Having said this, the chain of ideas led him to reflect upon the argument which libertines bring against Providence from the circumstance of abounding evil. In the next speech therefore he endeavours to answer that objection, and vindicate Providence, even on a supposition of the fact, that almost all men were wicked. His argument in the two lines in question is to this purpose, But why need we wonder at this abounding of evil? For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, which though a god, yet shedding its heat and influence upon carrion—Here he stops short, lest talking too consequentially, the hearer should suspect his madness to be feigned; and so turns him off from the subject, by enquiring of his daughter. But the inference which he intended to make, was a very noble one, and to this purpose: If this (says he) be the case, that the effect follows the thing operated upon [carrion] and not the thing operating [a god], why need we wonder, that, the supreme cause of all things diffusing its blessings on mankind, who is, as it were, a dead carrion, dead in original sin, man, instead of a proper return of duty, should breed only corruption and vices? This is the argument at length; and is as noble a one in behalf of Providence as could come from the schools of divinity. But this wonderful man had an art not only of acquainting the audience with what his actors say, but with what they think. The sentiment too is altogether in character; for Hamlet is perpetually moralizing, and his circumstances make this reflection very natural." ² The meaning, says Mr. Steevens, seems to be, Conception (i. e. understanding) is a blessing; but as your daughter may conceive, (i. e. be pregnant,) friend, look to 't, i. e. have a care of that. ³ By the satirical rogue he means Juvenal, in his tenth satire. ⁴ Pregnant is ready, dexterous, apt.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars, bodies; and our monarchs, and out-stretch'd heroes, the beggars' shadows:—Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Both. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinour?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am; I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear at a half-penny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Any thing—but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserv'd love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

Ros. What say you? [To Guilden.

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you¹;—if you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moult no feather. I have of late, (but, wherefore, I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises: and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me, than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world, the paragon of animals! And yet to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me,—nor woman neither; though, by your smiling, you seem to say so,

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said, Man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten² entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted³ them on the way; and hither are they coming to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king, shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humourous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled o' the sere⁴; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't.—What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it, they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of their late innovation⁵.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so follow'd?

Ros. No, indeed they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: But there is, sir, an aiery of children, little eyases⁶, that cry out on the top of question⁷, and are most tyrannically clapp'd for't: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? Who maintains 'em? how are they escoted⁸? Will they pursue the quality⁹ no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are no better) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin, to tarre¹ them on to controversy: There was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

⁶ The poet here steps out of his subject, to give a lash at home, and sneer at the prevailing fashion of following plays performed by the children of the chapel, and abandoning the established theatres.—Little Eyases mean young nestlings, creatures just out of the egg. ⁷ Children that perpetually recite in the highest notes of voice that can be uttered. ⁸ i. e. paid; from the French escot, a shot or reckoning. ⁹ Quality for profession.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules² and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange: for my uncle is king of Denmark; and those, that would make mouths at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece, for his picture in little³. There is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[Flourish of trumpets.]

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinour. Your hands. Come then: the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb; lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must shew fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceiv'd.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a hand-saw⁴.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern;—and you too;—at each ear a hearer: That great baby, you see there, is not yet out of his swadling-clouts.

Ros. Haply, he's the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to tell me of the players; mark it.—You say right, sir: on Monday morning; 'twas then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you.—When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz⁵!

Pol. Upon mine honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass⁶,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical—historical-pastoral, scene undividable, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light: For the law of writ⁷, and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephtha, judge of Israel,—what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why,—One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well.

Pol. Still on my daughter. [Aside.]

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephtha?

Pol. If you call me Jephtha, my lord, I have a daughter, that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord?

Ham. Why, as By lot, God wot,—and then, you know, It came to pass, As most like it was,—The first row of the pious chanson⁸ will shew you more; for look, where my abridgement⁹ comes.

Enter four or five players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all:—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! Why, thy face is valanc'd since I saw thee last; Com'st thou to beard me in Denmark?—What! my young lady and mistress! By-'r-lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven, than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chioppine¹⁰. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not crack'd within the ring¹².—Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: We'll have a speech straight: Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

1 Play. What speech, my good lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once,—but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once: for the play, I remember, pleas'd not the million: 'twas caviare¹³ to the general: but it was (as I receiv'd it, and others, whose judgements, in such matters, cried in the top of mine¹⁴) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty¹⁵ as cunning. I remember, one said, there were no sallets in the lines, to make the matter savoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the author of affection¹⁶:

¹ To provoke any animal to rage, is to tarre him. ² i. e. They not only carry away the world, but the world-bearer too: alluding to the story of Hercules' relieving Atlas; or the allusion may be to the Globe playhouse, on the Bankside, the sign of which was Hercules carrying the Globe. ³ i. e. in miniature. ⁴ This was a common proverbial speech. ⁵ Buz, buz! are, probably, only interjections employed to interrupt Polonius. ⁶ This seems to be a line of a ballad. ⁷ Writ, for writing, composition. ⁸ These were quotations from an old song. ⁹ Mr. Steevens explains this allusion thus: "The pious chansons were a kind of Christmas Carols, containing some scriptural history thrown into loose rhymes, and sung about the streets by the common people when they went at that season to solicit alms.—Hamlet is here repeating some scraps from a song of this kind; and when Polonius enquires what follows them, he refers him to the first row (i. e. division) of one of these, to obtain the information he wanted."

¹⁰ i. e. as Dr. Johnson thinks, those who will shorten my talk.—An abridgement is used for a dramatic piece in the Midsummer Night's Dream, Act V. Sc. I. ¹¹ A chioppine is a high shoe worn by the Italians. ¹² That is, crack'd too much for use. ¹³ The caviare is the spawn of the sterlett, a fish of the sturgeon kind, which seldom grows above thirty inches long. It is found in many of the rivers of Russia.—The general means the people, or multitude. ¹⁴ i. e. were higher than mine. ¹⁵ Modesty, for simplicity. ¹⁶ i. e. convict the author of being a fantastical but affected writer.

but call'd it, an honest¹ method; as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly lov'd: 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter; If it live in your memory, begin at this line; let me see, let me see;—

The rugged Pyrrhus—like the Hyrcanian beast,—
'tis not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

*The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose sable arms,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble,
When he lay couched in the ominous horse,—
Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd
With heraldry more dismal; head to foot
Now is he total gules²; horridly trick'd
With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons;
Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,
That lend a tyrannous and a damned light
To their lord's murder: Roasted in wrath, and fire,
And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore,
With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus
Old grandsire Priam seeks:—So, proceed you.*

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent, and good discretion.

1 Play. Anon he finds him,
Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword,
Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,
Repugnant to command: Unequal match'd,
Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage, strikes wide;
But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
The unnerv'd father falls. Then senseless Ilium,
Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top
Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword,
Which was declining on the milky head
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick:
So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood;
And, like a neutral to his will and matter,
Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm,
A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,
The bold winds speechless, and the orb below
As hush as death: anon, the dreadful thunder
Doth rend the region: So, after Pyrrhus' pause,
A roused vengeance sets him new a-work;
And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars's armour, forg'd for proof eterne,
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.—
Out, out, thou strumpet Fortune! All you gods,
In general synod, take away her power;
Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel,
And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven,
As low as to the fiends!

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—
Pr'ythee, say on:—He's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps:—say on; come to Hecuba.

1 Play. But who, ah woe! had seen the mobled³ queen—

Ham. The mobled queen?

Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

1 Play. Run bare-foot up and down, threat'ning the flames

10 *With bisson⁴ rheum: a clout upon that head,
Where late the diadem stood; and, for a robe,
About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins,
A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up;
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,
15 'Gainst fortune's state would treason have pro-
But if the gods themselves did see her then, [nounc'd:
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs;
The instant burst of clamour that she made,
20 (Unless things mortal move them not at all)
Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven,
And passion in the gods.*

Pol. Look, whe'er he has not turn'd his colour, and has tears in's eyes.—Pr'ythee, no more.

25 Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestow'd? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract, and brief chronicles of the time: After your death, you were better have a bad epitath, than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. Odds bodikins, man, much better: Use every man after his desert, and who shall 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: The less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs. [Exit Polonius.]

40 Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow.—Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the murder of Gonzago?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down, and insert in't? could you not?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord; and look you mock him not.—My good friends, [to Rosencrantz and Guildenstern] I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinour.

Ros. Good, my lord. [Exeunt Ros. and Guil.]

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' you:—Now I am alone.
55 O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!

¹ Hamlet is telling how much his judgement differed from that of others. One said, there was no salt in the lines, &c., but called it an honest method. The author probably gave it, But I called it an honest method, &c. ² Gules is a term in heraldry, and signifies red. ³ According to Warburton, mobled, or mabled, signifies veiled; according to Dr. Johnson, it is huddled, grossly covered.—Mr. Steevens says, he was informed that mab-led in Warwickshire (where it is pronounced mob-led) signifies led astray by a will o' the whisp, or ignis fatuus.—Mr. Tollet adds, that in the latter end of the reign of king Charles II. the rabble that attended the earl of Shaftesbury's partisans was first called mobile vulgus, and afterwards, by contraction, the mob; and ever since, the word mob has become proper English. ⁴ Bisson or beesen, i. e. blind; a word still in use in some parts of the North of England.

Is it not monstrous, that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own conceit,
That, from her working, all his visage warm'd;
Tears in his eyes, distraction in 's aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suiting
With forms to his conceit? And all for nothing!
For Hecuba!

What 's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her? What would he do,
Had he the motive and the cue¹ for passion,
That I have? He would drown the stage with tears,
And cleave the general ear with horrid speech;
Make mad the guilty, and appall the free,
Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed,
The very faculty of eyes and ears.

Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause²,
And can say nothing; no, not for a king,
Upon whose property, and most dear life,
A damn'd defeat³ was made. Am I a coward?
Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face?
Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lye i' the throat,

As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this?
Ha! Why, I should take it: for it cannot be,
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter; or, ere this,

I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal: Bloody, bawdy villain!
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!
Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave; [laine]
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,
5 Prompted to my revenge by heaven, and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a cursing, like a very drab,
A scullion!

Fie upon 't! foh!
About, my brains! Hum! I have heard,
That guilty creatures, sitting at a play,
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul, that presently
15 They have proclaim'd their malefactions:
For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players

Play something like the murder of my father,
Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks;
20 I'll tent⁴ him to the quick; if he do blench,
I know my course. The spirit, that I have seen,
May be a devil: and the devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps,
To assume my weakness, and my melancholy,
25 (As he is very potent with such spirits)
Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds
More relative⁵ than this; The play's the thing,
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

[Exit.]

A C T III.

SCENE I.

The Palace.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. AND can you by no drift of conference

Get from him, why he puts on this confusion;
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted;
But from what cause, he will by no means speak.

Gail. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded;
But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Gail. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands,
Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him
40 To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players
We o'er-raught⁶ on the way: of these we told him;
And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it: They are here about the court;
45 And, as I think, they have already order
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true;
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties,
To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclin'd.

Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights.

55 Ros. We shall, my lord. [Exeunt Ros. and Guil.]

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too:
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither;
That he, as 'twere by accident, may here
Affront¹⁰ Ophelia.

¹ i. e. the hint, the direction. ² i. e. not quickened with a new desire of vengeance; not teeming with vengeance. ³ Defeat, for dispossession. ⁴ i. e. unnatural. ⁵ The meaning is, Wits, to your work. Brain, go about the present business. ⁶ i. e. search his wounds. ⁷ i. e. if he shrink, or start. ⁸ Relative, for convictive, according to Warburton.—Relative is, nearly related, closely connected, according to Dr. Johnson. ⁹ Over-raught is over-reached, that is, over-took. ¹⁰ To affront, is only to meet directly.

Her father, and myself (lawful espials¹)
Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge;
And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
If 't be the affliction of his love, or no,
That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you:—
And, for my part, Ophelia, I do wish,
That your good beauties be the happy cause
Of Hamlet's wildness; so shall I hope, your vir-
Will bring him to his wonted way again, [tues
To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here:—Gracious, so please you,
We will bestow ourselves:—Read on this book;
[To Ophelia.

That show of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,—
'Tis too much prov'd,—that, with devotion's vi-
And pious action, we do sugar o'er [sage,
The devil himself.

King. O, 'tis too true! how smart
A lash that speech doth give my conscience! [Aside.
The harlot's cheek, beauty'd with plast'ring art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,
Than is my deed to my most painted word:
O heavy burthen!

Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord. [Exeunt King, and Polonius.
Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question:—
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind, to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune;
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And, by opposing, end them?—To die;—to sleep;—
No more;—and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die;—to sleep;—
To sleep! perchance, to dream;—Ay, there's the rub;—

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil²,
Must give us pause: There's the respect,
That makes calamity of so long life: [time³,
For who would bear the whips and scorns of
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contume-
The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay, [ly,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus⁴ make
With a bare bodkin⁵! who would fardels bear,
To groan and sweat under a weary life;
But that the dread of something after death,—
The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn

No traveller returns—puzzles the will;
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of!
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sickly'd o'er with the pale cast of thought;
And enterprizes of great pith and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now!

[Seeing Ophelia.
The fair Ophelia?—Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well.
Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well,
you did; [pos'd,

And, with them, words of so sweet breath com-
As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,
Take these again; for to the noble mind
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind.
There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That, if you be honest, and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into its likeness: this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believ'd me: for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it: I lov'd you not.

Oph. I was the more deceiv'd.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery; Why would'st thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck, than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in: What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none

plained of are not the product of time or duration simply, but of a corrupted age or manners. We may be sure, then, that Shakspeare wrote, 'the whips and scorns of th' time.' And the description of the evils of a corrupt age, which follows, confirms this emendation." ⁴ This expression probably alluded to the writ of discharge, which was formerly granted to those barons and knights who personally attended the king on any foreign expedition.—This discharge was called a Quietus. It is at this time the term for the acquittance which every sheriff receives on settling his accounts at the exchequer.

⁵ A bodkin was the ancient term for a small dagger.

of us: Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him; that he may play the fool no where but in's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry; Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell: Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance¹: Go to; I'll no more on't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages: those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go.

[Exit Hamlet.]

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown! The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword;

The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion, and the mould of form²,
The observ'd of all observers! quite, quite down!
And I, of ladies, most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth,
Blasted with ecstasy³: O, woe is me!
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter King, and Polonius.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;

Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like madness. There's something in his soul,

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And, I do doubt, the hatch, and the disclose,
Will be some danger; Which, for to prevent,
I have, in quick determination,
Thus set it down; He shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply, the seas, and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart;
Whereon his brains still beating, puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well: But yet do I believe
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophelia?
You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play,
Let his queen-mother all alone entreat him
To shew his grief; let her be round with him⁴;
And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference: If she find him not,
To England send him; or confine him, where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

A Hall.

Enter Hamlet, and two or three of the Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounc'd it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul, to hear a robustious perriwig-pated⁵ fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings⁶; who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows, and noise: I would have such a fellow whipp'd for o'er-doing Termagant⁷; it out-herods Herod⁸: Pray you, avoid it.

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: For any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold as 'twere the mirror up to nature; to shew virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure⁹. Now this, over-done, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one, must, in your allowance, o'er-weigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players, that I have seen play,—and heard others praise, and that highly,—not to speak it profanely¹⁰, that, neither having the accent of christians, nor the gait of christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted, and bellow'd, that I have

⁹ i. e. resemblance, as in a print. ¹⁰ Any gross or indelicate language was called profane.

thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1 Play. I hope, we have reform'd that indifferently with us.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: For there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the meantime, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous; and shews a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.— [Exit Players.]

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.
How now, my lord? will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste.—

Will you two help to hasten them? [Exit Pol.]

Both. Ay, my lord. [Exit Ros. and Guil.]

Ham. What ho; Horatio!

Enter Horatio.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter:

For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits,
To feed, and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No, let the candy'd tongue lick absurd pomp;
And crook the pregnant¹ hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?
Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice,
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing;
A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and blest are those,
Whose blood and judgement are so well co-mingled²,
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please: Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this.—

There is a play to-night before the king;
One scene of it comes near the circumstance,
Which I have told thee, of my father's death.
I pr'ythee, when thou see'st that act a-foot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul
Observe my uncle: if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen;
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy³: Give him heedful note:

For I mine eyes will rivet to his face;
And, after, we will both our judgements join
In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord:

5 If he steal aught, the whilst this play is playing,
And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft. [Idle:]

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be
Get you a place.

Danish march. A flourish.

10 Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the camelion's dish: I eat the air, promise-cramm'd: You can-15 not feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now.—My lord, you play'd once i' the university, you say? [To Polonius.]

20 Pol. That did I, my lord: and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was kill'd i'
the Capitol; Brutus kill'd me.

25 Ham. It was a brute part of him, to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

30 Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the King.]

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[Lying down at Ophelia's feet.]

Oph. No, my lord.

35 Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant country matters⁴?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord. [Legs.]

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids'

40 Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

45 Ham. O! your only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

50 Ham. So long? Nay, then let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens!
die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: But, by'r-lady, he must build 55 churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse⁵; whose epitaph is,
For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.

¹ The sense of pregnant in this place is, quick, ready, prompt. ² According to the doctrine of the four humours, desire and confidence were seated in the blood, and judgement in the phlegm; and the due mixture of the humours made a perfect character. ³ Stithy is a smith's anvil. ⁴ Dr. Johnson thinks we must read, Do you think I meant country manners? Do you imagine that I meant to sit in your lap, with such rough gallantry as clowns use to their lasses? ⁵ Amongst the country may-games there was an hobby-horse, which, when the puritanical humour of those times opposed and discredited these games, was brought by the poets and ballad-makers as an instance of the ridiculous zeal of the sectaries: from these ballads Hamlet quotes a line or two.

Trumpets sound. The dumb show follows.

Enter a King and Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestations unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon, comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but, in the end, accepts his love.

[Exeunt.]

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is miching malicho¹; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll shew him: Be not you ashamed to shew, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught; I'll mark the play.

Pro. "For us, and for our tragedy,
"Here stooping to your clemency,
"We beg your hearing patiently."

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter a King, and a Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phœbus' cart² gone round
Neptune's salt wash, and Tellus' orb'd ground;
And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen³
About the world have times twelve thirties been;
Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands,
Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er, ere love be done!
But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer, and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must:
For women fear too much, even as they love.
And women's fear and love hold quantity;
In neither aught, or in extremity. [know;

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you
And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there. [shortly too;

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and

My operant⁴ powers their functions leave to do:
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd; and, haply, one as kind
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!
Such love must needs be treason in my breast:
In second husband let me be accurst!
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. That's wormwood. [move,

P. Queen. The instances⁵ that second marriage
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:
A second time I kill my husband dead,
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe, you think what now you speak:

But what we do determine, oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory;
Of violent birth, but poor validity:
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

The violence of either grief or joy,
Their own enactures with themselves destroy:
Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye; nor 'tis not strange,
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;

For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark, his favourite flies;
The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies.
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend;
For who not needs, shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I begun,—
Our wills, and fates, do so contrary run,
That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:
So think thou wilt no second husband wed;
But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!

Sport, and repose, lock from me, day, and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's⁶ cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here, and hence, pursue my lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now,—— [To Oph.

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while;

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;

¹ Hanmer tell us, that miching malicho signifies mischief lying hid, and that malicho is the Spanish malheco. ² A chariot was anciently so called. ³ Splendour, lustre. ⁴ Operant is active. ⁵ The motives. ⁶ Anchor is for anchoret. This abbreviation of the word is very ancient.

And never come mischance betwixt us twain!

[Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play? [thinks.

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, me-

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i' the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap¹. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: But what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: Let the gall'd jade wince, our withers are unwrung.—

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the duke.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret² between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse³.

Ham. So you mistake your husbands.

Begin, murderer.—Leave thy damnable faces, and begin.

[venge.

Come—The croaking raven doth bellow for re-

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing;

Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,

With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,

Thy natural magic, and dire property,

On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours the poison into his ears.

Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for his estate.

His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian: You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frightened with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light:—away!

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt All but Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,

The hart ungalled play: [sleep;

For some must watch, whilst some must

Thus runs the world away.—

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk⁴ with me) with two Provencal roses on my rayed shoes⁵, get me a fellowship in a cry⁶ of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon⁷ dear,

This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—peacock⁸.

Hor. You might have rhym'd.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come, some music; come, the recorders.—

For if the king like not the comedy,

Why then, belike, he likes it not, perdy⁹.

Enter Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

Come, some music. [you.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him? [per'd.

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous distem-

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should shew itself more richer, to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation, would, perhaps, plunge him into more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir:—pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon, and my return, shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseas'd: But, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: My mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says: Your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

¹ He calls it the mouse-trap, because it is — the thing, in which he'll catch the conscience of the king.

² This refers to the interpreter, who formerly sat on the stage at all motions or puppet-shows, and interpreted to the audience.

³ i. e. according to Mr. Steevens, better in regard to the wit of your double entendre, but worse in respect to the grossness of your meaning.

⁴ Means, probably, no more than to change condition fantastically.

⁵ When shoe-strings were worn, they were covered, where they met in the middle, by a ribband gathered into the form of a rose.—Rayed shoes, are shoes braided in lines.

⁶ The allusion is to a pack of hounds.—A pack of hounds was once called a cry of hounds.

⁷ Hamlet calls Horatio by this name, in allusion to the celebrated friendship between Damon and Pythias.

⁸ A peacock seems proverbial for a fool. Mr. Steevens, however, believes paddock (or toad) to be the true reading.

⁹ Perdy is a corruption of par Dieu, and is not uncommon in the old plays.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels, of this mother's admiration? impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade¹ with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers².

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of discontenter? you do, surely, bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but While the grass grows,—the proverb is something musty.

Enter the Players, with Recorders³.

O, the recorders:—let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—Why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly⁴.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these ventages⁵ with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play upon me, you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. Why, do you think, that I am easie to be play'd on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me. [Enter Polonius.]
—God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, ad presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shap of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weazel⁶.

Pol. It is back'd like a weazel.

Ham. Or, like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by-and-by.—They fool me to the top of my bent⁷.—I will come by-and-by.

Pol. I will say so.

Ham. By-and-by is easily said.—Leave me, friends. [Exeunt Ros. Guil. Hor. &c.]

'Tis now the very witching time of night;
When church-yards yawn, and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world: Now could I drink hot And do such business as the bitter⁸ day Would quake to look on. Soft;—now to my mother.—

O, heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:

Let me be cruel, not unnatural:

I will speak daggers to her, but use none;

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:

How in my words soever she be shent⁹,

To give them seals¹⁰ never, my soul, consent!

SCENE III.

A Room in the Palace.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you; I your commission will forthwith dispatch, And he to England shall along with you: The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so near us, as doth hourly grow Out of his lunes¹¹.

Guil. We will ourselves provide:

Most holy and religious fear it is

To keep those many many bodies safe,

That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound, With all the strength and armour of the mind, To keep itself from noyance; but much more,

That spirit, upon whose weal depend and rest,

The lives of many. The cease of majesty

Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw

What's near it, with it: It is a massy wheel,

Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,

To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,

Each small annexment, petty consequence,

Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone

Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy For we will fetters put upon this fear, [voyage; Which now goes too free-footed.

² i. e. by these hands.

³ i. e. a kind of flute.

⁴ i. e. If my duty to the king makes me press you a little, my love to you makes me still more importunate. that makes me bold, this makes me even unmannerly.

⁵ The holes of a flute.

⁶ The weazel is remarkable for the length of its back.

⁷ i. e. They compel me to play the fool, till I can endure to do it no longer.

⁸ The bitter day is the day rendered hateful or bitter by the commission of some act of mischief.

⁹ To shent, is to reprove harshly, to treat with injurious language. i. e. put them in execution.

¹¹ i. e. his madness, frenzy.

Both. We will haste us.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.]

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet;
Behind the arras I'll convey myself, [home: 5
To hear the process; I'll warrant, she'll tax him
And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet, that some more audience than a mother,
Since nature makes them partial, should o'er-hear
The speech of vantage¹. Fare you well, my liege: 10
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know. [Exit.

King. Thanks, my dear lord.
O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't,
A brother's murder!—Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will²;
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood?
Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens,
To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy,
But to confront the visage of offence?
And what's in prayer, but this two-fold force,—
To be fore-stalled, ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd, being down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But O, what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!— 30
That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd, and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice;
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: But 'tis not so above:
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd, 40
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can: What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?
O wretched state! O bosom, black as death!
O limed³ soul; that, struggling to be free,
Art more engag'd! Help, angels, make assay!
Bow, stubborn knees! and, heart, with strings of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe;
All may be well! [The King kneels.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it, pat, now he is praying;
And now I'll do 't;—And so he goes to heaven:
And so am I reveng'd? That would be scann'd⁴: 55
A villain kills my father; and, for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.
Why this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;

With all his crimes broad-blown, as flush as May;
And, how his audit stands, who knows, save heaven?
But, in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him: And am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No.

Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent⁵:
When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage;
Or in the incestuous pleasures of his bed;
At gaming, swearing; or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in 't:
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven;
And that his soul may be as damn'd, and black,
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.

The King rises.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words, without thoughts, never to heaven go.
[Exit.

SCENE IV.

The Queen's Closet.

Enter Queen, and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him: [with;
Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear
And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here⁶.
Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [within.] Mother, mother, mother!—

Queen. I'll warrant you; fear me not.

Withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Polonius hides himself.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, mother; what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended. [ed.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offend-

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet?

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so:

You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;
And—'would it were not so!—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay, then I'll set those to you that can speak. [not budge;

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall
You go not, 'till I set you up a glass

Where you may see the inmost part of you.
Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help!

Ham. How now! a rat?

Dead, for a ducat, dead.

⁴ i. e. that should be considered, estimated.

² Will is command, direction.

³ Hent is hold, or seizure.

[Hamlet

[Hamlet strikes at Polonius through the arras.
Pol. [Behind.] O, I am slain.
Queen. O me, what hast thou done?
Ham. Nay, I know not:
 Is it the king?
Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!
Ham. A bloody deed;—almost as bad, good mother,
 As kill a king, and marry with his brother.
Queen. As kill a king?
Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.—
 Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!
[To Polonius.]
 I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:
 Thou find'st, to be too busy, is some danger.—
 Leavewringing of your hands: Peace; sit you down,
 And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,
 If it be made of penetrable stuff;
 If damned custom have not braz'd it so,
 That it be proof and bulwark against sense.
Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue
 In noise so rude against me?
Ham. Such an act,
 That blurs the grace and blush of modesty;
 Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose¹
 From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
 And sets a blister² there; makes marriage vows
 As false as dicers' oaths: O, such a deed,
 As from the body of contraction³ plucks
 The very soul; and sweet religion makes
 A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow;
 Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
 With tristful visage, as against the doom,
 Is thought-sick at the act.
Queen. Ay me, what act,
 That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?
Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
 The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
 See, what a grace was seated on this brow:
 Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
 An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
 A station like the Herald Mercury,
 New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
 A combination, and a form, indeed,
 Where every god did seem to set his seal,
 To give the world assurance of a man:
 This was your husband.—Look you now, what follows:
 Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear,
 Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?
 Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
 And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
 You cannot call it, love: for, at your age,
 The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
 And waits upon the judgement; And what judgement
 Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have,
[sense]
 Else, could you not have motion: But, sure, that
 Is apoplex'd; for madness would not err;

Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd,
 But it reserv'd some quantity of choice
 To serve in such a difference. What devil was't,
 That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
 5 Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
 Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
 Or but a sickly part of one true sense
 Could not so mope.
 O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
 10 If thou canst mutiny in a matron's bones,
 To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
 And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame,
 When the compulsive ardour gives the charge;
 Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
 15 And reason panders will.
Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:
 Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
 And there I see such black and grained spots,
 As will not leave their tinct.
 20 Ham. Nay, but to live
 In the rank sweat of an incestuous bed;
 Stew'd in corruption; honeying, and making love
 Over the nasty sty;—
Queen. O, speak to me no more;
 25 These words like daggers enter in mine ears;
 No more, sweet Hamlet.
Ham. A murderer, and a villain:
 A slave, that is not twentieth part the tythe
 Of your precedent lord:—a vice of kings:
 30 A cutpurse of the empire and the rule;
 That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
 And put it in his pocket!
Queen. No more.

Enter Ghost.

35 Ham. A king of shreds and patches:—
 Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
 You heavenly guards!—What would your gracious figure?
 40 Queen. Alas, he's mad.
Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,
 That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by
 The important acting of your dread command?
 O, say!
 45 Ghost. Do not forget: This visitation
 Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
 But, look! amazement on thy mother sits:
 O, step between her and her fighting soul;
 Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works;
 50 Speak to her, Hamlet.
Ham. How is it with you, lady?
Queen. Alas, how is't with you?
 That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
 And with the incorporal air do hold discourse!
 55 Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
 And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
 Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
 Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle son,
 Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
 60 Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

¹ It was once the custom of those who were betrothed, to wear some flower as an external and conspicuous mark of their mutual engagement. ² See note ³, p. 389. ³ Contraction for marriage contract.

Ham. On him! on him!—Look you, how pale he glares!
His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capable.—Do not look upon
Lest, with this piteous action, you convert [me;
My stern effects: then, what I have to do
Will want true colour; tears, perchance, for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all, that is, I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing, but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!

My father, in his habit as he liv'd!
Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal!

[Exit Ghost.]

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:
This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy¹!

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthful musick: It is not madness,
That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word; which madness
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,
Lay not that flattering unction to your soul,
That not your trespass, but my madness, speaks:
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place;
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,
Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what's past; avoid what is to come;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds,
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my vir-
For, in the fatness of these pursy times, [tue:
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg;

Yea, curb², and woo, for leave to do him good.
Queen. O, Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night: but go not to mine uncle's bed:
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits' devil, is angel yet in this;
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery,
That aptly is put on: Refrain to-night;
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next, more easy:
For use can almost change the stamp of nature,
And either master the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good night!

And when you are desirous to be blest,
I'll blessing beg of you.—For this same lord,
[Pointing to Polonius.]

I do repent; But heaven hath pleas'd it so,—

To punish him with me, and me with this,—

That I must be their scourge and minister.

I will bestow him, and will answer well

The death I gave him. So, again good night!—

I must be cruel, only to be kind:

Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.—

One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:

Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed;

Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you, his mouse³;

And let him, for a pair of reechy⁴ kisses,

Or padding in your neck with his damn'd fingers,

Make you to ravel all this matter out,

That I essentially am not in madness,

But mad in craft. 'Twere good, you let him know.

For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,

Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib⁵,

Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?

No, in despite of sense, and secrecy,

Unpeg the basket on the house's top,

Let the birds fly; and, like the famous ape,

To try conclusions⁶, in the basket creep,

And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe

What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?

Queen. Alack, I had forgot; 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two school-fellows,—

Whom I will trust, as I will adders' fang'd⁷,—

They bear the mandate; they must sweep my

And marshal me to knavery: Let it work; [way,

For 'tis the sport, to have the engineer

Hoist⁸ with his own petar: and it shall go hard,

But I will delve one yard below their mines,

And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet,

When in one line two crafts directly meet!—

45 This man shall set me packing.

I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room:—

Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor

Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,

Who was in life a foolish prating knave.

50 Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you:—

Good night, mother.

[Exit the Queen, and Hamlet dragging in Polonius.]

¹ Ecstasy in this place, and many others, means a temporary alienation of mind, a fit. ² That is, bend and truckle. Fr. courber. ³ Mouse was once a term of endearment. ⁴ Reechy is smoky.

⁵ Gib was a common name for a cat. ⁶ i. e. experiments. ⁷ That is, adders with their fangs, or poisonous teeth, undrawn. ⁸ Hoist for hoised; as past for passed.

A C T IV.

S C E N E I.

A Royal Apartment.Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. THERE's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves;
 You must translate; 'tis fit we understand them:
 Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.—

[To Ros. and Guil. who go out.]

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night?

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea, and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier: In his lawless fit,
 Behind the arras hearing something stir,
 He whips his rapier out, and cries, A rat! a rat!
 And, in his brainish apprehension, kills
 The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!

It had been so with us, had we been there:
 His liberty is full of threats to all;
 To you yourself, to us, to every one.
 Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
 It will be laid to us; whose providence [haunt¹,
 Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of
 This mad young man: but so much was our love,
 We would not understand what was most fit;
 But, like the owner of a foul disease,
 To keep it from divulging, let it feed
 Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd:
 O'er whom his very madness, like some ore²,
 Among a mineral of metals base,
 Shews itself pure; he weeps for what is done.

King. O, Gertrude, come away!

The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
 But we will ship him hence: and this vile deed
 We must, with all our majesty and skill, [stern!
 Both countenance and excuse.—Ho! Guilden-

Enter Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid:
 Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
 And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:
 Go, seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body
 Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.]

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
 And let them know, both what we mean to do,
 And what's untimely done: for haply, slander,
 Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,

As level as the cannon to his blank,
 Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name,
 And hit the woundless air.—O, come away!
 My soul is full of discord, and dismay. [Exeunt]

S C E N E II.

Another Room.Enter Hamlet.

Ham. —Safely stow'd. But soft,—

Ros. &c. within. Hamlet! Lord Hamlet!

Ham. What noise? who calls on Hamlet? O, here they come.

Enter Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body? [kin.]

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis

Ros. Tell us where 'tis; that we may take it thence,

And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge!
 —what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: He keeps them, like an ape³, in the corner of his jaw;
 first mouth'd, to be last swallow'd: When he needs what you have glean'd, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body⁴. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord?

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox⁵, and all after. [Exeunt]

S C E N E III.

Another Room.Enter King.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose?
 Yet must not we put the strong law on him:

Base metals have ore no less than precious.

note: "It is the way of monkeys, in eating, to throw that part of their food which they take up first, into a pouch they are provided with on the side of their jaw, and there they keep it till they have done with the rest."

⁴ This answer Dr. Johnson says he does not comprehend. Perhaps it should be,
The body is not with the king, for the king is not with the body.

⁵ There is a play among children called, Hide fox, and all after.

He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes;
And, where'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and
This sudden sending him away must seem [even;
Deliberate pause: Diseases, desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are reliev'd,
Or not at all.—How now? what hath befallen?

Enter Rosencrantz.

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet, and Guildenstern.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten:
a certain convocation of politick worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else, to fat us; and we fat ourselves for maggots: Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table; that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to shew you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there.

Ham. He will stay 'till you come.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,—

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve
For that which thou hast done,—must send thee
hence

With fiery quickness: Therefore, prepare thyself;
The bark is ready, and the wind at help¹,
The associates tend, and every thing is bent
For England.

Ham. For England?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub, that sees them.—But,
come; for England!—Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother:—Father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and, so, my mother. Come, for England. [Exit.]

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard;

Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night;

Away; for every thing is seal'd and done

That else leans on the affair: Pray you, make haste. [Exeunt Ros. and Guil.]

And, England! if my love thou hold'st at aught,
(As my great power thereof may give thee sense;

Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red

After the Danish sword, and thy free awe

Pays homage to us) thou may'st not coldly set²

Our sovereign process; which imports at full,

By letters conjuring to that effect,

15 The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England;

For like the hectic in my blood he rages,

And thou must cure me: 'Till I know 'tis done,

Howe'er my haps, my joys were ne'er begun.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.

The Frontiers of Denmark.

Enter Fortinbras, with an Army.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish

25 Tell him, that, by his licence, Fortinbras [king;

Craves the conveyance of a promis'd march

Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.

If that his majesty would aught with us,

We shall express our duty in his eye,

30 And let him know so.

Capt. I will do't, my lord.

For. Go softly on. [Exeunt Fortinbras, &c.]

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, &c.]

35 Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Capt. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?

Capt. Against some part of Poland:

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

40 Capt. The nephew of old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir,

Or for some frontier?

Capt. Truly to speak, and with no addition,

We go to gain a little patch of ground,

45 That bath in it no profit but the name.

To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;

Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole,

A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Capt. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats,

Will not debate the question of this straw:

55 This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace;

That inward breaks, and shews no cause without

Why the man dies.—I humbly thank you, sir.

Capt. God be wi' ye, sir. [Exit Captain.]

Ros. Will't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I will be with you straight. Go a little before. [Exeunt Ros. and the rest.]

¹ Dr. Johnson supposes it should be read, The bark is ready, and the wind at helm.

² To set, is

How all occasions do inform against me,
 And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
 If his chief good, and market of his time,
 Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.
 Sure, He, that made us with such large discourse¹,
 Looking before, and after, gave us not
 That capability and god-like reason
 To fust in us unus'd. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
 Of thinking too precisely on the event,—
 A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,
 And, ever, three parts coward,—I do not know
 Why yet I live to say, This thing's to do;
 Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and means
 To do 't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me:
 Witness, this army, of such mass, and charge,
 Led by a delicate and tender prince;
 Whose spirit, with divine ambition puffed,
 Makes mouths at the invisible event;
 Exposing what is mortal, and unsure,
 To all that fortune, death, and danger, dare,
 Even for an egg-shell. Rightly, to be great
 Is not to stir without great argument;
 But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,
 When honour's at the stake. How stand I then,
 That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
 Excitements of my reason, and my blood,
 And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see
 The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
 That, for a fantasy, and trick of fame,
 Go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot,
 Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
 Which is not tomb enough, and continent²,
 To hide the slain?—O, from this time forth,
 My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!
 [Exit.]

S C E N E V.

Elsinour. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen, and Horatio.

Queen. —I will not speak with her.

Hor. She is importunate; indeed, distract:
 Her mood will needs be pity'd.

Queen. What would she have?

Hor. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears, [her heart;
 There's tricks i' the world; and hems, and beats
 Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt,
 That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing,
 Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
 The hearers to collection³; they aim⁴ at it,

And botch the words up fit to their own thoughts;
 Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them, [thought,
 Indeed would make one think, there might be
 Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily⁵.

Queen. 'Twere good, she were spoken with;
 for she may strew

Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds:
 Let her come in. [Exit Horatio.]

10 To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
 Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss:
 So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
 It spills itself, in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Horatio, with Ophelia.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia? [mark?

Oph. How should I your true love know
 From another one?

By his cockle hat, and staff,

And by his sandal shoon⁶. [Singing.]

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark.

He is dead and gone, lady,

He is dead and gone;

At his head a grass-green turf,

At his heels a stone.

O, ho!

Queen. Nay, but, Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow.

Enter King.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded all with sweet flowers;

Which bewept to the grave did go,

With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God'ield you! They say, the owl was a baker's daughter⁷. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray, let us have no words of this; but when they ask you, what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,

All in the morning betime,

And I a maid at your window,

To be your Valentine:

Then up he rose, and don'd⁸ his clothes,

And dup't⁹ the chamber-door;

Let in the maid, that out a maid

Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

¹ i. e. such latitude of comprehension; such power of reviewing the past, and anticipating the future.

² Continent, in our author, means that which comprehends or encloses. ³ i. e. to deduce consequences from such premises. ⁴ To aim is to guess. ⁵ i. e. Though her meaning cannot be certainly collected, yet there is enough to put a mischievous interpretation to it. ⁶ This is the description of a pilgrim. While this kind of devotion was in favour, love intrigues were carried on under that mask. Hence the old ballads and novels made pilgrimages the subjects of their plots.—

The cockle-shell hat was one of the essential badges of this vocation; for, the chief places of devotion being beyond sea, or on the coasts, the pilgrims were accustomed to put cockle-shells upon their hats, to denote the intention or performance of their devotion. ⁷ This alludes to a legendary story, where our Saviour, being refused bread by the daughter of a baker, is described as punishing her by turning her into an owl. ⁸ To don, is to do on, to put on; as doff is to do off, put off. ⁹ To dup, is to do up; to lift the latch.

Oph. Indeed, without an oath, I'll make an end on't.

By Gis, and by Saint Charity,

Alack, and fie for shame!

Young men will do't, if they come to't;

By cock¹, they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,

You promis'd me to wed: He answers,

So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,

An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they should lay him i' the cold ground: My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies: good night, good night. [Exit.

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio.

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs All from her father's death: And now, behold, O Gertrude, Gertrude, When sorrows come, they come not single spies, But in battalions! First, her father slain; Next, your son gone; and he most violent author Of his own just remove: The people muddy'd, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers, For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greenly², In hugger-mugger³ to inter him: Poor Ophelia, Divided from herself, and her fair judgement; Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts. Last, and as much containing as all these, Her brother is in secret come from France: Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, And wants not buzzers to infect his ear With pestilent speeches of his father's death; Wherein necessity of matter beggar'd, Will nothing stick our person to arraign, In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this, Like to a murdering piece⁴, in many places Gives me superfluous death! [A noise within.

Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

Enter a Gentleman.

King. Attend. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door:—

What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord;

The ocean, over-peering of his list⁵,

Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste,

Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, [lord;

O'er-bears your officers! The rabble call him,

And, as the world were now but to begin,

Antiquity forgot, custom not known,

The ratifiers and props of every ward⁶,

They cry, Choose we; Laertes shall be king!

Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds, Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!

O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs⁷.

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.

Enter Laertes, with others.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

All. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

All. We will, we will. [Exeunt.

Laer. I thank you:—Keep the door.—O thou vile king,

Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood, that's calm, proclaims me bastard;

Cries, cuckold, to my father; brands the harlot

Even here, between the chaste unsmirched⁸ brow Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,

That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?—

Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person;

There's such divinity doth hedge a king,

That treason can but peep to what it would,

Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes,

Why thou art thus incens'd;—Let him go, Gertrude;—

Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill. [with.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled

To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!

Conscience, and grace, to the profoundest pit!

I dare damnation: To this point I stand,—

That both the worlds I give to negligence,

Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd

Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world's:

And, for my means, I'll husband them so well,

They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,

If you desire to know the certainty [venge,

Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your re-

That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and

Winner and loser? [foe,

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then? [arms;

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my

And, like the kind life-rend'ring pelican,

Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak

Like a good child, and a true gentleman.

¹ This is a corruption of the sacred name. See note ⁴, page 48. ² That is, without maturity of judgement. ³ i. e. in private to inter him. ⁴ Such a piece as assassins use, with many barrels. It is necessary, to apprehend this, to see the justness of the similitude. ⁵ The lists are the barriers which the spectators of a tournament must not pass. ⁶ i. e. of every one of those securities that nature and law place about the person of a king. ⁷ Hounds run counter when they trace the trail backwards. ⁸ i. e. clean, not defiled.

That I am guiltless of your father's death,
And am most sensible in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgement 'pear¹,
As day does to your eye.

Crowd, within. Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Enter Ophelia, fantastically dress'd with straws and flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears, seven times salt,
Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!—
By heaven, thy madness shall be pay'd with weight,
'Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!—
O heavens! is 't possible, a young maid's wits
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
Nature is fine in love: and, where 'tis fine,
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves².

Oph. They bore him bare-fac'd on the bier;

Hey no nonny, nonny hey nonny:

And on his grave rain'd many a tear;—

Fare you well, my dove! [revenge,

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade
It could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing, Down a-down, an you call him a-down-a. [ard,

O, how the wheel becomes it! It is the false stew-
That stole his master's daughter³.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's rosemary⁴, that's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember: and there is pansies⁵, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness; thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines⁶.
There's rue for you;—and here's some for me;
—we may call it, herb of grace o' Sundays:—
you may wear your rue with a difference⁷.—There's a daisy:—I would give you some violets: but they wither'd all, when my father died:—They say, he made a good end,——

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy⁸,——

Laer. Thought, and affliction, passion, hell it-
She turns to favour, and to prettiness. [self,

Oph. And will he not come again?

And will he not come again?

No, no, he is dead,

Go to thy death-bed,

He never will come again.

His beard was as white as snow,

All flaxen was his poll:

He is gone, he is gone,

And we cast away moan:

God a' mercy on his soul!

And of all christian souls! I pray God. God be wi' you. [Exit Oph.

Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,
Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me:

If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
To you in satisfaction; but, if not,

Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so:

His means of death, his obscure funeral,—
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,
No noble rite, nor formal ostentation,—
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call't in question.

King. So you shall;

And, where the offence is, let the great axe fall.
I pray you, go with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.

Another Room.

Enter Horatio, with a Servant.

Hor. What are they, that would speak with me?

Serv. Sailors, sir;

¹ This is an elision of the verb to appear. (says Laertes) is the passion by which nature is most exalted and refined: and as substances, refined and subtilised, easily obey any impulse, or follow any attraction, some part of nature, so purified and refined, flies off after the attracting object, after the thing it loves."

² Dr. Johnson explains this passage thus: "Love" Mr. Steevens says, the wheel may mean no more than the burthen of the song, which she had just repeated, and as such was formerly used.—Dr. Johnson says, "The story alluded to I do not know; but perhaps the lady stolen by the steward was reduced to spin."

⁵ Mr. Steevens says, Greene, in his Quip for an Upstart Courtier, 1620, calls fennel women's weeds: "fit generally for that sex, sith, while they are maidens, they wish wantonly."—Mr. Steevens adds, that he knows not of what columbines were supposed to be emblematical; but that Gerard, and other herbalists, impute few, if any, virtues to them: and they may therefore be styled thankless, because they appear to make no grateful return for their creation.

⁶ Dr. Warburton says, that herb of grace is the name the country-people give to rue; and the reason is, because that herb was a principal ingredient in the potion which the Romish priests used to force the possessed to swallow down when they exorcised them. Now, these exorcisms being performed generally on a Sunday, in the church before the whole congregation, is the reason why she says, we may call it herb of grace o' Sundays.—Mr. Steevens believes there is a quibble meant in this passage; rue anciently signifying the same as Ruth, i. e. sorrow. Ophelia gives the queen some, and keeps a proportion of it for herself. There may, however, be somewhat more implied here than is expressed. You, madam, (says Ophelia to the queen,) may call your RUE by its Sunday name, HERB OF GRACE, and so wear it with a difference to distinguish it from mine, which can never be any thing but merely RUE, i. e. sorrow. ⁷ This is part of an old song.

They say, they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in.—

I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir: it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England; if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Horatio reads the letter.

HORATIO, when thou shalt have overlook'd this, give these fellows some means to the king; they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase: Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour; and in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant, they got clear of our ship; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me, like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou would'st fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear, will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore¹ of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine, HAMLET.

Come, I will make you way for these your letters; And do't the speedier, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

Another Room.

Enter King, and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,

And you must put me in your heart for friend;
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears:—But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So crimeful and so capital in nature, [else,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things
You mainly were stirr'd up?

King. O, for two special reasons;
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd,
And yet to me they are strong. The queen, his mother,

Lives almost by his looks; and for myself,
(My virtue, or my plague, be it either which)
She is so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is, the great love the general gender² bear him:
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,

Work, like the spring that turneth wood to stone,
Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost:
A sister driven into desperate terms;
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections:—But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think,

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shook with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more:
I lov'd your father, and we love ourself;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—
How now? what news?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet:
This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! Who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudio; he receiv'd
Of him that brought them. [them]

King. Laertes, you shall hear them:—
Leave us. [Exit Mess.]

HIGH and mighty, you shall know, I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes: when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return. HAMLET.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come
Or is it some abuse, and no such thing? [back?]

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. Naked,—
And, in a postscript here, he says, alone:
Can you advise me? [come;]

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so, Laertes,—

As how should it be so?—how otherwise?—
Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;

So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—

As checking at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it,—I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall:
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe;
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice,
And call it, accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd;
The rather, if you could devise it so,
That I might be the organ.

¹ The bore is the calibre of a gun, or the capacity of the barrel.—The matter (says Hamlet) would carry heavier words. ² i. e. The common race of the people. ³ i. e. If I may praise what has been, but is now to be found no more.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him,
As did that one; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege¹.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very ribband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears,
Than settled age his sables and his weeds,
Importing health, and graveness.—Two months since,

Here was a gentleman of Normandy,—
I have seen myself, and serv'd against, the French,
And they can well on horseback: but this gallant
Had witchcraft in 't; he grew unto his seat;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorp'd and demy-natur'd
With the brave beast: so far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman, was 't?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamond.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch, indeed,
And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you;
And gave you such a masterly report,
For art and exercise in your defence²,
And for your rapier most especial,
That he cried out, 'Twould be a sight indeed,
If one could match you: the scrimers³ of their nation,

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them: Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy,
That he could nothing do, but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.
Now out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think, you did not love your father;
But that I know, love is begun by time⁴;
And that I see, in passages of proof⁵,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love

A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it;
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a pleurisy,
Dies in his own too much: That we would do,
5 We should do when we would; for this would changes,

And hath abatements and delays as many,
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this should is like a spendthrift sigh⁶
10 That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer:
Hamlet comes back; What would you undertake,
To shew yourself your father's son in deed
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i' the church. [tuarize;

15 King. No place, indeed, should murder sanc-
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber?
Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
20 And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine,
together,

And wager o'er your heads: he, being remiss⁷,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
25 Will not peruse the foils; so that, with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated⁸, and, in a pass of practice⁹,
Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do 't:
30 And, for the purpose, I'll anoint my sword.

I bought an unction of a mountebank,
So mortal, that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
35 Under the moon, can save the thing from death,
That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point
With this contagion; that, if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;
40 Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means,
May fit us to our shape¹⁰: If this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,

'Twere better not assay'd; therefore, this project
45 Should have a back, or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof¹¹. Soft;—let me see:—
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings,—
I ha't:

When in your motion you are hot and dry,
50 (As make your bouts more violent to that end)
And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar'd him
A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd tuck,

³ The fencers. ⁴ Dr. Johnson says, this is obscure; and adds, "The meaning may be, Love is not innate in us, and co-essential to our nature, but begins at a certain time from some external cause, and, being always subject to the operations of time, suffers change and diminution." ⁵ i. e. in transactions of daily experience.

Our purpose may hold there. But stay, what noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen?

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow:—Your sister's drown'd, La-

Laer. Drown'd! O, where? [ertes.

Queen. There is a willow grows ascaunt¹ the brook,
That shews his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
Therewith fantastic garlands did she make,
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead-men's fingers call them:
There on the pendant boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke;
When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spreadwide;
And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up:
Which time, she chaunted snatches of old tunes;
As one incapable of her own distress,

Or like a creature native and indu'd
Unto that element: but long it could not be,
'Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas, then, is she drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: But yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,
The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord!
I have a speech of fire; that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it. [Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude:

How much I had to do to calm his rage!

Now fear I, this will give it start again;

Therefore, let's follow. [Exeunt.

A C T V.

SCENE I.

A Church-yard.

Enter two Clowns, with spades, &c.

1 Clown. IS she to be bury'd in christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clown. I tell thee, she is; therefore, make her grave straight²: the crowner hath sat on her,
and finds it christian burial.

1 Clown. How can that be, unless she drown'd herself in her own defence?

2 Clown. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clown. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: If I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches³; it is, to act, to do, and to perform:—
Argal, she drown'd herself wittingly.

2 Clown. Nay, but hear you, Goodman delver.

1 Clown. Give me leave. Here lies the water;
good: Here stands the man; good: If the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that: But if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: Argal, he, that is not guilty-of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2 Clown. But is this law?

1 Clown. Ay, marry is't; crowner's-quest law.

2 Clown. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been bury'd out of christian burial.

1 Clown. Why, there thou say'st: And the more pity, that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even christian⁴. Come; my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clown. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clown. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clown. Why, he had none.

1 Clown. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture?—The Scripture says, Adam digg'd: Could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answer'st me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clown. Go to.

1 Clown. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clown. The gallows-maker: for that frame out-lives a thousand tenants.

1 Clown. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well: But how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: Now thou dost ill, to say, the gallows is built stronger than the church:
Argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again; come.

2 Clown. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clown. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke⁵.

2 Clown. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clown. To't.

2 Clown. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.

1 Clown. Cudgel thy brains no more about it;
for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beat-

¹ i. e. aside, sideways. ² i. e. make her grave immediately. ³ Ridicule on scholastic divisions without distinction; and of distinctions without difference. ⁴ This is an old English expression for fellow-christians. ⁵ i. e. When you have done that, I'll trouble you no more with these riddles.

⁶ The phrase is taken from husbandry.

ing; and, when you are ask'd this question next, say, a grave-maker; the houses that he makes, last 'till doomsday. Go, get thee to Youghan, and fetch me a stoop of liquor. [Exit 2 Clown.]

He digs, and sings¹,

*In youth when I did love, did love,
Methought, it was very sweet,
To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove,
O, methought there was nothing meet.*

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business? he sings at grave-making.

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

Clown sings.

*But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me into the land,
As if I had never been such.*

[Throws up a scull.]

Ham. That scull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: How the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier, which could say, 'Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?' This might be my lord such-a-one, that prais'd my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so: and now my lady worm's²; chapless, and knock'd about the mazzard with a sexton's spade: Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see 't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats³ with them? mine ache to think on 't.

Clown sings.

*A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade,
For—and a shrowding sheet:
O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.*

Ham. There's another: Why may not that be the scull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits⁴ now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce⁵ with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in 's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance⁶ in that. I will speak to this fellow: Whose grave's this, sirrah?

Clown. Mine, sir.—

*O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.*

Ham. I think it be thine indeed; for thou ly'st in 't.

Clown. You lie out on 't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in 't, yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in 't, to be in 't, and say it is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou ly'st.

Clown. 'Tis a quick lye, sir; 'twill away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

Clown. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

Clown. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in 't?

Clown. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card⁷, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have

Johnson says, this is a play, in which pins are set up to be beaten down with a bowl. We have been informed, however, that the reverse is true; that the bowl is the mark, and the pins are pitched at it; and that the game is well known in the neighbourhood of Norwich.—Mr. Steevens observes, that "this is a game played in several parts of England even at this time.—A stake is fixed into the ground; those who play, throw loggats at it; and he that is nearest the stake, wins:—I have seen it played in different counties at their sheep-shearing feasts, where the winner was entitled to a black fleece, which he afterwards presented to the farmer's maid to spin for the purpose of making a petticoat, and on condition that she knelt down on the fleece to be kissed by all the rustics present."

⁴ i. e. subtilties. ⁵ i. e. the head. ⁶ A quibble is intended.—Deeds, which are usually written on parchment, are called the common assurances of the kingdom. ⁷ The card is the paper on which the different points of the compass were described.—To do any thing by the card, is, to do it with nice observation.

taken note of it; the age is grown so picked¹, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

Clown. Of all the days i' the year, I came to't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

Clown. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was that very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

Clown. Why, because he was mad: He shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

Clown. 'Twill not be seen in him there; there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

Clown. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

Clown. 'Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

Clown. Why, here in Denmark; I have been sexton here, man, and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

Clown. 'Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pocky corses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

Clown. Why, sir, his hide is so tann'd with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a scull now has lain you i' the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

Clown. A whoreson mad fellow's it was; Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Clown. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! he pour'd a flaggon of Rhenish on my head once. This same scull, sir, was Yorick's scull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

Clown. E'en that.

Ham. Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorr'd in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kiss'd I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs?

your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that.—Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander look'd o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. It were to consider too curiously to consider so.

Ham. No, 'faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: As thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam: And why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperial Cæsar, dead, and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw²! But soft! but soft! aside:—Here comes the king; Enter King, Queen, Laertes, the corpse of Ophelia, with Lords and Priests attending.

The queen, the courtiers: Who is this they follow? And with such maimed rites³! This doth betoken, The corse, they follow, did with desperate hand Fordo⁴ its own life. 'Twas of some estate⁵: Couch we a while, and mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes,

A very noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd As we have warranty: Her death was doubtful; And, but that great command o'ersways the order, She should in ground unsanctify'd have lodg'd 'Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, [her: Shards, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants⁶, Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home Of bell and burial⁷.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

Priest. No more be done;

We should profane the service of the dead, To sing a requiem⁸, and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls.

¹ So smart, so sharp, says Hanmer, very properly; but there was, Dr. Johnson thinks, about that time, a picked shoe, that is, a shoe with a long pointed toe, in fashion, to which the allusion seems likewise to be made. Every man now is smart; and every man now is a man of fashion.

² Winter's blast.

³ i. e. imperfect obsequies.

⁴ To fordo, is to undo, to destroy.

⁵ i. e. some person

of high rank.

⁶ Crants is the German word for garlands, and it was probably retained by us from the Saxons. To carry garlands before the bier of a maiden, and to hang them over her grave, is still the practice in rural parishes.

⁷ Burial, here, signifies interment in consecrated ground.

⁸ A Requiem is a mass performed in Popish churches for the rest of the soul of a person deceased.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth;—
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring!—I tell thee, churlish priest,
A ministering angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!

Queen. Sweets to the sweet: Farewell!

[Scattering flowers.]

I hop'd, thou should'st have been my Hamlet's wife;
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O, treble woe

Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
Depriv'd thee of!—Hold off the earth a while,
'Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:

[Laertes leaps into the grave.]

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead;
'Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To over-top old Pelion, or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [advancing.] What is he, whose grief
Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wand'ring stars, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I,

[Hamlet leaps into the grave.]

Hamlet the Dane.

Laer. The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with him.]

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I pr'ythee take thy fingers from my throat;
For though I am not splenetic and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous,
Which let thy wisdom fear: Hold off thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen,—

Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them.]

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme,

Until my eye-lids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers
Could not with all their quantity of love
Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. Shew me what thou'lt do:

Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't fast? woo't tear thyself?

Woo't drink up Esil¹? eat a crocodile?

I'll do't.—Dost thou come here to whine?

To out-face me with leaping in her grave?

Be buried quick with her, and so will I:

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us; 'till our ground,

15 Singeing his pate against the burning zone,

Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,

I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness:

And thus a while the fit will work on him:

20 Anon, as patient as the female dove,

When that her golden couplets are disclos'd²,

His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir;

What is the reason that you use me thus?

25 I lov'd you ever: But it is no matter;

Let Hercules himself do what he may,

The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.

[Exit.]

King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him.—

[Exit Hor.]

Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;

[To Laertes.]

We'll put the matter to the present push.—

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.—

35 This grave shall have a living monument:

An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;

'Till then, in patience our proceeding be. [Exeunt.]

S C E N E II.

A Hall in the Palace.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir; now shall you see the other;—

¹ Mr. Theobald comments on this passage thus: "This word has through all the editions been distinguished by Italic characters, as if it were the proper name of some river; and so, I dare say, all the editors have from time to time understood it to be. But then this must be some river in Denmark; and there is none there so called; nor is there any near it in name, that I know of, but Yssel, from which the province of Overijssel derives its title in the German Flanders. Besides, Hamlet is not proposing any impossibilities to Laertes, as the drinking up a river would be; but he rather seems to mean, wilt thou resolve to do things the most shocking and distasteful to human nature? and, behold, I am as resolute. The poet wrote: Wilt drink up Eisel! eat a crocodile? i. e. wilt thou swallow down large draughts of vinegar? The proposition, indeed, is not very grand; but the doing it might be as distasteful and unsavoury, as eating the flesh of a crocodile."—On this comment Mr. Steevens remarks as follows: "Hamlet certainly meant (for he says he will rant) to dare Laertes to attempt any thing, however difficult or unnatural; and might safely promise to follow the example his antagonist was to set, in draining the channel of a river, or trying his teeth on an animal whose scales are supposed to be impenetrable. Had Shakspeare meant to make Hamlet say—Wilt thou drink vinegar? he probably would not have used the term drink up; which means totally to exhaust; neither is that challenge very magnificent, which only provokes an adversary to hazard a fit of the heart-burn or the cholic. The commentator's Yssel would serve Hamlet's turn or mine. In an old Latin account of Denmark and the neighbouring provinces I find the names of several rivers little differing from Esil, or Elsill, in spelling or pronunciation. Such are the Essa, the Æsil, and some others." ² Mr. Steevens says, to disclose was anciently used for to hatch. To exclude is the technical term at present.—During three days after the pigeon has hatched her couplets, (for she lays no more than two eggs,) she never quits her nest, except for a few moments in quest of a little food for herself; as all her young require in that early state, is to be kept warm, an office which she never entrusts to the male.

You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,

That would not let me sleep; methought, I lay
Worse than the mutines in the bilboes¹. Rashly,
And prais'd be rashness for it—Let us know,
Our indiscretion sometime serves us well,
When our deep plots do fail: and that should teach us,

There's a divinity that shapes our ends;
Rough-hew them how we will².

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,
My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark
Grop'd I to find out them: had my desire;
Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again: making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio,
A royal knavery; an exact command,—
Larded with many several sorts of reasons,
Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,
With, ho! such bugs³ and goblins in my life,—
That, on the supervise, no leisure bated⁴,
No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission; read it at more leisure—

But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?

Hor. Ay, 'beseech you. [lainies,

Ham. 'Being thus benetted round with vil-
Ere I could make a prologue to my brains,
They had begun the play;—I sat me down;

Devis'd a new commission; wrote it fair:

I once did hold it, as our statist⁵ do,
A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much
How to forget that learning; but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service⁷: Wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,—
As England was his faithful tributary; [rish,
As love between them like the palm might flou-
As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,
And stand a comma⁸ 'tween their amities;
And many such-like as's of great charge,—
That on the view and knowing of these contents,
Without debatement further, more, or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant;
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal:
Folded the writ up in form of the other; [safely;
Subscrib'd it; gave 't the impression; plac'd it
The changeling⁹ never known: Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight; and what to this was sequent
Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment;

They are not near my conscience; their defeat
Doth by their own insinuation¹⁰ grow:

'Tis dangerous, when the baser nature comes
Between the pass and fell incensed points

Of mighty opposites.

¹ Mutines, the French word for seditious or disobedient fellows in an army or fleet: Bilboes, the ship's prison.—Mr. Steevens adds, that "the bilboes is a bar of iron with fetters annexed to it, by which mutinous or disorderly sailors were anciently linked together. The word is derived from Bilboa, a place in Spain where instruments of steel were fabricated in the utmost perfection. To understand Shakspeare's allusion completely, it should be known, that as these fetters connect the legs of the offenders very close together, their attempts to rest must be as fruitless as those of Hamlet, in whose mind there was a kind of fighting that would not let him sleep. Every motion of one must disturb his partner in confinement." ² Dr. Johnson comments on this passage thus: Hamlet, delivering an account of his escape, begins with saying, That he rashly—and then is carried into a reflection upon the weakness of human wisdom. I rashly—prais'd be rashness for it—Let us not think these events casual; but let us know, that is, take notice and remember, that we sometimes succeed by indiscretion, when we fail by deep plots, and infer the perpetual superintendence and agency of the Divinity. The observation is just, and will be allowed by every human being who shall reflect on the course of his own life." ³ A bug was no less a terrific being than a goblin. We call it at present a bugbear. ⁴ Bated, for allowed.—To abate signifies to deduct; this deduction, when applied to the person in whose favour it is made, is called an allowance: Hence our author takes the liberty of using bated for allowed. ⁵ Dr. Johnson explains the following lines thus: "Hamlet is telling how luckily every thing fell out; he groped out their commission in the dark without waking them; he found himself doomed to immediate destruction. Something was to be done for his preservation. An expedient occurred, not produced by the comparison of one method with another, or by a regular deduction of consequences, but before he could make a prologue to his brains, they had begun the play: Before he could summon his faculties, and propose to himself what should be done, a complete scheme of action presented itself to him: His mind operated before he had excited it." ⁶ A statist is a statesman. ⁷ i. e. did me eminent service. ⁸ Dr. Johnson explains this expression thus: "The comma is the note of connection and continuity of sentences; the period is the note of abruption and disjunction. Shakspeare had it perhaps in his mind to write, That unless England complied with the mandate, war should put a period to their amity; he altered his mode of diction, and thought that, in an opposite sense, he might put, that Peace should stand a comma between their amities."—This (he adds) is not an easy style; but is it not the style of Shakspeare?" ⁹ A changeling is a child which the fairies are supposed to leave in the room of that which they steal. ¹⁰ Insinuation, for corruptly obtruding themselves into his service.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon?

He that hath kill'd my king, and whor'd my mother in between the election and my hopes; Thrown out his angle for my proper life, [science, And with such cozenage; is't not perfect con- To quit¹ him with this arm; and is't not to be damn'd,

To let this canker of our nature come In further evil? [England,

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine; And a man's life's no more than to say, one. But I am very sorry, good Horatio, That to Laertes I forgot myself; For, by the image of my cause, I see The portraiture of his: I'll count his favours²: But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace; who comes here?

Enter Osrick.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this water-fly³?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious: for 'tis a vice to know him: He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'Tis a chough⁴; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit: Put your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks, it is very sultry and hot; or my complexion—

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,—as 'twere,—I cannot tell how.—My lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter,—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[Hamlet moves him to put on his hat.

Osr. Nay, good my lord; for my ease, in good faith.—Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes: believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences⁵, of very soft society, and great shewing: Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry⁶; for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see⁷.

Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you;—though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy the arithmetic of memory; and yet but raw neither, in respect of his quick sail⁸. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and, who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve¹⁰ me:—Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is.

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed¹¹ he's unfellow'd.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wager'd with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has impon'd¹²,

¹ i. e. to requite him; to pay him his due. ² Or, I will make account of them, i. e. reckon upon them, value them.

as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew, you must be edified by the margin¹, ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more germane² to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides: I would, it might be hangers 'till then. But, on: Six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that's the French bett against the Danish: Why is this impon'd, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath lay'd, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath lay'd on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: If it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought: the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. [Exit.]

Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well, to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head³.

Ham. He did compliment with his dag, before he suck'd it. Thus has he (and many more of the same breed, that, I know, the drossy age dotes on) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions⁴; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out⁵.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osrick, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes, they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all, are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment⁶ to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.]

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds⁷. But thou would'st not think, how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving⁸, as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: Since no man knows aught of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes⁹? Let be.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osrick, and Attendants with foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of Laertes into that of Hamlet.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have done you wrong;

But pardon it, as you are a gentleman. [heard.]
This presence knows, and you must needs have

¹ Dr. Warburton very properly observes, that in the old books the gloss or comment was usually printed on the margin of the leaf.

² More a-kin.

³ The meaning, Mr. Steevens believes, is—This is a forward fellow.

⁴ The meaning is, "These men have got the cant of the day, a superficial readiness of slight and cursory conversation, a kind of frothy collection of fashionable prattle, which yet carries them through the most select and approved judgements. This airy facility of talk sometimes imposes upon wise men."

⁵ i. e. These men of show, without solidity, are like bubbles raised from soap and water, which dance, and glitter, and please the eye, but if you extend them, by blowing hard, separate into a mist: so if you oblige these specious talkers to extend their compass of conversation, they at once discover the tenuity of their intellects.

⁶ i. e. mild and temperate conversation.

⁷ Hamlet means to say, I shall succeed with the advantage which I am allowed, I shall make more than nine hits for Laertes' twelve.

⁸ Gain-giving is the same as mis-giving.

⁹ Dr. Johnson comments on this passage thus: "Since no man knows aught of the state of life which he leaves, since he cannot judge what other years may produce, why should he be afraid of leaving life betimes? Why should he dread an early death, of which he cannot tell whether it is an exclusion of happiness, or an interception of calamity? I despise the superstition of augury and omens, which has no ground in reason or piety; my comfort is, that I cannot fall but by the direction of Providence."

How I am punish'd with a sore distraction.
 What I have done,
 That might your nature, honour, and exception,
 Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.
 Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet;
 If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,
 And, when he's not himself, does wrong Laertes,
 Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.
 Who does it then? His madness: If't be so,
 Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd;
 His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.
 Sir, in this audience,
 Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil
 Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
 That I have shot my arrow o'er the house,
 And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfy'd in nature,
 Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most
 To my revenge: but in my terms of honour
 I stand aloof; and will no reconciliation,
 'Till by some elder masters, of known honour,
 I have a voice and precedent of peace,
 To keep my name ungor'd: but, 'till that time,
 I do receive your offer'd love like love,
 And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
 And will this brother's wager frankly play.—
 Give us the foils; come on.

Laer. Come, one for me. [rance

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine igno-
 Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night,
 Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand. [Cousin Hamlet,

King. Give them the foils, young Osrick.—
 You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;

Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it; I have seen you both:—
 But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well: these foils have all a length? [They prepare to play.

Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups¹ of wine upon that table:—

If Hamlet give the first, or second hit,
 Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
 Let all the battlements their ord'nance fire;
 The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;
 And in the cup an union² shall he throw,
 Richer than that which four successive kings
 In Denmark's crown have worn: Give me the
 And let the kettle to the trumpet speak, [cups;
 The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
 The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,
 Now the King drinks to Hamlet.—Come, begin;
 And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord.

[They play.

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgement.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well,—again,—

King. Stay, give me drink: Hamlet, this pearl³ is thine;

Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound, shot goes off.

Ham. I'll play this bout first, set it by a while.
 [They play.

Come, another hit; What say you?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.—

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows:

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord;—I pray you, pardon me.

King. It is the poison'd cup; it is too late. [Aside.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by-and-by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think't.

Laer. And yet it is almost against my conscience.
 [Aside.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: You do
 but dally;

I pray you, pass with your best violence;
 I am afraid, you make a wanton⁴ of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on.

[Play.

Osr. Nothing neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

[Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and Hamlet wounds
 Laertes.

King. Part them, they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come again.

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho!

[The Queen falls.

Hor. They bleed on both sides:—How is it,
 my lord?

Osr. How is't, Laertes?

[Osrick;

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe,
 I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet!—

The drink, the drink;—I am poison'd—

[The Queen dies.

Ham. O villainy!—Ho! let the door be lock'd:
 Treachery! seek it out.

[slain;

Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art
 No medicine in the world can do thee good,
 In thee there is not half an hour's life;
 The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,

² An union is the finest sort of pearl, and has its place in all crowns and coronets.

³ Under pretence of throwing a pearl into the cup, the king may be supposed to drop some poisonous drug into the wine. Hamlet seems to suspect this, when he afterwards discovers the effects of the poison, and tauntingly asks him,—Is the union here?

⁴ A wanton was a man feeble and effeminate.

Unbated, and envenom'd: the foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,
Never to rise again: Thy mother's poison'd;
I can no more;—the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point envenom'd too!—

Then, venom, to thy work. [Stabs the King.]

All. Treason! treason!

King. O, yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murd'rous, damned
Dane,

Drink off this potion:—Is the union here?

Follow my mother. [King dies.]

Laer. He is justly serv'd;

It is a poison temper'd by himself.—

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:

Mine and my father's death come not upon thee;

Nor thine on me! [Dies.]

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio:—Wretched queen, adieu!

You that look pale and tremble at this chance,

That are but mutes or audience to this act,

Had I but time, (as this fell serjeant, Death,

Is strict in his arrest) O, I could tell you,—

But let it be:—Horatio, I am dead;

Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright

To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it;

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,

Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man,—

Give me the cup; let go; by heaven, I'll have it.

O God!—Horatio, what a wounded name,

Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me?

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,

Absent thee from felicity a while,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,

To tell my story.—

[March afar off, and shout within.]

What warlike noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To the ambassadors of England gives

This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;

The potent poison quite o'er-grows my spirit;

I cannot live to hear the news from England:

But I do prophesy, the election lights

On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;

So tell him, with the occurrents¹, more or less,

Which have solicited²,—The rest is silence.

[Dies.]

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart:—Good night, sweet prince;

And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!—

Why does the drum come hither?

[Enter Fortinbras, the English Embassadors, and others.]

For. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it, you would see?

5 If aught of woe, or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc!—O proud
death!

What feast is toward in thine infernal cell,

That thou so many princes, at a shot,

10 So bloodily hast struck?

Emb. The sight is dismal;

And our affairs from England come too late:

The ears are senseless, that should give us hearing,

To tell him, his commandment is fulfill'd,

15 That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his³ mouth,

Had it the ability of life to thank you;

He never gave commandment for their death.

20 But since, so jump upon this bloody question,

You from the Polack wars, and you from England

Are here arriv'd; give order, that these bodies

High on a stage be placed to the view;

And let me speak, to the yet unknowing world,

25 How these things came about: So shall you hear

Of cruel, bloody, and unnatural acts;

Of accidental judgements, casual slaughters;

Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd cause;

And, in this upshot, purposes mistook

30 Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,

And call the noblest to the audience.

For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;

35 I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,

Which now to claim, my vantage doth invite me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,

And from his mouth whose voice will draw on
more:

40 But let this same be presently perform'd,

Even while men's minds are wild; lest more mischance

On plots, and errors, happen.

Fort. Let four captains

45 Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;

For he was likely, had he been put on,

To have prov'd most royally: and, for his passage,

The soldiers' music, and the rites of war,

Speak loudly for him.—

50 Take up the bodies:—Such a sight as this

Becomes the field, but here shews much amiss.

Go, bid the soldiers shoot.

[Exeunt: after which, a peal of ordnance is shot off.]

SCENE, for the first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, in Cyprus.

A C T I.

SCENE I.

VENICE.

A Street.

Enter Roderigo, and Iago.

Rod. NEVER tell me:—I take it much unkindly,

That thou, Iago,—who hast had my purse,
As if the strings were thine,—should'st know of this.

Iago. But you'll not hear me:

If ever I did dream of such a matter, abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me, thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me if I do not. Three great ones
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Oft capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place:
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,

Evades them, with a bombast circumstance,
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;
And, in conclusion,
Non-suits my mediators; for, certes², says he,
5 I have already chosen my officer.

And what was he?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife³;

10 That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish theoric⁴,
Wherein the toged consuls⁵ can propose

As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice,
15 Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had the election:

And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof,
At Rhodes, at Cyprus; and on other grounds
Christian and heathen, must be be-lee'd and calm'd⁶;

20 He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,

¹ The story is taken from Cynthio's Novels. ² i. e. certainly, in truth. Obsolete. ³ On these lines Dr. Johnson observes, "This is one of the passages which must for the present be resigned to corruption and obscurity. I have nothing that I can, with any approach to confidence, propose." —Mr. Tyrwhitt ingeniously proposes to read, "damn'd in a fair life;" and is of opinion, that "Shakspeare alludes to the judgement denounced in the Gospel against those of whom all men speak well." He adds, that "the character of Cassio is certainly such, as would be very likely to draw upon him all the peril of this denunciation, literally understood. Well-bred, easy, sociable, good-natured; with abilities enough to make him agreeable and useful, but not sufficient to excite the envy of his equals, or to alarm the jealousy of his superiors. It may be observed too, that Shakspeare has thought it proper to make Iago, in several other passages, bear his testimony to the amiable qualities of his rival."

⁴ Theoric, for theory.

⁵ Consuls, for counsellors.

⁶ It was anciently the practice to reckon up sums with counters.

And I, sir, (bless the mark¹) his Moor-ship's ancient. [hangman.]

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his Iago. But there's no remedy; 'tis the curse of service;

Preferment goes by letter², and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge your-Whether I in any just term am affin'd [self,
To love the Moor³.

Rod. I would not follow him then.

Iago. O, sir, content you;

I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender, and, when he's old,
cashier'd;

Whip me such honest knaves⁴: Others there are,
Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves;
And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,
Do well thrive by them, and, when they have
lin'd their coats, [soul;

Do themselves homage: these fellows have some
And such a one I do profess myself.

For, sir,

It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune⁵ does the thick-lips
If he can carry 't thus! [owe,

Iago. Call up her father,
Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets; incense her kinsmen,
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on 't,
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house; I'll call aloud.

Iago. Do; with light timorous accent, and dire yell,

As when, by night and negligence, the fire

Is spy'd in populous cities.

Rod. What ho! Brabantio! signior Brabantio, ho! [thieves!

Iago. Awake! what, ho! Brabantio! thieves!

5 Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!

Brabantio, above, at a window.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible sum-
What is the matter there? [mons?

10 Rod. Signior, is all your family within?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd?

Bra. Why? wherefore ask you this?

Iago. Sir, you are robb'd; for shame, put on your gown;

15 Your heart is burst⁶, you have lost half your soul;
Even now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise;
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you:
20 Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Bra. Not I; What are you?

25 Rod. My name is—Roderigo.

Bra. The worse welcome:

I have charg'd thee, not to haunt about my doors:
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,
My daughter is not for thee: and now, in madness,
30 Being full of supper, and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery, dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—

Bra. But thou must needs be sure,

35 My spirit, and my place, have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir. [Venice;

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is
My house is not a grange⁷.

40 Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. Sir, you are one of those, that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, you think we are ruffians.
45 You'll have your daughter cover'd with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews⁸ neigh to you: you'll have coursers for cousins, and gennets⁹ for Germans.

Bra. What profane¹⁰ wretch art thou?

50 Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two¹¹ backs.

¹ It has been observed, that the Scots, when they compare person to person, use this exclamation.

² i. e. by recommendation from powerful friends. ³ The meaning is, Do I stand within any such terms of propinquity or relation to the Moor, as that it is my duty to love him? ⁴ Knave is here used for servant, but with a mixture of sly contempt. ⁵ Full fortune may mean a complete piece of good fortune. ⁶ To owe is in ancient language, to own, to possess. ⁷ i. e. broken. ⁸ That is, "You are in a populous city, not in a lone house, where a robbery might easily be committed."

⁹ Grange is strictly and properly the farm of a monastery, where the religious reposed their corn. But in Lincolnshire, and in other northern counties, they call every lone house, or farm which stands solitary, a grange. ¹⁰ Nephew, in this instance, has the power of the Latin word nepos, and signifies a grandson, or any lineal descendant, however remote. ¹¹ A jennet is a Spanish horse. ¹² That is, what wretch of gross and licentious language? ¹³ This is an ancient proverbial expression in the French language, whence Shakespeare probably borrowed it.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator. [Roderigo.

Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee,

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech you,

If't be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly, I find, it is) that your fair daughter,
At this odd¹ even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported—with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knave of common hire, a gondalier,—
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor:—
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But, if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe,
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter,—if you have not given her leave,—
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
To an extravagant² and wheeling stranger, [self:
Of here and every where: Straight satisfy your—
If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho!
Give me a taper;—call up all my people:—
This accident is not unlike my dream,
Belief of it oppresses me already:—
Light, I say! light!

Iago. Farewell; for I must leave you:
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produc'd (as, if I stay, I shall)
Against the Moor: For, I do know, the state,—
However this may gall him with some check,—
Cannot with safety cast³ him; for he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus' war,
(Which even now stands in act) that, for their souls,
Another of his fathom they have not,
To lead their business: in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must shew out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,
Lead to the Sagittary the rais'd search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.

[Exit.

Enter, below, Brabantio, and Servants.

Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despised⁴ time,
Is nought but bitterness.—Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her? O unhappy girl!—
With the Moor, say'st thou?—Who would be a father?—

How didst thou know 'twas she?—O, thou deceiv'st me

Past thought!—What said she to you?—Get more tapers;

5 Raise all my kindred.—Are they marry'd, think
you?

Rod. Truly, I think, they are.

Bra. O heaven!—how got she out?—O treason of the blood!— [minds

10 Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters'
By what you see them act.—Are there not charms,
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd⁵? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

15 Rod. Yes, sir; I have, indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother.—O, 'would you had had her!—

Some one way, some another.—Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

20 Rod. I think, I can discover him; if you please
To get good guard, and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you lead on. At every house I'll call;

I may command at most:—Get weapons, ho!

25 And raise some special officers of might.—

On, good Roderigo; I'll deserve your pains.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff⁶ o' the conscience
To do no contriv'd murder; I lack iniquity
35 Sometimes to do me service: Nine or ten times
I had thought to have jerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
40 And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour,
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray you, sir,
Are you fast marry'd? for, be sure of this,— 45 That the magnifico⁷ is much belov'd;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential
As double⁸ as the duke's: he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance
The law (with all his might to enforce it on)
50 Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services, which I have done the signiory,
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
(Which, when I know that boasting is an honour, 55 I shall promulgate,) I fetch my life and being

¹ Dr. Johnson observes, that the even of night is midnight, the time when night is divided into even parts.—Mr. Steevens thinks that odd is here ambiguously used, as it signifies strange, uncouth, or unwonted; and as it is opposed to even; but acknowledges that the expression is very harsh. ² Extravagant is here used in the signification of wandering. ³ That is, dismiss him; reject him.

⁴ Despised time, is time of no value. ⁵ i. e. by which the faculties of a young virgin may be infatuated, and made subject to illusions and to false imaginations. ⁶ Stuff of the conscience, is substance, or essence, of the conscience. ⁷ The chief men of Venice are, by a peculiar name, called Magnifici, i. e. magnificoes. ⁸ Double has here its natural sense.—The president of every deliberative assembly has a double voice. For example: the lord mayor in the court of aldermen has a double voice.

From men of royal siege¹; and my demerits²
May speak, unbonneted³, to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: For know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused⁴ free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yonder?

Enter Cassio, with others.

Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends;
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I: I must be found;
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Oth. These servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The goodness of the night upon you, friends!
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general;
And he requires your haste, post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine;
It is a business of some heat: the galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels;
And many of the consuls⁵, rais'd, and met,
Are at the duke's already: You have been hotly call'd for;

When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests⁶,
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you.

I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Exit.]

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a landcarrack⁷;

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Cas. To who?

Re-enter Othello.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you⁸.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, with Officers.

Iago. It is Brabantio;—general, be advis'd⁹;
He comes to bad intent.

Oth. Hola! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him, thief!

[They draw on both sides.]

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.—

Good signior, you shall more command with years,
Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief! where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

10 Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her:

For I'll refer me to all things of sense,

If she in chains of magic were not bound,

Whether a maid—so tender, fair, and happy,

So opposite to marriage, that she shunn'd

15 The wealthy curled¹⁰ darlings of our nation,—

Would ever have, to incur a general mock,

Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom

Of such a thing as thou; to fear¹¹, not to delight.

Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense.

20 That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms;

Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs, or minerals,

That weaken motion¹²:—I'll have it disputed on;

'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.

I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,

25 For an abuser of the world, a practiser

Of arts inhibited and out of warrant;—

Lay hold upon him; if he do resist,

Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,

30 Both you of my inclining, and the rest:

Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it

Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go

To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison; 'till fit time

35 Of law, and course of direct session,

Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?

How may the duke be therewith satisfied;

Whose messengers are here about my side,

40 Upon some present business of the state,

To bring me to him?

Offi. 'Tis true, most worthy signior,

The duke's in council; and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for,

45 Bra. How! the duke in council!

In this time of the night!—Bring him away;

Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,

Or any of my brothers of the state,

Cannot but feel this wrong, as 'twere their own:

50 For if such actions may have passage free,

Bond-slaves, and pagans, shall our statesmen be.

[Exeunt.]

¹ i. e. men who have sat upon royal thrones.

² i. e. without taking the cap off.

³ i. e. free from domestic cares: a thought natural to an adventurer.

⁴ Consuls seems to have been commonly used for counsellors; as before in this play.

⁵ Quests are searches.

⁶ A carrack is a ship of great bulk, and commonly of great value; perhaps what we now call a galleon.

⁷ This expression denotes readiness.

⁸ i. e. be cautious; be discreet.

⁹ i. e. to terrify.

¹⁰ Curled, is elegantly and ostentatiously dressed.

¹¹ i. e. to terrify.

¹² Theobald proposes, and we think justly, to read, "That weaken notion, instead of motion; i. e. that weaken her apprehension, right conception and idea of things, understanding, judgement, &c."—Hammer would read, perhaps with equal probability, "That waken motion:" and it is to be observed, that motion, in a subsequent scene of this play, is used in the very sense in which Hammer would employ it: "But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts,"

S C E N E III.

A Council-chamber.Duke and Senators, sitting.

Duke. There is no composition¹ in these news, 5
That gives them credit.

1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd;
My letters say, a hundred-and-seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred-and-forty.

2 Sen. And mine, two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,
(As in these cases where they aim² reports,
'Tis oft with difference) yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgement; 15
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Sailor [within.] What ho! what ho! what ho!

Enter an Officer, with a Sailor.

Offi. A messenger from the galleys.

Duke. Now? the business?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;
So was I bid report here to the state,
By signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1 Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason; 'tis a pageant,
To keep us in false gaze: When we consider
The importance of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let ourselves again but understand,
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question³ bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace⁴,
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dressed in:—if we make thought of this,

We must not think the Turk is so unskilful,
To leave that latest, which concerns him first;
Neglecting an attempt of ease, and gain,
To wake, and wage⁵, a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Offi. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious, 45
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injoined them with an after-fleet.

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought:—How many, as you guess?

Mes. Of thirty sail: and now they do re-stem 50
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance

Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty, recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus.—
Marcus Lucchesé, is not he in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us; wish him, post, post-haste: dispatch. [Moor.]

Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant
Enter Brabantio, Othello, Iago, Roderigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you

Against the general enemy Ottoman.—

I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior; [To Brab.]

10 We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours: Good your grace, pardon
me;

Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business, Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care

Take hold on me; for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'er-bearing nature,
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,
And yet is still itself.

20 Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!

Sen. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me;

She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted
25 By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks:
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not—

Duke. Whoe'er he be, that, in this foul proceeding,

30 Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself,
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter,
After your own sense; yea, though our proper son
35 Stood in your action⁶.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.

Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems,
Your special mandate, for the state affairs,
Hath hither brought.

40 All. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this? [To Othello.]

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors, 45
My very noble and approv'd good masters,—

That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
It is most true; true, I have married her;

The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,

50 And little blest with the set phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years pith,
'Till now, some nine moons wasted, they have

Their dearest⁷ action in the tented field; [us'd
And little of this great world can I speak,

55 More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself: Yet, by your gracious patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver

endeavour.

² To aim is to conjecture. ³ i. e. more easy
⁴ i. e. State of defence. To arm was called to brace on the armour. ⁵ To wage here, as in many other places in Shakspeare, signifies to fight, to combat. ⁶ i. e. were the man exposed to your charge or accusation. ⁷ That is, dear for which much is paid, whether money or labours. Dear action, is action performed at great expence, either of ease or safety.

Of my whole course of love ; what drugs, what charms,
What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withal)
I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself; And she,—in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, every thing,—
'To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on?
It is a judgement maim'd, and most imperfect,
'That will confess—perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature ; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
'That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof;
Without more certain and more overt test¹,
Than these thin habits, and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming, do prefer against him.

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak;—
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?
Or came it by request, and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary²,
And let her speak of me before her father :
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office, I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

[Exeunt Two or Three.]

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.— [Exit Iago.]

And, 'till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How did I thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year, the battles, sieges, fortunes,
'That I have pass'd:
I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it.

Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents, by flood and field;
Of hair-breadth 'scapes i' the imminent deadly
Of being taken by the insolent foe, [breach;
5 And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance in my travel's history:
Wherein of antres³ vast, and desarts idle⁴,
Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch
heaven,

10 It was my hint to speak, such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders⁵. These things to hear,

15 Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house affairs would draw her thence;
Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse: Which I observing,
20 Took once a pliant hour; and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentively⁶: I did consent;

25 And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore,—In faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing 30 strange;

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd, she had not heard it; yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;

35 And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint, I spake:
She lov'd me for the dangers I had past;
And I lov'd her, that she did pity them.

40 This only is the witchcraft I have us'd;
Here comes the lady, let her witness it:

[Enter Desdemona, Iago, and Attendants.]

Duke. I think, this tale would win my daughter too.—

45 Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak;
50 If she confess, that she was half the wooer,

¹ i. e. open proofs, external evidence. ² This means the sign of the fictitious creature so called, i. e. an animal compounded of man and horse, and armed with a bow and quiver. ³ i. e. caves, dens. Dr. Warburton remarks, that "Discourses of this nature made the subject of the politest conversations, when voyages into, and discoveries of, the new world were all in vogue. So when the Bastard Faulconbridge, in King John, describes the behaviour of upstart greatness, he makes one of the essential circumstances of it to be this kind of table-talk. The fashion then running altogether in this way, it is no wonder a young lady of quality should be struck with the history of an adventurer." Dr. Johnson adds, that "Whoever ridicules this account of the progress of love, shews his ignorance, not only of history, but of nature and manners. It is no wonder that, in any age, or in any nation, a lady, recluse, timorous, and delicate, should desire to hear of events and scenes which she could never see, and should admire the man who had endured dangers, and performed actions, which, however great, were yet magnified by her timidity." ⁴ i. e. wild, useless, uncultivated. ⁵ Dr. Johnson says, "Of these men there is an account in the interpolated travels of Mandeville, a book of that time." ⁶ Intention and attention were once synonymous.

Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress;
Do you perceive in all this noble company,
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you I am bound for life, and education;
My life, and education, both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty,
I am hitherto your daughter: But here's my husband;

And so much duty as my mother shew'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra. God be with you!—I have done:—
Please it your grace, on to the state affairs;
I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—
Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart
I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself; and lay a sentence,
Which, as a grise¹, or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended,
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes.

The robb'd, that smiles, steals something from the thief;
He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk, of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.
He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears²:
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow,
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words: I never yet did hear, [ear³.
That the bruise'd heart was pierced through the
I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus:—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you: And though we have there a substitute of most allow'd sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safe voice on you: you must therefore be content to slubber⁴ the gloss of your new fortunes, with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thrice-driven⁵ bed of down: I do agnize⁶
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find in hardness; and do undertake
This present war against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife;
Due reverence of place⁷, and exhibition⁸;
With such accommodation, and besort,
As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please,
Be't at her father's.

Bra. I will not have it so.

Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts,
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke;
To my unfolding lend a gracious ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice⁹,
To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him,
My down-right violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world; my heart's subdu'd
Even to the very quality of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind¹⁰;
And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites, for which I love him, are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence: Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords:—I do beseech you, let Her will have a free way.
Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with heat, (the young affects,
In me defunct) and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind¹¹:
And heaven defend¹² your good souls, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant,
For she is with me; No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid seel with wanton dullness,
My speculative and active instruments¹³, seeing the duties of my office, or for the ready performance of them.

That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going: the affair cries—haste,
And speed must answer it; you must hence to-night.

Des. To-night, my lord?

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i' the morning here we'll meet
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
And such things else of quality and respect,
As doth import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty, and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.—

Good night to every one.—And, noble signior, [To Brab.

If virtue no delighted¹ beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor; have a quick eye to see;

She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt Duke and Senators.

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
I pr'ythee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage².—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matter and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

[Exeunt Othello, and Desdemona.

Rod. Iago,—

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, think'st thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it, Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is a torment: and then have we a prescription to die
when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have look'd upon the world for four times seven years: and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea hen³, I would change my humanity with a baboon,

Rod. What should I do? I confess, it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue? a fig! 'tis in ourselves, that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens; to the which, our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme; supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many; either have it sterile with idleness, or manur'd with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: But we have reason, to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this, that you call—love, to be a sect⁴ or scyon.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: Drown thyself? drown cats, and blind puppies. I have profess'd me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness;
I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse: follow thou these wars; de-feat⁵ thy favour with an usurped beard: I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor, —put money in thy purse;—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration⁶;—put but money in thy purse.—These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money: the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts⁷, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice.—
She must have change, she must: therefore put money in thy purse.—If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning.
Make all the money thou canst: If sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring Barbarian and a super-subtle Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her;
therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hang'd in compassing thy joy, than to be drown'd and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me;—Go, make money:
—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: My cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason: Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, and me a sport.

¹ Delighted, for delighting, or delightful.—Shakspeare often uses the active and passive participles indiscriminately.

² i. e. fairest opportunity.

³ A Guinea-hen was anciently the cant term for a prostitute.

⁴ A sect is what the more modern gardeners call a cutting.

⁵ To defeat,

is to undo, to change.

⁶ The poet probably here uses sequestration for sequel.—Sequestration, however, may mean no more than separation.

⁷ The fruit of the locust-tree is a long black pod, which contains the reeds, among which there is a very sweet luscious juice, of much the same consistency as fresh honey.

There are many events in the womb of time, which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet i' the morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod. I am chang'd. I'll go sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell; put money enough in your purse. [Exit Roderigo.]

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse:

For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,

If I should time expend with such a snipe,

But for my sport, and profit. I hate the Moor;

And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets

He has done my office: I know not, if 't be true; But I for mere suspicion in that kind, Will do, as if for surety. He holds me well; The better shall my purpose work on him.

5 Cassio's a proper man: Let me see now; To get his place, and to plume up my will, A double knavery,—How? how!—Let me see:—

After some time, to abuse Othello's ear,

That he is too familiar with his wife:—

10 He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,

To be suspected; fram'd to make women false.

The Moor is of a free and open nature,

That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so;

And will as tenderly be led by the nose,

15 As asses are.

I have 't;—it is engender'd: Hell and night

Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light. [Exit.]

A C T II.

SCENE I.

The Capital of Cyprus.

A Platform.

Enter Montano, and two Gentlemen.

Mont. WHAT from the cape can you discern at sea? [flood;

1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,

Descry a sail. [land;

Mont. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:

If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,

What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,

Can hold the mortice? What shall we hear of this?

2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:

For do but stand upon the foaming shore,

The chiding billow seems to pelt the clouds;

The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous

Seems to cast water on the burning bear, [main,

And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole¹:

I never did like molestation view

On the enchafed flood.

Mont. If that the Turkish fleet

Be not inshelter'd, and embay'd, they are drown'd;

It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lords! our wars are done:

The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,

That their designment halts: A noble ship of Venice

Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance

On most part of their fleet.

Mont. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in,

30 A Veronese²: Michael Cassio,

Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,

Is come on shore; the Moor himself's at sea,

And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mont. I am glad on 't; 'tis a worthy governor.

35 3 Gent. But this same Cassio,—though he speak of comfort,

Touching the Turkish loss,—yet he looks sadly,

And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.

40 Mont. Pray heaven he be;

For I have serv'd him, and the man commands

Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!

As well to see the vessel that's come in,

As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello;

45 Even 'till we make the main, and the aerial blue,

An indistinct regard.

Gent. Come, let's do so:

For every minute is expectancy

Of more arrivance.

50 Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks to the valiant of this warlike isle,

That so approve the Moor; O, let the heavens

Give him defence against the elements,

For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!

55 Mont. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot

Of very expert and approv'd allowance³;

Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,

Stand in bold cure⁴.

60 [Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

and approv'd allowance, is put for allow'd and approv'd expertness.

² By a Veronese, a ship of Verona is denoted. ³ Expert thinks, is, Therefore, my hopes, not being destroy'd by their own excess, but being reasonable and moderate, are likely to be fulfilled,

Cas. What noise?
Gent. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea
 Stand ranks of people, and they cry—a sail.
Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.
Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy; 5
 Our friends, at least. [Guns heard.]
Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
 And give us truth who 'tis that is arrived.
Gent. I shall. [Exit.]
Mont. But, good lieutenant, is your general 10 wiv'd?
Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid
 That paragon's description, and wild fame;
 One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
 And, in the essential vesture of creation, 15 Does bear all excellency¹. How now? who has put in?
Re-enter Gentleman.
Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.
Cas. He has had most favourable and happy 20
 speed:
 Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
 The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,—
 Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,—
 As having sense of beauty, do omit 25
 Their mortal natures, letting go safely by
 The divine Desdemona.
Mont. What is she? [captain,
Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's
 Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;
 Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
 A se'nnight's speed.—Great Jove, Othello guard,
 And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath;
 That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
 Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
 Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
 And bring all Cyprus comfort!—O, behold,
Enter Desdemona, Iago, Roderigo, and Emilia.
 The riches of the ship is come on shore!—
 Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees: 40
 Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
 Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
 Enwheel thee round!
Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
 What tidings can you tell me of my lord?
Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
 But that he's well, and will be shortly here.
Des. O, but I fear;—How lost you company?
Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
 Parted our fellowship: But, hark! a sail. 50
 [Within.] A sail, a sail! [Guns heard.]
Gent. They give this greeting to the citadel;
 This likewise is a friend.
Cas. See for the news.— [An attendant goes out.
 Good ancient, you are welcome;—Welcome, 55
 mistress. [To Emilia.]
 Let not it gall your patience, good Iago,
 That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding
 That gives me this bold shew of courtesy.
 [Kisses her. 60

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips,
 As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
 You'd have enough.
Des. Alas, she has no speech.
Iago. In faith, too much;
 I find it still, when I have list to sleep;
 Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
 She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
 And chides with thinking.
Emil. You have little cause to say so.
Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors,
 Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,
 Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, 15
 Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.
Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!
Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk;
 You rise to play, and go to bed to work.
Emil. You shall not write my praise.
Iago. No, let me not.
Des. What would'st thou write of me, if thou should praise me?
Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to 't;
 For I am nothing, if not critical².
Des. Come on, assay:—There's one gone to the harbour.
Iago. Ay, madam.
Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile
 The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.—
 Come, how would'st thou praise me?
Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my invention
 Comes from my pate, as bird-lime does from frize,
 It plucks out brains and all: But my muse labours, 35
 And thus she is deliver'd:
 If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit,
 The one's for use, the other useth it.
Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?
Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
 She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.
Des. Worse and worse.
Emil. How, if fair and foolish?
Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;
 For even her folly help'd her to an heir.
Des. These are old fond paradoxes, to make fools laugh i' the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?
Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish thereunto,
 But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.
Des. O heavy ignorance!—thou praisest the worst best. But what praise could'st thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? one, that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?³ 60

¹ That is, She excels the praises of invention, and in real (the author seeming to use essential for real) qualities, with which creation has invested her, bears all excellency.

² That is, ensorious.
³ Dr. Johnson says, To put on the vouch of malice, is to assume a character vouched by the testimony of malice itself.

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;
Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud;
Never lack'd gold, and yet went never gay;
Fled from her wish, and yet said,—now I may; [nigh, 5
She that, being anger'd, her revenge being Bade her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly;
She that in wisdom never was so frail,
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;¹ [mind, 10
She that could think, and ne'er disclose her
See suitors following, and not look behind;
She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,——

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer.²

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!—
Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane³ and liberal⁴ counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: Ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, 25 will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve⁵ thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so, indeed:
if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieu-tenantry, it had been better you had not kiss'd your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well kiss'd! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so indeed.
Yet again your fingers to your lips? 'would, they were clyster-pipes for your sake!— [Trumpet. 35
The Moor,—I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,
To see you here before me. O my soul's joy!
If after every tempest come such calmness,
May the winds blow till they have waken'd death!
And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas,
Olympus high; and duck again as low
As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,
'Twere now to be most happy; for, I fear,
My soul hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid,
But that our loves and comforts should increase, 55
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!—
I cannot speak enough of this content,
It stops me here; it is too much of joy;

And this, and this, the greatest discords be

[Kissing her.

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. O, you are well tun'd now!

But I'll let down the pegs that make this music,
As honest as I am. [Aside.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.—
News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How do our old acquaintance of this isle?—
Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongst them. O mysweet,
I prattle out of fashion⁶, and I dote

In mine own comforts.—I pr'ythee, good Iago,

15 Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers:

Bring thou the master to the citadel;

He is a good one, and his worthiness [mona,
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desde-
Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour.
Come hither. If thou be'st valiant; as (they say) base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard⁷:—First, I must tell thee this,
—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! Why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus⁸, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first lov'd the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies: And will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it.
Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,— again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite,—loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in: Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abus'd, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, 45 sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforc'd position,) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does; a knave very voluble; no farther conscionable, than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? Why, none; why, 50 none: A slippery and subtle knave; a finder out of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: A devilish knave! Besides, the knave is handsome, young; and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds⁹ look after: A pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

yet fully formed.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most bless'd condition¹.

Iago. Bless'd figs' end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been bless'd, she would never have lov'd the Moor: Bless'd pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle in the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand! an index, and obscure prologue² to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embrac'd together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! When these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion: Pish!—But, sir, be you rul'd by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay't upon you: Cassio knows you not; I'll not be far from you: Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline³; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden⁴ in choler; and, haply, with his truncheon may strike at you: Provoke him, that he may: for, even out of that, will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by-and-by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

[Exit.]

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it; That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit: The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not,—Is of a constant, loving, noble nature; And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona A most dear husband. Now I do love her too; Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure, I stand accountant for as great a sin) But partly led to diet my revenge, For that I do suspect the lusty Moor Hath leap'd into my seat: The thought whereof Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards: And nothing can or shall content my soul, 'Till I am even with him, wife for wife;

Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor At least into a jealousy so strong That judgement cannot cure. Which thing to do,— If this poor trash⁵ of Venice, whom I trash⁷ For his quick hunting, stand the putting on, I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip⁸; Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb⁹,— For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too; Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me, For making him egregiously an ass, And practising upon his peace and quiet Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd; Knavery's plain face is never seen, 'till us'd. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

A Street.

Enter Herald, with a proclamation.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arriv'd, importing the mere¹⁰ perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials: So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, 'till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general Othello! [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The Castle.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night:

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do; But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest. Michael, good night: To-morrow, with your earliest,

Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;

[To Desdemona.] That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.—

Good night, [Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.]

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock: Our general cast us¹¹ thus early, for the love of his Desdemona: whom let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton the night with her; and she is sport for Jove.

¹ i. e. qualities, disposition of mind. ² Indexes were formerly prefixed to books. ³ i. e. throwing a slur upon his discipline. ⁴ Sudden, is precipitately violent. ⁵ i. e. whose resentment shall not be so qualified or tempered, as to be well tasted, as not to retain some bitterness. ⁶ A trifling, insignificant fellow may, in some respects, very well be called trash. ⁷ To trash a hound is a term of hunting still used in the North, and perhaps not uncommon in other parts of England. It is, to correct, to rate. ⁸ A phrase from the art of wrestling. ⁹ Rank garb may mean grossly, i. e. without mincing the matter. ¹⁰ Mere in this place signifies entire. ¹¹ That is, appointed us to our stations, according to Dr. Johnson; whereas Mr. Steevens thinks, that cast us only means dismissed us, or got rid of our company.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks, it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet, methinks, right modest.

Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarum to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago; I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup: I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too¹, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels; the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. [Exit Cassio.]

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already, He'll be as full of quarrel and offence

As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Roderigo,

Whom love hath turn'd almost the wrong side outward,

To Desdemona hath to-night carouz'd Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch:

Three lads of Cyprus,—noble swelling spirits, That hold their honours in a wary distance,

The very elements of this warlike isle²,— Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,

And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle.—But here they come:

If consequence do but approve my dream, My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Enter Cassio, Montano, and Gentlemen.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse³ already.

Mont. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, As I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho! [Iago sings.]

And let me the canakin clink, clink;

And let me the canakin clink:

A soldier's a man;

A life's but a span;

Why then, let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys!

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learn'd it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,— Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so exquisite in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be fill'd.

Cas. To the health of our general.

Mont. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!

'King Stephen was a worthy peer',

His breeches cost him but a crown;

He held them six-pence all too dear,

With that he call'd the taylor—⁴lown.

He was a wight of high renown,

And thou art but of low degree:

'Tis pride that pulls the country down,

Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place, that does those things.—Well,—Heaven's above all; and there be souls that must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so I do too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient,

Let's have no more of this: let's to our affairs.—Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk; this is my ancient;—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand:—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and I speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well then: you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.]

Mont. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow, that is gone before;—He is a soldier, fit to stand by Cæsar

And give direction: and do but see his vice;

¹ i. e. slily mixed with water. ² i. e. As quarrelsome as the discordia semina rerum; as quick in opposition as fire and water. ³ A rouse appears to be a quantity of liquor rather too large. ⁴ These stanzas are taken from an old song, which the reader will find in Percy's Relicks of Ancient Poetry.

⁵ i. e. a worthy fellow. ⁶ i. e. sorry fellow, paltry wretch.

'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as the other: 'tis pity of him,
I fear, the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mont. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologue a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle¹.

Mont. It were well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees not; or his good-nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils; Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

Iago. How now, Roderigo?
I pray you, after the lieutenant; go. [Exit Rod.
Mont. And 'tis great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place, as his own second,
With one of an ingraft infirmity²:
It were an honest action to say so
Unto the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well; and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?

[Cry within,—Help! help!

Re-enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mont. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave!—teach me my duty!

I'll beat the knave into a twiggen³ bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

Mont. Nay, good lieutenant; [Staying him.
I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir,

Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mont. Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk?

[They fight.

Iago. Away, I say! go out, and cry—a mutiny.

[Aside to Rod.

[Exit Roderigo.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen,—
Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;—
Help, masters! Here's a goodly watch, indeed!—
Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!

[Bell rings.

The town will rise: Fie, fie, lieutenant! hold;
You will be sham'd for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mont. I bleed still, I am hurt to the death;—
he dies⁴.

Oth. Hold, for your lives.

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,
—gentlemen,—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold, hold! the general speaks to you; hold, for shame! [this?

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth
5 Are we turn'd Turks; and to ourselves do that,
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:
He that stirs next to carve forth his own rage,
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—

10 Silence that dreadful bell, it frights the isle
From her propriety⁵.—What is the matter, masters?—

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

15 Iago. I do not know; friends all but now,
even now,

In quarter⁶ and in terms like bride and groom
Divesting them for bed: and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitted men)

20 Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak

Any beginning to this peevish odds;
And 'would in action glorious I had lost
These legs, that brought me to a part of it!

25 Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;
The gravity and stillness of your youth

30 The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure; What's the matter,
That you unlace⁷ your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion⁸, for the name
Of a night-brawler? Give me answer to it.

35 Mont. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you—While I spare speech, which something now offends me,—

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught,
By me that's said or done amiss this night;
Unless self-charity¹⁰ be sometime a vice:
And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
45 My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
And passion, having my best judgement collied¹¹,
Assays to lead the way: if I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you

Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know 50 How this foul rout began, who set it on;

And he that is approv'd¹² in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war,

Yet wild, the people's hearts brim-full of fear,
55 To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!

¹ i. e. If he have no drink, he'll keep awake while the clock strikes two rounds, or four-and-twenty hours. ² i. e. an infirmity rooted, settled in his constitution. ³ A twiggen bottle is a bottle covered with wicker. ⁴ i. e. he shall die. He may be supposed to say this as he renews the fight. ⁵ i. e.

from her regular and proper state. ⁶ i. e. in their quarters; at their lodging. ⁷ i. e. you have thus forgot yourself. ⁸ i. e. slacken, or loosen, put in danger of dropping; or perhaps strip of its ornaments. ⁹ i. e. throw away and squander a reputation so valuable as yours. ¹⁰ Care of one's self.

¹¹ Othello means, that passion has discoloured his judgement. To colly anciently signified to besmut, to blacken as with coal. The word is still used in the midland counties. ¹² i. e. he that is convicted, by proof, of having been engaged in this offence. 'Tis

'Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began 't?

Mon. If partially affin'd¹, or leagu'd in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near:

I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;

Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.

Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow, crying out for help;
And Cassio following him with determin'd sword,
To execute upon him: Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest, by his clamour, (as it so fell out)

The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot,
Out-ran my purpose; and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath; which, till to-night,
I ne'er might say before: When I came back,
(For this was brief) I found them close together,
At blow, and thrust; even as again they were,
When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report:—

But men are men; the best sometimes forget:
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,—
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,—
Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, receiv'd,
From him that fled, some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio:—Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.—

Enter Desdemona, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up;—
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What is the matter, dear?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting: Come away to bed.

Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon:—
Lead him off.— [To Montano, who is led off.]

Iago, look with care about the town;
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.

Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldiers' life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt. Manent Iago and Cassio.]

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part, sir, of myself, and what remains is bestial.—
My reputation, Iago, my reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man, I had thought you had receiv'd some bodily wound; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: 60
You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: You are but now cast in his mood², a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog, to affright an imperious lion:

sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despis'd, than to deceive so good a commander, with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk?
10 and speak parrot³? and squabble? swagger?
swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil!

15 Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is it possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing
20 distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—
O, that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

25 Iago. Why, but you are now well enough;
How came you thus recover'd?

Cas. It hath pleas'd the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shews me another, to make me frankly despise 30 myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moralist: As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your 35 own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me, I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by-and-by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unblest'd, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think, you 45 think I love you.

Cas. I have well approv'd it, sir.—I drunk!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I tell you what you shall do.
Our general's wife is now the general;—I may 50 say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement, of her parts and graces:—confess yourself freely to her; importune her; she'll help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more than she is requested: This broken joint, between you and her husband, intreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this 60 crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

¹ Affin'd, is bound by proximity of relationship; but here it means related by nearness of office.
² i. e. ejected in his anger. ³ A phrase signifying to act foolishly and childishly.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the morning, I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit Cassio.]

Iago. And what's he then, that says—I play the villain?

When this advice is free¹ I give, and honest,
Probable to thinking, and (indeed) the course
To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy
The inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit; she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements²: And then for her [tism,
To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his bap-
All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,—
His soul is so enfetters'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I then a villain,
To counsel Cassio to this parallel³ course,
Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shews,
As I do now: For, while this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
I'll pour this pestilence⁴ into his ear,—
That she repeals⁵ him for her body's lust;
And, by how much she strives to do him good,

She shall undo her credit with the Moor.

So will I turn her virtue into pitch;

And out of her own goodness make the net
That shall enmesh⁶ them all. How now, Roderigo?

Enter Roderigo.

Rod. I do follow here in the chace, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry.—
My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgell'd; and, I think, the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains: and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return to Venice. [tience!]

Iago. How poor are they, that have not pa-
What wound did ever heal, but by degrees?

15 Thou know'st, we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time.

Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio:

20 Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits, that blossom first, will first be ripe:
Content thyself a while.—By the mass, 'tis morning:

Pleasure, and action, make the hours seem short.—

25 Retire thee; go where thou art billeted:

Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:

Nay, get thee gone.—

[Exit Roderigo.]

Two things are to be done,—

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress;

30 I'll set her on;

Myself, the while, will draw the Moor apart,

And bring him jump when he may Cassio find

Soliciting his wife:—Ay, that's the way;

Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.]

A C T III.

S C E N E I.

Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio, with Musicians.

Cas. MASTERS, play here, I will content your pains, [general.]

Something that's brief; and bid—good-morrow,
[Musick plays, and enter Clown.]

Clown. Why, masters, have your instruments been at Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus?

Mus. How, sir, how?

Clown. Are these, I pray you, call'd wind instruments?

Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clown. O, thereby hangs a tale.

Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clown. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know.—But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your music, that he 45 desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.

Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clown. If you have any music that may not be heard, to 't again: but, as they say, to hear music, 50 the general does not greatly care.

Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clown. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: Go; vanish into air; away.

[Exit Mus.]

55 Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?

Clown. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quilllets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman

¹ i. e. has an appearance of honest openness, of frank good-will.

² Liberal, bountiful, as the elements, out of which all things are produced.

³ i. e. a course level, and even with his design.

⁴ Pestilence, for poison.

⁵ That is, recalls him.

⁶ A metaphor from taking birds in meshes.

that attends the general's wife, be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: Wilt thou do this?

Clown. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her. [Exit Clown.]

Enter Iago.

Cas. Do, good my friend.—In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in for your wife: My suit to her
Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently:
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free. [Exit.]

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry

For your displeasure; but all will soon be well.
The general, and his wife, are talking of it;
And she speaks for you stoutly: The Moor replies,
That he, you hurt, is of great fame in Cyprus,
And great affinity; and that, in wholesome wisdom,
He might not but refuse you: but, he protests, he
loves you;

And needs no other suitor, but his likings,
To take the safest occasion by the front,
To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—
If you think fit, or that it may be done,—
Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in;
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot;
And, by him, do my duties to the state:
That done, I will be walking on the works,
Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't. [see't?]

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf. [husband,]

Emil. Good madam, do; I know it grieves my
As if the case were his.

Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt,
Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again
As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. O, sir, I thank you: You do love my lord, [assur'd,]

10 You have known him long; and be you well
He shall in strangeness stand no farther off
Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady,
That policy may either last so long,
15 Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
That, I being absent, and my place supply'd,
My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here,
20 I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article: my lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame¹, and talk him out of patience;

25 His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry, Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die,
Than give thy cause away.

30 Enter Othello, and Iago, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease,
35 Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.]

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say? [what.]

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not 40 Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it,

That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.

45 Oth. I do believe, 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord?

I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't, you mean?

50 Des. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good my lord,

If I have any grace, or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;

55 For, if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning²,
I have no judgement in an honest face:

I pr'ythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled,
60 That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To suffer with him: Good-love, call him back.

¹ It is said, that the ferocity of beasts, insuperable and irreclaimable by any other means, is subdued by keeping them from sleep. ² Cunning, for design, or purpose, simply.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.
Des. But shall 't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.
Des. Shall 't be to-night at supper?
Oth. No, not to-night.
Des. To-morrow dinner then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home.
 I meet the captains at the citadel. [morn;
Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday 10
 Or Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday morn;
 I pray thee, name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;
 And yet his trespass, in our common reason, (Save that, they say, the wars must make ex- 15
 amples
 Out of their best) is not almost a fault
 To incur a private check: When shall he come?
 Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul,
 What you could ask me, that I should deny,
 Or stand so mammering on¹. What! Michael Cassio, [time,
 That 'came a-wooing with you; and so many a
 When I have spoke of you dispraisingly,
 Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
 To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much,— Oth. Pr'ythee, no more: let him come when he will;
 I will deny thee nothing.
Des. Why, this is not a boon;
 'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
 Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm;
 Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
 To your own person: Nay, when I have a suit,
 Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
 It shall be full of poize² and difficulty,
 And fearful to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing:
 Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,—
 To leave me but a little to myself.
Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell, my lord.
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I will come to thee straight. [teach you;
Des. Emilia, come:—Be it as your fancies
 Whate'er you be, I am obedient. [Exit with Emil.
Oth. Excellent wretch³! Perdition catch my soul,
 But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
 Chaos is come again⁴.
Iago. My noble lord.—
Oth. What dost thou say, Iago? [lady,
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my Know of your love? [ask?
Oth. He did, from first to last: Why dost thou

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
 No further harm.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with it.
Oth. O yes; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed;—Discern'st thou aught in that?
 Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my lord?
Oth. Honest! ay, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Oth. What dost thou think?
Iago. Think, my lord? [me,
Oth. Think, my lord;—By heaven, he echoes
 As if there were some monster in his thought,
 Too hideous to be shewn.—Thou dost mean something:
 I heard thee say but now,—Thou lik'dst not that,
 When Cassio left my wife; What didst not like?
 And, when I told thee—he was of my counsel
 In my whole course of wooing, thou cry'dst,
Indeed!
 And didst contract and purse thy brow together,
 As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
 Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love me,
 Shew me thy thought.
Iago. My lord, you know I love you.
 30 Oth. I think, thou do'st;
 And,—for I know thou art full of love and honesty, [breath,—
 And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them
 Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more:
 35 For such things, in a false disloyal knave,
 Are tricks of custom; but, in a man that's just,
 They are close delations⁵, working from the heart,
 That passion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Cassio,—
 40 I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.
Oth. I think so too.
Iago. Men should be what they seem;
 Or, those that be not, 'would they might seem none⁶!
 45 Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago. Why then, I think Cassio's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:
 I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
 50 As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of
 The worst of words. [thoughts
Iago. Good my lord, pardon me;
 Though I am bound to every act of duty,
 I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.

¹ To hesitate, to stand in suspense. ² i. e. of weight. ³ The word wretch, in some parts of England, is a term of the softest and fondest tenderness. It expresses the utmost degree of amiableness, joined with an idea, which perhaps all tenderness includes, of feebleness, softness, and want of protection. ⁴ i. e. When I cease to love thee, the world is at an end; i. e. there remains nothing valuable or important. ⁵ i. e. occult and secret accusations, working involuntarily from the heart, which, though resolved to conceal the fault, cannot rule its passion of resentment. ⁶ i. e. would they might no longer seem, or bear the shape of men.

Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and false,—

As where's that palace, whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions
Keep lects, and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful¹?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his
A stranger to thy thoughts. [ear

Iago. I do beseech you,
Though I—perchance, am vicious in my guess²,
(As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses; and, oft, my jealousy Shapes faults that are not) that your wisdom yet,
From one that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance:—
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name, in man and woman, dear
my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something,
nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he, that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thought.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-ey'd monster, which doth mock³
The meat it feeds on: That cuckold lives in bliss,
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er, [loves!
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor, and content, is rich, and rich enough;
But riches, fineless⁴, is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor:—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why? why is this?

Think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt,
Is—once to be resolv'd: Exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsuffolate and blown surmises⁵, Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me
jealous,

To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous;
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: No, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,—
Away at once with love, or jealousy. [reason

Iago. I am glad of this; for now I shall have
To shew the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me:—I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;
Wear your eye—thus, not jealous, nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty⁶, be abus'd; look to 't:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not shew their husbands; their best conscience

Is—not to leave undone, but keep unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And, when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most⁷.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,
To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak⁸,—
He thought, 'twas witchcraft:—But I am much to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.

I hope, you will consider, what is spoke Comes from my love:—But, I do see, you are mov'd;—

¹ The poet's meaning is, "Who has a breast so little apt to form ill opinions of others, but that foul suspicions will sometimes mix with his fairest and most candid thoughts, and erect a court in his mind, to enquire of the offences apprehended?" ² i. e. am apt to put the worst construction on every thing. ³ i. e. loaths that which nourishes and sustains it. This being a miserable state, Iago bids him beware of it. ⁴ i. e. unbounded, endless, unnumbered treasures. ⁵ The allusion is to a bubble. ⁶ Self-bounty, for inherent generosity. ⁷ Dr. Johnson observes, that "this and the following argument of Iago ought to be deeply impressed on every reader. Deceit and falsehood, whatever conveniencies they may for a time promise or produce, are, in the sum of life, obstacles to happiness. Those who profit by the cheat, distrust the deceiver; and the act by which kindness was sought, puts an end to confidence. The same objection may be made with a lower degree of strength against the imprudent generosity of disproportionate marriages. When the first heat of passion is over, it is easily succeeded by suspicion, that the same violence of inclination, which caused one irregularity, may stimulate to another; and those who have shewn, that their passions are too powerful for their prudence, will, with very slight appearances against them, be censured, as not very likely to restrain them by their virtue." ⁸ Close as oak, means, close as the grain of the oak: To seal is an expression taken from falconry.

I am to pray you not to strain my speech
To grosser issues¹, nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success²
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my worthy friend:

My lord, I see you are mov'd.

Oth. No, not much mov'd:—

I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago. Ay, there's the point: As,—to be bold with you,—

Not to affect many proposed matches,
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree;
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends:
Foh! one may smell, in such, a will most rank³,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—
But pardon me; I do not, in position,
Distinctly speak of her: though I may fear,
Her will, recoiling to her better judgement,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And (happily) repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:

If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe: Leave me, Iago.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.]

Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature, doubtless, [folds.]

Sees and knows more, much more, than he un-

Iago. My lord,—I would, I might entreat your honour

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time:
And though it be fit that Cassio have his place,
(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability)
Yet, if you please to hold him off a while,
You shall by that perceive him and his means⁴:
Note, if your lady strain his entertainment⁵
With any strong, or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
(As worthy cause I have, to fear—I am)
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government⁶.

Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.]

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,

And knows all qualities, with a learned⁷ spirit,
Of human dealings: If I do prove her haggard⁸,
Though that her jesses⁹ were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune¹⁰. Haply, for I am black;
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers¹¹ have: Or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years;—yet that's not much;—
She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief

10 Must be—to loath her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love,
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the base:
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death;
Even then this forked plague¹² is fated to us,
When we do quicken. Desdemona comes:

20 Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!—
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello?

Your dinner, and the generous islanders¹³

25 By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame. [well?]

Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Why, that's with watching; 'twill away
again:

30 Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin¹⁴ is too little;

[She drops her handkerchief.]

35 Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exit Des. and Oth.]

Emil. I am glad, I have found this napkin;

40 This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,
(For he conjur'd her, she should ever keep it)
That she reserves it evermore about her,
To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,
45 And give it Iago:
What he'll do with it, heaven knows, not I;
I nothing but to please his phantasy.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now? what do you here alone?

¹ Issues, for conclusions. ² Iago means, "Should you do so, my lord, my words would be attended by such infamous degree of success, as my thoughts do not even aim at." ³ A rank will, is self-will overgrown and exuberant. ⁴ i. e. You shall discover whether he thinks his best means, his most powerful interest, is by the solicitation of your lady. ⁵ i. e. press hard his re-admission to his pay and office.—Entertainment was the military term for admission of soldiers. ⁶ i. e. do not distrust my ability to contain my passion. ⁷ Learned, for experienced. ⁸ A haggard hawk is a wild hawk, a hawk difficult to be reclaim'd.—It appears also, that haggard was a term of reproach sometimes applied to a wanton. ⁹ Jesses are short straps of leather tied about the foot of a hawk, by which she is held on the fist. ¹⁰ Dr. Johnson observes, that the falconers always let fly the hawk against the wind; if she flies with the wind behind her, she seldom returns. If therefore a hawk was for any reason to be dismissed, she was let down the wind, and from that time shifted for herself, and prey'd at fortune. ¹¹ i. e. men of intrigue. ¹² In allusion, according to Dr. Johnson, to a barbed or forked arrow, which, once infixed, cannot be extracted. Or, according to Dr. Percy, the forked plague may mean the cuckold's horns. ¹³ The generous islanders are the islanders of rank, distinction. ¹⁴ i. e. your pocket-handkerchief.

Æmil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you. [mon thing.]
Iago. You have a thing for me?—It is a com-Æmil. Ha!
Iago. To have a foolish wife. [now]
Æmil. O, is that all? what will you give me
 For that same handkerchief?
Iago. What handkerchief?
Æmil. What handkerchief?
 Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
 That which so often you did bid me steal.
Iago. Hast stolen it from her?
Æmil. No; but she let it drop by negligence;
 And, to the advantage, I, being here, took it up.¹
 Look, here it is.
Iago. A good wench; give it me.
Æmil. What will you do with it, that you have been so earnest
 To have me filch it?
Iago. Why, what is that to you? [Snatching it.]
Æmil. If it be not for some purpose of import,
 Give it me again: Poor lady! she'll run mad,
 When she shall lack it.
Iago. Be not you known on't; I have use for it.
 Go, leave me. [Exit Æmil.]
 I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
 And let him find it: Trifles, light as air,
 Are, to the jealous, confirmations strong
 As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
 The Moor already changes with my poison:—
 Dangerous conceits are, in their natures, poisons,
 Which, at the first, are scarce found to distaste;
 But, with a little act upon the blood,
 Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:—
Enter Othello.
 Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor mandragora²,
 Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
 Shall ever med'cine thee to that sweet sleep
 Which thou ow'dst³ yesterday.
Oth. Ha! ha! false to me? to me?
Iago. Why, how now, general? no more of that.
Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack:—
 I swear, 'tis better to be much abus'd,
 Than but to know 't a little.
Iago. How now, my lord?
Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust?
 I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
 I slept the next night well, was free, and merry;
 I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
 He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen,
 Let him not know it, and he's not robb'd at all.
Iago. I am sorry to hear this.
Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
 Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
 So I had nothing known: O now, for ever,
 Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
 Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
 That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!

Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
 The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
 The royal banner; and all quality,
 Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
 And O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
 The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
 Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!
Iago. Is it possible?—My lord,—
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore;
 Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof;
 [Catching hold on him.]
 Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
 Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
 Than answer my wak'd wrath.
Iago. Is it come to this?
Oth. Make me to see it; or (at the least) so prove it,
 That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop,
 To hang a doubt on: or, woe upon thy life!
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,
 Never pray more: abandon all remorse;
 On horror's head horrors accumulate;
 Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd;
 For nothing canst thou to damnation add,
 Greater than that.
Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me!
 Are you a man? have you a soul, or sense?—
 God be wi' you; take mine office.—O wretched
 fool,
 That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice!—
 O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O
 To be direct and honest, is not safe.— [world,
 I thank you for this profit: and, from hence,
 I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence,
Oth. Nay, stay:—Thou should'st be honest.
Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
 And loses that it works for.
Oth. By the world,
 I think my wife be honest, and think she is not;
 I think that thou art just, and think thou art not;
 I'll have some proof: Her name, that was as fresh
 As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black
 As mine own face.—If there be cords, or knives,
 Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
 I'll not endure it.—Would, I were satisfied!
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion;
 I do repent me, that I put it to you.
 You would be satisfied?
Oth. Would? nay, I will. [lord?
Iago. And may; But, how? how satisfied, my
 Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on?
 Behold her tupp'd?
Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
 To bring 'em to that prospect: Damn them then,
 If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster,
 More than their own! What then? how then?
 What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?
 It is impossible, you should see this,

Were they as prime ¹ as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation, and strong circumstances,—
Which lead directly to the door of truth,—
Will give you satisfaction, you might have it.

Oth. Give me a living ² reason that she's dis-

Iago. I do not like the office: [loyal.

But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,— Prick'd to it by foolish honesty, and love,—
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul,
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs;
One of this kind is Cassio:

In sleep I heard him say,—Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!

And then, sir, would he gripe, and wring my hand;
Cry,—O sweet creature! and then kiss me hard,
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
That grew upon my lips: then lay his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh, and kiss; and then
Cry,—Cursed fate! that gave thee to the Moor!

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion ³;
'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs,
That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise; yet we see nothing
done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,—
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift.

Iago. I know not that: but such a handkerchief
(I am sure, it was your wife's) did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,—

Iago. If it be that, or any, if 'twas hers,
It speaks against her, with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives;
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge!
Now do I see 'tis true.—Look here, Iago;
All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven:
'Tis gone.—

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
Yield up, O love, thy crown, and hearted throne ⁴,
To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught ⁵,
For 'tis for aspicks' tongues!

Iago. Pray, be content.

Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood! [change.

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind, perhaps, may

Oth. Never, Iago: Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on

To the Propontic, and the Hellespont;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
'Till that a capable ⁶ and wide revenge
Swallow them up.—Now, by yon marble heaven,
In the due reverence of a sacred vow [He kneels.
I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet.— [Iago kneels.

Witness, you ever-burning lights above!

10 You elements that clip us round about!

Witness, that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me remorse,

15 What bloody work soever ⁷.

Oth. I greet thy love, [teous,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bound—
And will upon the instant put thee to 't:

Within these three days let me hear thee say,
20 That Cassio's not alive. [quest:

Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done at your re-
But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!
Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw,

25 To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

Another Apartment in the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where lieutenant Cassio lies?

35 Clown. I dare not say, he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?

Clown. He's a soldier; and for me to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to; Where lodges he?

40 Clown. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clown. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say—he lies here, or 45 he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you enquire him out? and be edify'd by report?

Clown. I will catechize the world for him;
that is, make questions, and make them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him,
I have mov'd my lord in his behalf, and hope, all will be well,

Clown. To do this is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing of it.

[Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief,
Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

¹ Prime is prompt, from the Celtic or British prim. ² Living for speaking, manifest. ³ Conclusion, for fact. ⁴ Hearted throne, is the heart on which thou wast enthroned. ⁵ i. e. swell, because the draught is of poison. ⁶ i. e. ample; capacious. ⁷ Mr. Tollet explains this passage thus: "Let him command any bloody business, and to obey shall be in me an act of pity and compassion for wrong'd Othello.—Remorse frequently signifies pity, mercy, compassion, or a tenderness of heart, unattended with the stings of a guilty conscience.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of cruzadoes¹: And, but my noble Moor
Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.

Æmil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who, he? I think the sun, where he was born,
Drew all such humours from him.

Æmil. Look, where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, 'till Cassio be Call'd to him.—How is it with you, my lord?

Enter Othello.

Oth. Well, my good lady:—[Aside.] O, hardness to dissemble!—

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand: This hand is moist,
my lady. [sorrow.]

Des. It yet hath felt no age, nor known no

Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heart;—
Hot, hot, and moist: This hand of yours requires

A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, exercise devout;

For here 's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts, of old, gave hands;

But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck? [you.]

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with

Oth. I have a salt and sullen² rheum offends
Lend me thy handkerchief. [me;]

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault: That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give:
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people; she told her, while she kept it,

'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my father
Intirely to her love; but, if she lost it,
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathly, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies: She, dying, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,
To give it her. I did so: and take heed on 't,
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose 't, or give 't away, were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is it possible?

Oth. 'Tis true; there's magic in the web of it:

A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course³ two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work:
The worms were hallow'd, that did breed the silk;
And it was dy'd in mummy, which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is it true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to it well.

Des. Then 'would to heaven, that I had never seen it!

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startingly and⁴ rash?

Oth. Is it lost? is it gone? speak, is it out of the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; But what an if it were?

Oth. Ha!

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch it, let me see it.

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now:

This is a trick to put me from my suit;
I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind misgives.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. A man that, all his time,
Hath founded his good fortunes on your love;
Shar'd dangers with you;—

Oth. The handkerchief.—

Des. In sooth you are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit Othello.]

Æmil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure there's some wonder in this handkerchief:
I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Æmil. 'Tis not a year or two shews us a man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungerly, and, when they are full,
They belch us. Look you! Cassio, and my husband.

Enter Iago, and Cassio.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do 't;
And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio? what's the news
with you?

Cas. Madam, my formersuit: I do beseech you,
That, by your virtuous means, I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the duty of my heart,
Intirely honour; I would not be delayed:
If my offence be of such mortal kind,
That neither service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so must be by benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,

¹ A Portugeze coin (so called from the cross stamped upon it), in value three shillings sterling.
² i. e. a rheum obstinately troublesome. ³ i. e. number'd the sun's courses. ⁴ i. e. vehement, violent.

And shut myself up in some other course,
To fortune's alms¹.

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,
My advocacy is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favour², as in humour, alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best;
And stood within the blank of his displeasure³,
For my free speech! You must awhile be patient:
What I can do, I will; and more I will,
Than for myself I dare; let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Æmil. He went hence but now,
And, certainly, in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon
When it hath blown his ranks into the air;
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother;—And can he be angry?
Something of moment, then: I will go meet him;
There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry. [Exit.]

Des. I pr'ythee, do so.—Something, sure, of state,—

Either from Venice; or some unhatch'd practice⁴,
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,—
Hath puddled his clear spirit: and, in such cases,
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,
Though great ones are their object.

'Tis even so; for let our finger ache,
And it endues our other healthful members
Even to that sense of pain: Nay, we must think,
Men are not gods;

Nor of them look for such observancy
As fits the bridal.—Beshrew me much, Æmilia,
I was (unhandsome warrior⁵ as I am)
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find, I had suborn'd the witness,
And he's indited falsely.

Æmil. Pray heaven, it be state matters, as you think;

And no conception, nor no jealous toy,
Concerning you.

Des. Alas the day! I never gave him cause.

Æmil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster,
Begot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Æmil. Lady, Amen. [about:]

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio, walk here—
If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Æmilia.
Enter Bianca.]

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?

How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?

Indeed, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.
What! keep a week away? seven days and nights?
Eightscore eight hours? and lovers' absent hours,
More tedious than the dial eightscore times?

O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca;
I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd:
But I shall, in a more continue time⁶,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,

[Giving her Desdemona's handkerchief.]

Take me this work out⁷.

Bian. O Cassio, whence came this?

This is some token from a newer friend.

To the felt absence now I feel a cause:

Is it come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman!

Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth, [now,
From whence you have them. You are jealous

That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:
No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it? [ber.]

Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in my chamber. I like the work well; ere it be demanded,

(As like enough it will) I'd have it copy'd:

Take it and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general;
And think it no addition, nor my wish,

To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me.

I pray you, bring me on the way a little;

And say, if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend here: but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good; I must be circumstanc'd⁸.
[Exeunt.]

¹ The meaning, according to Mr. Steevens, is, "I will put on a constrained appearance of being contented, and shut myself up in a different course of life, no longer to depend on my own efforts, but to wait for relief from the accidental hand of charity."—We think, however, it means no more than that he would try what Fortune would do for him in some other course of life. ² In look, in countenance. ³ i. e. within the shot of his anger. ⁴ Some treason that has not taken effect. ⁵ Unhandsome warrior, is unfair assailant. ⁶ i. e. a time less interrupted, time which I can call more my own. ⁷ i. e. "Copy this work in another handkerchief," ⁸ i. e. Your civility is now grown conditional.

A C T IV.

S C E N E I.

An Apartment in the Castle.Enter Othello, and Iago.Iago. WILL you think so?Oth. Think so, Iago?Iago. What,
To kiss in private?Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss.Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed,
An hour, or more, not meaning any harm?Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?¹
It is hypocrisy against the devil:
They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt

heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—Oth. What then?Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord; and, being
She may, I think, bestow 't on any man.Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;
May she give that?Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;
They have it very oft, that have it not:

But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it:—Thou saidst,—O, it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.Iago. Ay, what of that?Oth. That's not so good now.Iago. What if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?Or heard him say,—As knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced² or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab.Oth. Hath he said any thing?Iago. He hath, my lord; but, be you well as—

No more than he'll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said?

[did.]

Iago. Why, that he did,—I know not what he*Oth.* What? what?5 Iago. Lie—Oth. With her?Iago. With her, on her; what you will.10 Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her, when they belie her: Lie with her! that's fulsome. Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief.—To confess, and be hang'd for his labour.
—First, to be hang'd, and then—to confess:—I tremble at it.—Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion, without some instruction.
It is not words, that shake me thus³:—Pish!—
Noses, ears, and lips⁴:—Is it possible?—Confess!
—Handkerchief!—O devil!—

[Falls in a trance.]

Iago. Work on,20 My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,
All guiltless meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord!
My lord, I say!—Othello!—How now, Cassio?Enter Cassio.Cas. What's the matter?Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.Cas. Rub him about the temples.30 Iago. No, forbear:The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth; and, by-and-by,
Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,35 He will recover straight; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.—

[Exit Cassio.]

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?40 Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven:

'Would, you would bear your fortunes like a man.

Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

¹ This observation, Dr. Warburton says, seems strangely abrupt and unoccasioned. We must suppose that Iago had, before they appear in this scene, been applying cases of false comfort to Othello; as that though the parties had been even found in bed together, there might be no harm done; it might be only for the trial of their virtue; as was reported of the Romish saint, Robert D'Arbrissel and his nuns. To this we must suppose Othello here replies; and like a good protestant. For, so the sentiment does but suit the character of the speaker, Shakspeare little heeds how these sentiments are circumstanced. ² Convinc'd, for conquer'd, subdued. ³ Dr. Johnson's comment on this passage is as follows: "There has always prevailed in the world an opinion, that when any great calamity happens at a distance, notice is given of it to the sufferer by some dejection or perturbation of mind, of which he discovers no external cause. This is ascribed to that general communication of one part of the universe with another, which is called sympathy and antipathy; or to the secret monition, instruction, and influence of a superior Being, which superintends the order of nature and of life. Othello says, Nature could not invest herself in such shadowing passion without instruction: It is not words that shake me thus. This passion, which spreads its clouds over me, is the effect of some agency more than the operation of words; it is one of those notices which men have of unseen calamities." ⁴ Othello is imagining to himself the familiarities which he supposes to have passed between Cassio and his wife.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;
Think, every bearded fellow, that's but yok'd,
May draw with you: there's millions now alive,
That nightly lie in those unproper¹ beds, [ter.
Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is bet-
O, 'tis the spight of hell, the fiend's arch-mock, 10
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall
Oth. O, thou art wise; 'tis certain. [be.

Iago. Stand you a while apart:
Confine yourself but in a patient list².
Whilst you were here, ere while, mad with your
grief,

(A passion most unsuited such a man)
Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy³;
Bade him anon return, and here speak with me;
The which he promis'd. Do but encave yourself⁴,
And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns,
That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,—
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife;
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;
Or I shall say, you are all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?
I will be found most cunning in my patience;
But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?
[Othello withdraws.

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife, that, by selling her desires,
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature, 40
That dotes on Cassio,—as 'tis the strumpet's plague,
To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one;
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter:—Here he comes:—

Enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish⁵ jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour,
Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieutenant?

Cas. The worser, that you give me the addition, 50
Whose want even kills me. [on 't.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure
Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power,

[Speaking lower.

How quickly should you speed?

Cas. Alas, poor caitiff!

Oth. Look, how he laughs already! [Aside.

Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, indeed, she loves me.

5 Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.
[Aside.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him

To tell it o'er: Go to; well said, well said. [Aside.

10 Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry her:
Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman⁶? do you triumph? [Aside.

15 Cas. I marry her!—what? a customer⁷? I pr'ythee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so. They laugh, that win. [Aside.

Iago. Why, the cry goes, that you shall marry

20 Cas. Pr'ythee, say true. [her.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scor'd me⁸? Well. [Aside.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

25 Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.
[Aside.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians; and thither comes the bauble; by this hand, she falls thus about my neck;—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: his gesture imports it. [Aside.

35 Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me;
so hales, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!—

Oth. Now he tells, how she pluck'd him to my chamber: O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to. [Aside.

40 Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look, where she comes.

Enter Bianca.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew⁹! marry, a perfum'd one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me? 45

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you!
What did you mean by that same handkerchief, you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the whole work.—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There, give it your hobby-horse: where-soever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

55 Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca? how now?
how now?

¹ Unproper, for common. ² List, or lists, is barriers, bounds.—Keep your temper, says Iago, within the bounds of patience. ³ i. e. trance. ⁴ i. e. hide yourself in a private place. ⁵ Unbookish, for ignorant. ⁶ Othello calls him Roman ironically.—Triumph, which was a Roman ceremony, brought Roman into his thoughts. ⁷ A common woman, one that invites custom. ⁸ To score, says Mr. Steevens, originally meant no more than to cut a notch upon a tally, or to mark out a form by indenting it on any substance; but it was soon figuratively used for setting a brand or mark of disgrace on any one. ⁹ A polecat.—A pole-cat was anciently one of the cant terms for a strumpet.

Oth.

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

[Aside.

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepar'd for.

[Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. I must, she'll rail in the street else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, come; Will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio.

Oth. How shall I murder him, Iago? [vice?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laugh'd at his

Oth. O, Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a killing:—
A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damn'd to-night; for she shall not live: No, my heart is turn'd to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is:—So delicate with her needle!—An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!—

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times:—And then, of so gentle a condition!—

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain: But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes:—Cuckold me!

Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:—I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again:—this night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison; strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases; very good.

Iago. And, for Cassio,—let me be his undertaker: You shall hear more by midnight.

[A trumpet within.

Oth. Excellent good.—What trumpet is that same?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico,

[him.

Come from the duke: and, see, your wife is with

Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.

[Gives him a letter.

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior; Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you: How does lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my lord

An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. 'This fail you not to do, as you will—'

[Reads.

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper. Is there division 'twixt thy lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much To atone them¹, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What, is he angry?

Lod. 'May be, the letter mov'd him; For, as I think, they do command him home, Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Des. My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. Why, sweet Othello?

Oth. Devil:

[Striking her.

Des. I have not deserv'd this.

[niche.

Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice. Though I should swear I saw it: 'Tis very much; Make her amends, she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil!

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears, Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile:— Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you.

[Going.

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:—

I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

[turn?

Oth. Ay; you did wish, that I would make her Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on, And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep; And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,— Very obedient;—Proceed you in your tears.— Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!— I am commanded home:—Get you away; I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,

And will return to Venice;—Hence, avaunt!—

[Exit Desdemona.]

Cassio shall have my place. And,—sir, to-night,
I do entreat that we may sup together.

You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys!¹ [Exit.]

Lod. Is this the noble Moor, whom our full senate

Call—all-in-all sufficient? This the noble nature
Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,
Could neither graze, nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?

Iago. He is that he is; I may not breathe my censure².

What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not,—
I would to heaven, he were.

Lod. What, strike his wife! [knew,

Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; yet 'would I
That stroke would prove the worst.

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me, to speak [him;
What I have seen and known. You shall observe
And his own courses will denote him so,
That I may save my speech: Do but go after,
And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

Another Apartment in the Castle.

Enter Othello, and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I heard

Each syllable, that breath made up between them.

Oth. What, did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?

Emil. Never. [nothing?

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,
Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.
If any wretch hath put this in your head,

Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!

For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy; the purest of their wives
Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither;—go—[Exit Emilia.
She says enough;—yet, she's a simple bawd,
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore,
A closet lock and key of villainous secrets: [do't.
And yet she'll kneel, and pray; I have seen her

Re-enter Emilia, with Desdemona.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes;

Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy's this? [mistress;

Oth. [To Emilia.] Some of your function,
Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;
Cough, or cry—hem, if any body come:

Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, dispatch.

[Exit Emilia.]

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,

But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord;

Your true and loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves [damn'd,

Should fear to seize thee: therefore be double-
Swear—thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it. [hell.

Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as Des. To whom, my lord? With whom? How am I false?

Oth. O Desdemona!—away! away! away!

Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?

Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord?

If, haply, you my father do suspect

An instrument of this your calling back,

Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost him,
Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas'd Heaven

To try me with affliction; had he rain'd

All kind of sores, and shames, on my bare head:

Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips;

Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes;

I should have found in some place of my soul

A drop of patience: but (alas!) to make me

A fixed figure for the time of scorn³

¹ Mr. Malone remarks, that "in this exclamation Shakspeare has shewn great art. Iago, in the first scene in which he endeavours to awaken his suspicion, being urged to give some evident proof of the guilt of Cassio and Desdemona, tells him it were impossible to have ocular demonstration of it, though they should be "as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys."—These words, we may suppose, still ring in the ears of Othello, who, being now fully convinced of his wife's infidelity, rushes out with this emphatic exclamation:—Iago's words were but too true;—now indeed I am convinced that they are as hot as "goats and monkeys." ² i. e. my opinion. ³ Mr. Rowe reads "hand of scorn;" and succeeding editors have followed him.—Mr. Steevens, however, would (though in opposition to so many great authorities in favour of the change) continue to read, with the old copy, "the time of scorn;" and adds, "We call the hour in which we are to die, the hour of death;—the time when we are to be judged, the day of judgement;—the instant when we suffer calamity, the moment of evil: and why may we not distinguish the time which brings contempt along with it, by the title of the time of scorn?"

To point his slow unmoving finger at,—
O! O!

Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:
But there, where I have garner'd¹ up my heart;
Where either I must live, or bear no life;
The fountain from the which my current runs,
Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!
Or keep it as a cistern, for foul toads [there!
To knot and gender in!—turn thy complexion
Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubim;
Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me honest.

Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,
That the sense aches at thee,—'Would, thou hadst ne'er been born!

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,
Made to write whore upon? What committed!
Committed²!—O thou public commoner!
I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty,
Did I but speak thy deed.—What committed!
Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks;
The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
And will not hear it: What committed!—Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong!

Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian:

If to preserve this vessel for my lord,
From any other foul unlawful touch,
Be—not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saved.

Oth. Is it possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy then;

I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,
That married with Othello.—You, mistress,

Enter Emilia.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell; You! you! ay, you!
We have done our course; there's money for your pains;

I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel.
[Exit.

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?—
How do you, madam? how do you, my good

Des. 'Faith, half asleep. [lady?

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord?

Des. With who?

Emil. With my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: Do not talk to me, Emilia;
I cannot weep; nor answer have I none,
But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-night
Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remem-
And call thy husband hither. [ber;—

Emil. Here is a change indeed. [Exit.

Des. 'Tis meet I should be used so, very meet.
How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my great'st abuse?

Enter Iago, with Emilia.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you? [babes,

Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach young
Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks:
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What is the matter, lady? [bet,

Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd
Thrown such despight and heavy terms upon her,
As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her, whore; a beggar, in his drink,
Could not have laid such terms upon his callet³.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep; alas, the day!

Emil. Hath she forsook so many noble matches,
Her father, and her country, and her friends,
To be call'd—whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for it!
How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,
Has not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones! [company?

What should he call her, whore? who keeps her
What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous knave,
Some base notorious⁴ knave, some scurvy fellow:—
O, heaven, that such companions⁵ thou'dst un-
And put in every honest hand a whip, [fold;
To lash the rascal naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door⁶. [was,

Emil. O, fie upon him! some such squire he
That turn'd your wit the seamy side without⁷,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

¹ i. e. treasured up my heart. ² This word in Shakspeare's time, besides its general signification, seems to have been applied particularly to unlawful acts of love. Hence perhaps it is so often repeated by Othello. ³ Callet is a lewd woman. ⁴ Notorious, for gross, not in its proper meaning for known. ⁵ Companions, i. e. fellows. ⁶ i. e. do not clamour so as to be heard beyond the house.

⁷ That is, inside out.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago,

What shall I do to win my lord again?

Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,
I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:—

If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
Either in discourse, or thought, or actual deed;

Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,

Delighted them in any other form;

Or that I do not yet, and ever did,

And ever will,—though he do shake me off

To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly,

Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life,

But never taint my love. I cannot say, where;

It does abhor me, now I speak the word;

To do the act that might the addition earn,

Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour;

The business of the state does him offence,

And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,—

Iago. It is but so, I warrant you. [Trumpets.

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!

And the great messengers of Venice stay:

Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt Desdemona, and Emilia.

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo?

Rod. I do not find, that thou deal'st justly with Iago. What is the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou doff'st me with some device, Iago; and rather (as it seems to me now) keep'st from me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it: Nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist: You have told me—she hath receiv'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: By this hand, I say, it is very scurvy; and begin to find myself fobb'd in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee;

and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appear'd.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appear'd; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgement. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night shew it: If thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and taketh away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be linger'd here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean—removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me to do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlot, and thither will I go to him;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune: if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amaz'd at it, but go along with me; I will shew you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—O, Desdemona!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be return'd forthwith: dismiss your attendant there; look it be done. [Exit.

Des. I will, my lord. [he did.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than

Des. He says, he will return incontinent:

He

He hath commanded me to go to bed,
And bade me to dismiss you.

Æmil. Dismiss me! [lia,

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Æmi—
Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu:
We must not now displease him.

Æmil. I would, you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I; my love doth so approve
him,

That even his stubbornness, his checks, and frowns,— Pr'ythee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them. [the bed.

Æmil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on

Des. All's one:—Good father! how foolish are our minds!—

If I do die before thee, pr'ythee shroud me
In one of those same sheets.

Æmil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid, call'd—Barbara;
She was in love: and he, she lov'd, prov'd mad¹,
And did forsake her: she had a song of willow,
An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,
And she dy'd singing it: That song, to-night,
Will not go from my mind; I have much to do,
But to go hang my head all o' one side,
And sing it like poor Barbara. Pr'ythee, dispatch.

Æmil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here.—

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Æmil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Æmil. I know a lady in Venice, would have walk'd barefoot to Palestine, for a touch of his nether lip. [tree,

Des. ²The poor soul sat singing by a sycamore
Sing all a green willow; [Singing.

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,

Sing willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;

Sing willow, &c. [stones;

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the Lay by these:

Sing willow, &c.

Willow, willow, &c.

Pr'ythee, hie thee; he'll come anon.—

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

2.

Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,— Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is it that knocks?

Æmil. It is the wind.

Des. I call'd my love, false love: but what said he then?

Sing willow, &c. [men. 55

If I court more women, you'll couch with more
So, get thee gone; good night.—Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping?

Æmil. 'Tis neither here nor there. 60

Des. I have heard it said so.—O, these men, these men!—

Dost thou in conscience think,—e I me, Æmilia,
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?

Æmil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?

Æmil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Æmil. Nor I neither, by this heavenly light;
I might do 't as well i' the dark.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world? [price

Æmil. The world is a huge thing: 'Tis a great
For a small vice.

Des. In troth, I think thou would'st not.

Æmil. In troth, I think I should; and undo 't, when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint ring; nor for measures of lawn;
nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition: but, for all the whole world,—Why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for 't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Æmil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and, having the world for your labour,
'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think, there is any such woman.

Æmil. Yes, a dozen; and as many to the vantage³, as

Would store the world they play'd for.

But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults,
If wives do fall: Say, that they slack their duties,
And pour our treasures into foreign laps;

Or else break out in peevish jealousies, [us,

Throwing restraint upon us; or, say, they strike
Or scant our former having⁴ in despight!

Why, we have galls; and, though we have some
grace,

Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know,
Their wives have sense like them; they see, and smell,

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have. What is it that they do,

When they change us for others? Is it sport?

I think it is; And doth affection breed it?

I think it doth; Is 't frailty, that thus errs?

It is so too: And have not we affections?

Desires for sport? and frailty, as men have?

Then, let them use us well: else, let them know,
The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good night, good night: Heaven me such usage⁵ send,

Not to pick bad from bad; but, by bad, mend!

[Exeunt.

A C T V.

S C E N E I.

A Street.Enter Iago, and Roderigo.

Iago. HERE, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home;
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow:

It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here at thy hand; be bold, and take thy sword.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he hath given me satisfying reasons:—
'Tis but a man gone:—forth, my sword; he dies.

[Stands apart.]

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat¹ almost to the sense,

[Cassio,

And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain: Live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold, and jewels, that I bobb'd from him,

As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril.

No,—he must die:—But so, I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he;—Villain, thou dy'st.

[He runs at Cassio, and wounds him.]

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my coat is better than thou think'st;
I will make proof of thine.

[Fight. Cassio wounds Roderigo; Iago cuts Cassio behind in the leg, and exit.]

Rod. O, I am slain!

Cas. I am maim'd for ever;—Help, ho! murder!
murder!

Enter Othello, above.

Oth. The voice of Cassio:—Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am!

Oth. Hark! 'tis even so.

Cas. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth. 'Tis he;—O brave Iago, honest and just,
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong!
Thou teachest me,—Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your fate hies apace: Strumpet, I come:

Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;

Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit Othello.]

Enter Lodovico, and Gratiano, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder!
murder!

[ful.]

Gra. 'Tis some mischance; the cry is very dire—

Cas. O help!

10 Lod. Hark!

Rod. O wretched villain!

Lod. Two or three groans; it is a heavy night:
These may be counterfeits; let's think 't unsafe
To come in to the cry, without more help.

15 Rod. Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death.

Enter Iago, with a light.

Lod. Hark!

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this, that cries out murder?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here; for heaven's sake, help me!

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same, indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here, that cry so grievously?

25 Cas. Iago? O, I am spoil'd, undone by villains!
Give me some help. [this?]

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done

Cas. I think, that one of them is hereabout,

And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!

35 What are you there? come in, and give some help.
[To Lod. and Gra.]

Rod. O, help me here!

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!

[Iago stabs him.]

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!—O!
O, O!

Iago. Kill men i' the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?—

45 How silent is this town!—Ho! murder! murder!
What may you be? are you of good or evil?

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He, sir.

[villains.]

Iago. I cry you mercy; Here's Cassio hurt by

Gra. Cassio!

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

¹ This is a passage much controverted among the editors, who variously propose to read quab (a gudgeon), quail, gnat, and knot.—Dr. Johnson, however, adopts quat, which, he says, in the midland counties is a pimple, that, by rubbing, is made to smart, or is rubbed to sense.—Roderigo, he adds, is called a quat by the same mode of speech, as a low fellow is now termed, in low language, a scab.—To rub to the sense, is to rub to the quick. ² i. e. No passengers? nobody going by?

Iago.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!—
Light, gentlemen; I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that cry'd?

Iago. Who is't that cry'd?

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!
O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio! [suspect

Iago. O notable strumpet!—Cassio, may you
Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No, [to seek you.

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus; I have been

Iago. Lend me a garter: So.—O, for a chair,
To bear him easily hence!

Bian. Alas, he faints:—O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury.

Patience a while, good Cassio.—Come, come;

Lend me a light.—Know we this face, or no?

Alas! my friend, and my dear countryman,

Roderigo? no:—Yes, sure; O heaven! Roderigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?

Gra. Know him? ay.

Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle pardon;
These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!

Gra. Roderigo!

Iago. He, he, 'tis he:—O, that's well said;—
the chair:— [A chair brought in.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence;
I'll fetch the general's surgeon.—For you, mistress,

Save you your labour.—He that lies slain here,
Cassio, [you?

Was my dear friend; What malice was between Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.

Iago. [To Bianca.] What, look you pale?—O, bear him out o' the air.—

[Cassio is borne off.

Stay you, good gentlemen.—Look you pale, mistress?

Do you perceive the gastness of her eye?—
Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon:—

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her;
Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak,

Though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. 'Las, what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark,
By Roderigo, and fellows that are 'scap'd;
He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio!

Iago. This is the fruit of whoring.—Pr'ythee,
Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night:—
What, do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me.

Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet!

Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest,
As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I? foh! fie upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd:—

Come, mistress, you must tell us another tale.—

Emilia, run you to the citadel,
And tell my lord and lady what hath hap'd.—

Will you go on, I pray?—This is the night, [Aside.
That either makes me, or fordoes¹ me quite.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.

A Bed-chamber: Desdemona in bed, asleep. A light burning.

Enter Othello.

Oth. ²It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—

It is the cause.—Yet I'll not shed her blood;
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,

And smooth as monumental alabaster.
[Takes off his sword.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.³
Put out the light, and then—Put out the light!⁴

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,

Should I repent me:—but once put out thy light,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,

I know not where is that Promethean heat,
That can thy light relumine.—When I have pluck'd thy rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither:—I'll smell it on the tree.—

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade

¹ To fordo, as has been before observed, is to undo, to ruin, to destroy. ² Dr. Johnson assigns the following meaning to this soliloquy: "I am here (says Othello in his mind) overwhelmed with horror. What is the reason of this perturbation? Is it want of resolution to do justice? Is it the dread of shedding blood? No; it is not the action that shocks me, but it is the cause, it is the cause, my soul; let me not name it to you, ye chaste stars! it is the cause."—Mr. Steevens adds, that "Othello full of horror at the cruel action which he is about to perpetrate, seems at this instant to be seeking his justification, from representing to himself the cause, i. e. the greatness of the provocation he had received." ³ "This is the second attempt of Othello (continues Mr. Steevens) to justify what he has undertaken. First he says, It is the cause, i. e. his own cause; now he is willing to suppose himself the preventer of succeeding mischief to others." ⁴ Dr. Farmer observes, that "this has been considered as a very difficult line. Fielding makes Betterton and Booth dispute about it with the author himself in the other world. The punctuation recommended by Dr. Warburton (and which we have adopted), gives a spirit to it which I fear (adds he) was not intended. It seems to have been only a play upon words. To put the light out, was a phrase for to kill."

Justice herself to break her sword!—Once more.—
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And love thee after:—Once more, and this the last:

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears: This sorrow's heavenly;
It strikes, where it doth love.—She wakes—

Des. Who's there? Othello?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime,
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight. [that?

Des. Alas, my lord, what may you mean by

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by:

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;

No,—Heaven forefend! I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Then, heaven
Have mercy on me!

Oth. Amen, with all my heart!

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Hum!

Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal then,
When your eyes roll so: Why I should fear, I
know not,

Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel, I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou dy'st.

Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.
Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame:
These are portents; but yet, I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so: What's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so lov'd, and gave thee,
Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul;—
Send for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,
Take heed of perjury; thou art on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently:
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath,
Cannot remove, nor choak, the strong conception
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. O, heaven, have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, Amen.

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did
Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,—
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice¹:
I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;

I never gave it him:—Send for him hither,
And let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath—us'd thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;

Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't².

Des. O, my fear interprets then,—What, is he dead? [revenge

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great
Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow, let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour.

Oth. Being done,

There is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late. [He smothers her.

Æmilia within.

My lord, my lord! what ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead? not yet quite dead?

I, that am cruel, am yet merciful;

I would not have thee linger in thy pain.—

So, so.

Æmil. What ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Æmil. O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you. [dead.

Oth. Yes;—'tis Æmilia:—by-and-by.—She's
'Tis like, she comes to speak of Cassio's death;

The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?

Still as the grave.—Shall she come in? Were't good!

I think, she stirs again:—No.—What's the best?

If she come in, she'll sure come to my wife:—

My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife:

O insupportable! O heavy hour!

Methinks, it should be now a huge eclipse

Of sun and moon; and that the affrighted globe
Should yawn at alteration.

Æmil. I do beseech you I may speak with you,
O, good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Æmilia:

Soft, by-and-by:—Let me the curtains draw.—

¹ The meaning is, (says Dr. Johnson,—who adds, that this dreadful scene is not to be endured,) “Thou hast harden'd my heart, and makest me kill thee with the rage of a murderer, when I thought to have sacrificed thee to justice with the calmness of a priest striking a victim.” ² i. e. has taken measures.

Where art thou?—What's the matter with thee
now? [Unlocks the door.]

Enter Emilia.

Emil. O, my good lord, yonder's foul murder

Oth. What? now? [done. 5]

Emil. But now, my lord.

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;

She comes more near the earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad. [netian,

Emil. Cassio, my lord, hath kill'd a young Venetian,
Call'd—Roderigo. 10

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd!—

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd. [tune,

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then murder's out of
And sweet revenge grows harsh. 15

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas! what cry is that?

Oth. That! what? [voice:—

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's Help! help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again! 20

Sweet Desdemona! O sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O, who hath done
This deed?

Des. No body; I myself; farewell:

Commend me to my kind lord; O, farewell. [Dies. 25

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who knows?

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I. 30

Emil. She said so; I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burning hell;

'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil!

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.¹

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say

That she was false; O, she was heavenly true! 40

Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband else:

O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,

But that I did proceed upon just grounds

To this extremity: Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true,

If heaven would make me such another world

Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,

I'd not have sold her for it. 50

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first;
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iteration, woman?

I say, thy husband.

Emil. O mistress, villainy hath made mocks with love!²

My husband say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman;

I say, thy husband; Do'st understand the word?

My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul

Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart;

She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst:

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,

Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm,

As I have to be hurt.³ O gull! O dolt!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—

I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,

Tho' I lost twenty lives:—Help! help, ho! help!

The Moor hath kill'd my mistress! Murder!
murder! 25

Enter Montano, Gratiano, Iago, and others.

Mon. What is the matter?—How now, general?

Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done
well,

That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter? 35

Emil. Disprove this, villain, if thou be'st a man:

He says, thou told'st him that his wife was false;

I know, thou did'st not, thou'rt not such a villain;

Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more Than what he found himself was apt and true. 40

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;

Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie:— 45

She false with Cassio!—Did you say, with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress; Go to, charm your tongue.⁴

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak; 50

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.

¹ Mr. Steevens is of opinion, "that some theatrical direction has been omitted; and that when Othello says, Not dead? not yet quite dead? I, that am cruel, am yet merciful; I would not have thee linger in thy pain:—So, so—he then stabs her, repeating the two last words, as he repeats the blow. After a repetition of wounds, Desdemona might speak again, with propriety, and yet very soon expire. The first resolution of Othello was to poison her; but from this measure he is dissuaded by the policy of Iago. He is next determined to use the poniard; but, his tenderness awaking, he cannot bear to deform those beauties which he had so often approached with other sensations and for different purposes. Therefore, says he,—I'll not shed her blood, nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow, and smooth as monumental alabaster: And this resolution we are to imagine he would have kept, but that he was averse to employing those means again, which had already appeared to be uncertain in their effect."

² As water, that will support no weight, nor keep any impression. ³ Villainy has taken advantage to play upon the weakness of a violent passion. ⁴ She means to say, I have in this cause power to endure more than thou hast power to inflict. ⁵ i. e. Apply some power, strong as a charm would be, to your tongue; for, nothing less can stop its volubility.

All. O heavens forefend!

Æmil. And your reports have set the murder on.

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters; it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Æmil. Villainy, villainy, villainy!—

I think upon't,—I think,—I smell't;—O villainy!

I thought so then;—I'll kill myself for grief.—

O villainy, villainy!

Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home. [speak;

Æmil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to

'Tis proper I obey him, but not now:—

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Othello looking on his wife. 15

Æmil. Nay, lay thee down, and roar;

For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,

That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O, she was foul!—

[Rising.

I scarce did know you, uncle: There lies your niece, 20

Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:

I know, this act shews horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead;

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief

Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,

This sight would make him do a desperate turn;

Yea, curse his better angel from his side,

And fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful: but yet Iago knows,

That she with Cassio hath the act of shame

A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it;

And she did gratify his amorous works

With that recognizance and pledge of love

Which I once gave her; I saw it in his hand;

It was an handkerchief, an antique token

My father gave my mother.

Æmil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Æmil. 'Twill out, 'twill out:—I hold my peace, 30

sir? no,

No, I will speak as lib'ral¹ as the north;

Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,

All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Æmil. I will not. [Iago offers to stab his wife. 40

Gra. Fie!

Your sword upon a woman?

Æmil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief, 50

thou speak'st of,

I found by fortune, and did give my husband;

For often, with a solemn earnestness,

(More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle)

He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore!

Æmil. She give it Cassio! no, alas; I found it, 55

And I did give it my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest. [men:

Æmil. By heaven, I do not; I do not, gentle- 60

O murd'rous coxcomb! what should such a fool
Do with so good a wife?

[Iago stabs his wife, then runs out.

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven [lain!

5 But what serve for the thunder?—Precious vil-

Gra. The woman falls; sure he has kill'd his wife.

Æmil. Ay, ay; O, lay me by my mistress' side!

Gra. He's gone; but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor:

Come, guard the door without; let him not pass,

But kill him rather: I'll after that same villain,

15 For 'tis a damned slave. [Exeunt Mon. and Gra.

Oth. I am not valiant neither,

But every puny whipster gets my sword:—

But why should honour out-live honesty?

Let it go all.

Æmil. What did thy song bode, lady?

Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,

And die in music. Willow, willow, willow.—

Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel Moor:

So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;

25 So speaking as I think, I die,—I die. [Dies.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber,

It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper²;—

Or, here it is:—Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost

30 thee dear;

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with me,

Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter Gratiano.

35 Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon:

A better never did itself sustain

Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day,

That, with this little arm, and this good sword,

40 I have made my way through more impediments

Than twenty times your stop:—But, O vain boast!

Who can controul his fate? 'tis not so now.—

Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd;

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,

45 The very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear;

Man but a rush against Othello's breast,

And he retires;—Where should Othello go?

Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd

50 wench³!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt,

This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,

And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl?

Even like thy chastity.—

55 O cursed, cursed slave!—Whip me, ye devils,

From the possession of this heavenly sight!

Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!—

O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead?

60 Dead? O! O! O!

water.

² Steel is hardened by being put red-hot into very cold

³ Wench originally signified only a young woman.

Enter Lodovico, Cassio brought in; Montano, with Iago, prisoner; and Officers.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello; here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet¹;—but that's a fable.

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[Othello wounds Iago.]

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee live; For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello, that wast once so good, Fall'n in the practice² of a cursed slave, What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:
An honourable murderer, if you will;
For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villainy:

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.
Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil,
Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: What you know, you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What? not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,
Which, as I think, you know not: Here is a letter,

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo;

And here, another: the one of them imports
The death of Cassio to be undertook

By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish, and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,
Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain;
But that, belike, Iago in the interim
Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O the pernicious caitiff!—
How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief
That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber:
And he himself confess'd, but even now,
That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose,
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo's letter,—
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him
Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came
That I was cast: And even but now he spake,
After long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.

[us:]

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with
Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,—

If there be any cunning cruelty,
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It shall be his: You shall close prisoner rest,
'Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state.—Come, bring him away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you go.
I have done the state some service, and they know it;

No more of that:—I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak
Of one, that lov'd not wisely, but too well;
Of one, not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplex'd in the extreme; of one, whose hand,
Like the base Judean³, threw a pearl away Richer than all his tribe; of one, whose subdu'd
eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their med'cinable gum: Set you down this:
And say, besides,—that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus.

[Stabs himself.]

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that is spoke, is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee;—No way but this, [Falling upon Desdemona.]

Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies.]

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no
weapon;

For he was great of heart.

Lod. O Spartan dog⁴,
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea!
Look on the tragic loading of this bed; [To Iago.]
This is thy work: the object poisons sight;—
Let it be hid.—Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you.—To you, lord governor,
Remains the censure⁵ of this hellish villain;
The time, the place, the torture,—O, inforce it!
Myself will straight aboard; and, to the state,
This heavy act with heavy heart relate.

[Exeunt.]
